Le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans a dit que la question a été décidee par les plus hautes cours du pays. S'il en est ainsi, je ne me considère pas comme lié par leurs décisions. Mais, messieurs, j'ai examiné les opinions qui ont été émises dans la Pennsylvanie et partout ailleurs, et dans aucun pays la question constitutionnelle n'a été examinée.

Mr. Rivers,

Je vous demanderai de différer votre décision, parce que je n'ai pas eu le bill sous les yeux, et je ne suis pas préparé à voter en connaissance de cause.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Le bill a été mis à l'ordre spécial du jour pour vendredi dernier. Ce jour-là, on l'a renvoyée à l'ordre du jour d'aujourd'hui, et je ne puis pas consentir à un nouveau délai pour des raisons qui, à mes yeux, ne sont pas valables.

Mr. Rivers,

Très bien. Alors, je voterai contre le bill, si je suis forcé d'agir avant d'être prêt.

Mr. Trudeau,

J'ai lu le bill, mais je ne le comprends pas. Je ne sache pas que j'aie l'entendement plus difficile qu'un autre ; mais j'ai été considérablement étonné à la vue de certaines caractères du bill Il renferme différentes clauses que je désire lire, et dont je demanderai l'explication. (Ici, l'honorable membre lit diverses parties du bill.) Il semble que le bill ait en vue d'exclure la Nouvelle Orléans de toute participation au bénéfice de cette entreprise. Quand j'ai lu le bill pour la première fois, j'ai pensé qu'il avait été conçu et rédigé par quelque personne très ordinaire ; mais de ce que j'ai vu, je suis satisfait d'apprendre qu'il est l'ouvrage d'une personne très habile, qui a jugé à propos de le rendre très obscur.

Ce qui a tout d'abord attiré mon attention, c'est la proposition anti-démocratique de donner au Conseil de la Ville le pouvoir de provoquer des élections populaires tous les soixante jours.

Mr King,

Cette clause a été amendée dans le comité.

Mr Trudeau,

Je n'ai pas vu cela, et si c'est là une doctrine démocratique, alors je déclare que je ne suis pas du même bord; si c'est une doctrine whig, je ne l'en aimerais pas davantage, car un verdict du peuple ne doit pas être traité avec un tel mépris.

Mr. Macmurdo,

La question a été pleinement discutée à la Chambre, et les amendements nécessaires seront ajoutés au fur et à mesure de la discussion. Je n'essaierai pas de répondre aux objections faites par le sénateur, car les amendements seront la meilleure réponse.

Mr. Kenner,

Messieurs, comme aucun des sénateurs de la Nouvelle-Orléans n'a prétendu répondre aux sénateurs de Caddo et d'Est Féliciana, je crois de mon devoir d'exprimer mon opinion sur la question constitutionnelle avant de voter.

Je ne me considère pas comme engagé par les décisions des cours dans l'expression de mon opinion. Il y a une différence très marquée entre la Constitution des Etats Unis et le Congrès, et entre notre Constitution et le corps qui agit en vertu de cette Constitution. Les pouvoirs sont grandement différents dans leur nature et dans leur étendue. Je voterai pour la première section du bill, mais je réserverai mon droit d'insister sur certains amendements avant de voter sur le reste.

Mr. Hodge,

On m'accordera le droit de répondre. Je nie que le plus éminent de nos jurisconsultes, le juge Martin, a décidé sur la différence entre les deux corps. Mais l'honorable sénateur n'a pas abordé la question de savoir si ce sera la loi, ou si on donnera au peuple le pouvoir de faire la loi. L'honorable membre n'a pas répondu à cela. Supposons qu'un citoyen refuse de payer la taxe, faudra-t-il qu'il soit poursuivi et dépouillé de son droit de propriété, en violation de la constitution? Je ne crois pas qu'on ait jamais entendu donner à la Législature un pouvoir suprême, et je ne puis pas donner ma sanction à une mesure qui tendrait à déléguer inconstitutionnellement les pouvoirs immenses dont il est question dans le bill.

Mr. King,

Je dirai un ou deux mots en réponse. Un bill absolument semblable à celui-ci, a passé l'autre jour. Où étaient alors les scrupules de l'honorable membre?

Mr. Wickliffe,

Je trouve neuf votes contre le bill dont vous parlez.

Mr. Evans,

J'ai voté contre.

Mr. King,

La question qui s'élève est trop connue. Il a été décidé dans un grand nombre des Etats de l'Union et par la Cour Suprême, que la Législature a le droit de donner au peuple le pouvoir de se taxer lui-même. Il n'y a pas de question constitutionnelle dans l'espèce.

Mr. Wickliffe,

L'honorable membre parle des décisions des Cours Suprêmes. La question a seulement été décidée par quatre cours, je crois. Cela peut-être suffisant pour notre collègue, mais sommes nous obligés de nous en rapporter aux décisions judiciaires pour nous former une opinion et l'exprimer ici?

Mr Lacey,

Je ne vois pas en quoi ce bill est en opposition avec le texte de la Constitution des Etats-Unis ou avec celle de la Louisiane.

Digitized by Google

La première section est mise aux voix et adoptée.

Sur la seconde section.

Mr. Macmurdo fait une motion tendant à supprimer à la 19me ligne du bill les mots "sur la propriété et les esclaves."

Mr. Palfrey,

J'offre un substitut qui consisterait à supprimer ces mots et insérer à leur place "sur toute espèce de propriété et de profession."

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je n'ai pas d'objection à l'amendement.

Mr. Kenner,

Je demande la suppression seulement des mots "et sur les esclaves." Je ne consentirai jamais à accorder à tout homme qui prend part aux élections municipales, le droit de voter une taxe sur la propriété dans le but de construire des chemins de fer.

Mr Palfrey,

C'est pour la prospérité générale de la Nelle.-Orléans, et si la prospérité s'accroît, toutes les classes de la société s'en ressentiront, et conséquemment toutes doivent être taxées.

Mr. King,

Je consens pleinement à ce que demande le sénateur de Ste. Marie, (Mr. Palfrey.)

Mr. Martel,

Je ne vois pas comment il peut y avoir de l'opposition à l'amendement de Mr. Palfrey. Le railroad sera avantageux même au simple drayman, et alors pourquoi ne serait-il pas taxé comme les autres citoyens ?

Mr. Kenner,

Je demande qu'on insère, au lieu de l'amendement de Mr. Palfrey "sur les propriétés territoriales."

Mr King,

Je demande qu'on dépose le bill sur la table.

Mr. Moore prononce quelques mots en faveur de l'amendement de Mr. Palfrey.

L'amendement de Mr. Kenner est déposé sur la table.

Mr. Hodge,

Je demande qu'on ajoute à l'amendement "occupation, commerce et profession."

Mr. Palfrey,

J'accepte cette addition.

L'amendement ainsi modifié est adopté.

Mr. Moore,

Je demande à ajouter à la fin de la section, ce qui suit :

Il demeure entendu que toute la ligne du chemin de fer dont il s'agit et toutes les propriétés en dépendant seront spécialement affectées et engagées à la garantie du paiement des bons de la ville.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je ne vois pas quel bénéfice la ville doit retirer de ce gage. Il se peut que la Compagnie ait besoin d'engager le chemin pour d'autres motifs.

Mr. Trudeau,

Le bill est-il pour l'avantage de la Nouvelle-Orléans ou pour le bénéfice de la Compagnie? expliquez-vous.

Si le chemin est fait pour le bien de la ville, pourquoi s'opposer aux amendements qui ont pour but de la garantir de toute perte?

Mr. Macmurdo,

Les sénateurs de la Nouvelle-Orléans sont tout aussi capables de défendre ses intérêts que le sénateur de Jefferson.

Mr. Moore,

Je retire mon amendement, faites comme il vous plaira.

Mr. Hodge,

Je reprends l'amendement pour mon compte. Je m'inquiète fort peu de savoir si tel ou tel membre opposé à ma manière de voir est de tel pays ou de tel autre. Je suis ici pour défendre les intérêts de la Louisiane, et je prétends dénoncer toute les mesures de ce genre.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je demande le dépôt de l'amendement sur la table.

Cette motion est rejetée.

Mr Ryan,

Je donnerai les raisons de mon vote sur l'amendement.

Je crois qu'il est de l'intérêt véritable du pays que la Législature pousse à la construction des chemins de fer. Je voterai contre l'amendement, parce que tout cela n'a pour but que d'entraver le bill.

L'amendement et la section sont adoptés.

La troisième section est adoptée avec la suppression du mot "spécial" à la troisième ligne, et avec l'insertion du mot "spécialement" après le mot "taxe" dans la même ligne.

La quatrième section est adoptée.

Sur motion faite d'adopter la cinquième section:

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je propose d'amender au moyen de la suppression des mots : "et aussi souvent que le Conseil le jugera à propos" dans la 32me ligne, et de l'insertion des mots "dans les deux ans de passage du présent acte" ; et encore au moyen de la suppression du mot "deux" et l'insertion du mot "six" à la 33me ligne.

Les deux amendements sont adoptés.

Mr. Trudeau,

Je demande qu'on supprime tout ce qui suit la 27me ligne.

Le dépôt de la motion est ordonné.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je demande à ce que l'élection ait lieu à un jour différent de celui des élections pour les autres chemins de fer.

Adopté.

Mr. Rivers,

Je demande qu'à la septième ligne, après les mots "votants de la ville," on ajoute "qui paieront des taxes."

Déposé.

Mr. Hodge,

Je demande qu'à la 7me ligne on ajoute les mots "et chaque votant aura droit à une voix pour chaque cent piastres qu'il pourra posséder.

Déposé.

Mr. Wickliffe,

Je propose que la Compagnie du Chemin de Fer paie les dépenses nécessitées par les élections.

Déposé.

La section est alors adoptée.

Sur motion d'adopter la 6me section.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je propose d'ajouter, après le mot "compagnie" à la 6me ligne, les mots "après avoir été dûment autorisés par un vote des actionnaires, recueilli conformément aux prescriptions de la charte.

Amendement et section sont adoptés.

Sur motion d'adopter la première section.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je propose après le mot "alors," à la la septième ligne, les mots "en dehors des sept directeurs," et de supprimer à la sixième ligne les mots "citoyens de la Nouvelle-Orléans seront directeurs," et d'insérer après le mot "compagnie," à la septième ligne, les mots "qui seront citoyens de la Nouvelle-Orléans.

Digitized by Google

Adopté.

Mr. Trudeau,

Je propose d'amender de supprimer tout ce qui suit le mot "directeur," à la douzième ligne.

Mr. King,

J'ai un substitut à proposer, qui remplira les vues de l'honorable membre, c'est d'insérer, à la 13me ligne, après le mot "fonds" par les actionnaires.

Mr. Trudeau,

Je n'ai pas d'objection.

L'amendement est adopté.

Mr. King,

Je propose d'ajouter à la fin de la section ce qui suit : "Il est entendu en outre que si une partie des dits bons est payée par la ville ou sur le dividende revenant à la ville, la ville sera actionnaire jusqu'à dûe concurrence, et aura droit de voter à l'élection des directeurs."

La section est adoptée avec l'amendement.

Sur motion d'adopter la huitième section.

Mr. Hodge.

Je propose d'ajouter à la fin de la section les mots suivants : "La ville pourra payer les bons et rester actionnaire si bon lui semble.

L'amendement est adopté, ainsi que les 8me et 9me sections.

Les règles sont suspendus et le bill passe, avec suppression du preambule.

POUR REGLER L'ENREGISTREMENT DES VOTANS DANS LA VILLE DE LA NOUVELLE ORLEANS EN EXECUTION DE L'ART. 11 DE LA CONSTITUTION.

Section 1ère Résolu par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentants, réunis en Assemblée Générale ; Que le Bureau des Aldermen de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, au plus tard, le second lundi de décembre de chaque année, auparavant, nommera trois personnes aptes et sûres, pour chacun des quatre districts qui divisent maintenant la Nouvelle-Orléans Les trois personnes devront être résidentes dans le district pour lequel elles seront élues. La réunion de ces trois personnes se nommera "Bureau pour l'examen de la qualité du votant.

Sec 2. Les bureaux ci-dessus dans chacun des différents districts de la ville, seront immédiatement après leur nomination, tenus de donner avertissement public dans le journal de l'Etat, et dans les autres gazettes importantes de la ville, qu'ils se réuniront, chacun dans leur district respectif, le second lundi de janvier qui suivra leur nomination. dans le but d'examiner la qualité des personnes résidant dans la ville et de décider sur ce point, afin de fixer l'enregistrement de leurs noms comme votans, dans la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, et dans la paroisse, les mêmes bureaux désigneront le lieu et leur reunion respective

Sec. 3. Les différens membres des bureaux à élire comme il est régle par la 1ère section du présent acte, seront, avant d'entrer en fonctions, et après avoir donné l'avertissement public ci-dessus prescrit, tenus de prêter le serment ordonné par l'art 90 de la Constitution; lequel serment sera reçu par un juge ou même un juge de paix de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans; et le serment une fois signé par les membres dudit bureau et contresigné par le juge devant lequel le serment aura été prêté, sera retourné par le Bureau d'Examen, au Bureau des Aldermen de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans.

Sec. 4. Il sera du devoir des différents bureaux, pour l'examen de la qualité des votants, de se réunir au jour et dans le lieu indiqués dans l'avertissement public ; et quand ils seront ainsi réunis, lesdits bureaux, ainsi assermentés, examineront toutes les demandes et réclamations des personnes résidant à la Nouvelle Orléans, et décideront sur leur qualité électorale, et lesdits bureaux tiendront session dans ce but et aussi pour les autres fins ci-après déterminées, depuis dix du matin jusqu'à six heures de relevée du même jour, s'il est nécessaire ; et ils pourront ajourner leur réunions de jour en jour, (le dimanche non compris), jusqu'à ce que l'objet de la réunion ait été rempli.

Sec. 5. Dans le cas où une personne résidant à la Nouvelle-Orléans, réclamera son droit de vote, et requerra l'inscription de son nom sur la liste des votants, s'il arrive que cette personne ne soit pas connue du bureau devant lequel elle comparaît, pour être un légal votant, ou que son droit à être reconnu pour légal votant soit contesté par une personne quelconque, il sera du devoir du dit bureau, par l'entremise de l'un de ses membres, de faire prêter à la personne réclamante et dont le droit serait ainsi contesté, le serment suivant qui sera préparé à cet effet, et envoyé, avec la liste des votants, comme il sera réglé ci-après, à la Première Cour de District de la Nouvelle-Orléans, pour y être conservée avec soin.

"Je, (A. B.) jure et affirme solennellement que je suis citoyen des Etats-Unis, (et s'il est citoyen naturalisé, il constatera dans son serment, le lieu où il a été naturalisé) ; que je suis agé de plus de 21 ans ; que j'ai résidé dans cet Etat douze mois avant l'élection, et les six derniers mois dans la paroisse, et que je suis en ce moment résidant dans la Nouvelle Orléans ; et j'affirme et jure encore solennellement que depuis l'adoption de la présente Constitution, je n'ai, comme étant citoyen de cet Etat, jamais eu de duel à armes mortelles, soit dans l'intérieur de l'Etat, soit en dehors, avec un citoyen de ce Etat, et que je n'ai ni envoyé ni accepté de cartel de ce genre à un citoyen de ces Etats ou de sa part, enfin que je n'ai pas non plus servi de second dans le duel d'un autre, et que je n'ai assisté, aidé ou conseillé personne dans de semblables affaires Dieu me soit en aide."

Sec. 6. S'il arrive qu'une personne ne soit pas naturalisé au temps de sa prétention à être enregistrée comme votant, et que son droit à être naturalisée est acquis, accroissant par la suite, elle se trouve en même de pouvoir être naturalisée dans l'année du jour où le bureau aura commencé à siéger, alors, dans ce cas, le serment prescrit dans la section précédente sera varié conformément aux faits, et sera, une fois reçu, envoyé de la manière et dans les formes prescrites par ladite section qui précède ; étant expliqué cependant que, dans tous les cas où la partie peut faire affidavit, comme il est dit dans cette section, il sera du devoir des commissaires de l'élection, au temps où la partie offrira son vote, de requerir de lui, le serment usuel ordonné par la loi, que doivent prêter les votans dont le droit peut-être contesté.

Sec. 7. Les bureaux respectifs dont il vient d'être parlé, quand ils seront une fois réunis dans le but de décider sur la qualité des votants, comme aussi pour juger les contestations qui pourront s'élever au sujet du droit de tel ou tel, non seulement écoutant les réclamations, dans les formes ci-dessus prescrites, mais aussi ils pourront, par l'un de leurs membres, examiner les témoignages donnés sous serment ; et le réclamant, assermenté comme dessus, ou tout témoin ainsi interrogé, qui le sera reconnu coupable de faux serment, sera soumis aux peines du parjure.

Sec. 8. La ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans devra, au moment de la réunion des bureaux, et avant la clôture de leurs sessions, dresser une liste parfaite et complète des noms de toutes les personnes qui résident dans la ville, et qui auront été reconnues avoir droit de vote par les différents bureaux, ainsi que de tous ceux qui doivent requérir droit de vote dans l'année, ainsi qu'il a été dit dans la section 6 du présent acte, et indiquant le lieu de résidence de ces personnes ; elle devra faire figurer également sur cette liste, l'indication de toutes les personnes dont le droit a été contesté, les motifs de cette contestation, et la décision du bureau avec les motifs sommaires ; et comme cet état de faits servira aux vérifications qui suivront comme on va le dire dans la section ci après, les bureaux devront faire dresser deux copies des dites listes, lesquelles copies, dûment signées et certifiées par les membres des Bureaux, seront envoyées par eux, l'une à l'office du clerc de la Cour de District de la Nouvelle-Orléans, et l'autre au Bureau des Aldermen de la ville, pour être par les clercs de la Cour de District ou ceux du Bureau des Aldermen conservés avec soin dans les archives.

Sec. 9 Si une personne inconnue aux bureaux dont il s'agit, vient à être reconnue comme ayant droit de vote, ou si les qualités d'une personne demandant à être reconnue comme légal votant, viennent à être contestées, et si par suite le nom de cette personne est porté sur la liste des votants ou est rejeté, tout individu qui désirera qu'un enquête soit faite à l'égard de tel ou tel nom, aura le droit, quand bon lui semblera, pourvu que ce soit avant la dissolution du bureau, de la décision duquel il sera fait appel, de provoquer une nouvelle décision devant une cour compétente ; laquelle cour procèdera, aussitôt que possible, et par préférence à l'examen de la décision du bureau, et prononcera sur cette affaire avec toute la diligence possible, en ayant égard aux mérites de la question à elle soumise; et le jugement de la Cour, une fois rendu, quoique sujet à l'appel comme il pourra être déterminé par la loi, le jugement sera la règle qui gouvernera les commissaires en cette matière ; et les listes retournées à la Commission, seront amendées sur ce point conformément à la décision de la Cour.

Sec. 10. Le Bureau des Aldermen de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, sera dans les trois jours après le retour de la liste des votants, tenue de dresser ou faire dresser une liste alphabétique de tous les votants indiqués sur les listes envoyées par les différents bureaux d'examen, au Bureau des Aldermen, avec les notes et remarques des dits bureaux d'examen, accompagnant lesdites listes ; laquelle liste alphabétique devra être conservée par ledit Bureau des Aldermen ; et il sera aussi du devoir de ce bureau de fournir au commissaire de l'élection pour chaque circonscription électorale, aussi souvent qu'il y aura élections, et au moment de l'ouverture des polls, une copie certifiée des listes alphabétiques ci-dessus indiquées, et de plus il sera tenu de déposer une copie certifiée de cette liste alphabétique dans l'office du clerc à qui auront déjà été adressées les listes par les bureaux d'examen, aux termes de la section et du présent acte; et quand le Bureau des Aldermen de la Nouvelle-Orléans aura ainsi déposé dans l'office du clerc cette liste alphabétique, il n'y sera fait aucune addition ou suppression de nom, à moins que ce ne soit par l'ordre d'une Cour, et personne ne sera, pendant l'espace d'une année à compter du premier jour de la session d'examen, admis à voter à une election quelconque, si les commissaires de l'élection ne sont pas satisfaits de l'identité de la personne demandant à voter, et s'ils ne trouvent pas son nom sur la liste alphabétique qui leur aura été adressée comme il a été dit plus haut.

Sec. 11. Si l'un des membres du Bureau des Aldermen de la Nouvelle-Orléans, ou l'une des personnes mentionnées dans cet acte, et qui sont chargées d'accomplir certains devoirs, néglige volontairement ou refuse d'accomplir tout ou partie des devoirs à elles imposées, ou autorise ou permet sciemment qu'il soit fait quelqu'acte en opposition au texte et à l'esprit du présent acte, les membres du dit bureau et toutes autres personnes quelconques mentionnées ci-dessus, encourront pour chaque offense une amende qui ne pourra être moindre de piastres et ne pourra excéder cinq cents piastres ; dont moitié de cette amende sera versée au Trésor de l'Etat, et moitié sera donnée au poursuivant. Le contrevenant sera moitié condamné aux frais de la poursuite, et la partie qui se sera rendu coupable de la contravention, sera aussi condamnée à un emprisonnement de trente jours dans la prison de paroisse.

Sec. 12. Les différents membres du bureau d'examen, recevront pour prix de leurs services, l'indemnité suivante, qui leur sera payée sur le Trésor de la Nouvelle-Orléans.

AUTRE ACTE

POUR REGLER L'ENREGISTREMENT DES NOMS ET DU LIEU DE RESIDENCE DE TOUS LES ELECTEURS QUALIFIES DE LA VILLE DE LA NOUVELLE ORLEANS.

Résolu par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentants de l'Etat de la Louisiane, réunis en Assemblée Générale, ce qui suit :

Section 1. Il y aura un enregistreur dans la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, nommé par les Recorders de la ville, dont les fonctions dureront deux ans, et qui sera chargé de tenir sur un registre destiné à cet usage, la liste des noms et du lieu de résidence de tous les électeurs qualifiés de la Nlle.-Orleans.

Sec. 2 Il y aura dans chaque district représentatif de la Nouvelle-Orléans, un assistant-enregistreur aussi nommé par les Recorders de la ville et pour également deux ans, dont les fonctions seront de dresser annuellement une liste exacte des noms et lieux de résidence de tous les electeurs qualifiées du district représentatif dans lequel il aura été nommé, et de faire parvenir cette liste à l'office de l'enregistreur jours avant l'élection générale.

Lesdits enregistreur et assistant-enregistreur prêteront le serment prescrit par l'art. 90 de la Constitution.

Sec. 3. S'il y avait quelque doute dans l'esprit de l'Assistant-Enregistreur, au sujet de la qualité d'une personne, il pourra lui administrer le serment qui est maintenant administré par les commissaires d'élection en pareil cas.

Sec. 4 Aussitôt que toutes les listes seront parvenues à l'office de l'Enregistreur, celui-ci les fera immédiatement publier dans les journaux officiels de la ville, et si le nom et le lieu de résidence de quelqu'électeur a été omis, il fera remplir la lacune, d'après le témoignage de deux témoins dignes de foi, qui attesteront que ladite personne a droit de vote.

Sec. 5. Dans les dix jours qui précèderont l'élection générale, l'Enregistreur devra fournir une liste exacte et certifiée du nom et lieu de résidence de tous les électeurs ayant qualité telle qu'elle aura été envoyée à son office, aux commissaires des élections dans les différentes circonscriptions électorales, laquelle liste sera considérée jusqu'à preuve du contraire, comme l'évidence du droit des personnes dont les noms y figureront : étant expliqué que toute personne qui aura acquis le droit de vote après la clôture de la liste, aura la faculté de pouvoir voter en faisant un affidavit, tel que le veut la loi actuelle pour les cas semblables.

Sec 6 Si le vote d'une personne demandant à voter vient à être contesté, et que son nom ne figure pas sur la liste fournie par l'Enregistreur, dans ce cas, les commissaires des élections peuvent administrer le serment prescrit par la loi actuelle en pareil cas.

Sec. 7· S'il se présente un cas semblable à celui mentionné dans la 6me section du présent acte, il sera du devoir du clerc de l'élection d'écrire en face du nom de la personne dont le droit est contesté, le mot "asserménté", et de dresser une liste certifiée des noms des personnes ainsi assermentées, et de la remettre à l'avocat public, qui s'en servira comme de pièces de conviction dans les procès qui pourront s'élever à ce sujet.

Sec. 8. L'assistant-avocat public de la ville aura droit, comme compensation de ses services, à la moitié de l'amende imposée par la Cour, et il est par ces présentes autorisé à poursuivre le recouvrement des amendes par les mêmes moyens que ceux actuellement autorisés par la loi.

Sec. 9. Si l'Enregistreur ou son Assistant agissent traîtrement dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions, aux dispositions du présent acte, le contrevenant sera, sur conviction faite devant une cour compétente, condamné à une amende qui ne pourra être moindre de cinq piastres ni excéder cinquante piastres pour chaque contravention.

Sec. 10. L'enregistreur en compensation de ses services, aura droit à un demi cent par chaque nom porté sur la liste par lui fournie aux commissaires des élections, laquelle compensation lui sera payée annuellement sur le Trésor de l'Etat, sur le warrant de l'Auditeur des Comptes Publics.

Sec. 11. Chaque assistant-enregistreur a droit en compensation de ses services, à un cent par chaque nom fourni par lui à l'Enregistreur ; laquelle somme lui sera payée annuellement sur le Trésor de l'Etat, sur le warrant de l'Auditeur des Comptes Publics.

Sec. 12. L'esprit et les vues du présent acte sont d'exécuter les prescriptions de l'art. 11 de la Constitution

Mr. Hodge,

Je demande l'adoption de la première section du premier acte.

Mr. Boatner,

Je demande à substituer la première section du second acte.

Mr. Rivers,

Je demande qu'on dépose le substitut sur la table.

La motion est rejetée.

Mr. Kenner,

Je pense que le Bureau des Aldermen, et non pas les Recorders, doit nommer les enregistreurs, et je demande qu'on remplace le mot "Recorders," par les mots "Bureau des Aldermen."

Déposé sur la table.

Mr. Kenner,

Je propose de supprimer le mot "Recorders" et d'y substituer les mots "Bureaux des Aldermen et Assistants-Aldermen." Quelques personnes peuvent croire que j'avais l'intention de laisser de côté les Assistants-Aldermen. Les Recorders ont la nomination des officiers de police. Je ne veux pas que les citoyens votans se trouvent sous le contrôle de la police.

Mr. McCay,

Cela est pourtant ainsi maintenant.

Mr. Kenner,

Oui cela est vrai, à la honte du pays, j'ai le regret de le dire.

Mr. McCay,

Les Recorders ont le droit de nommer tous les officiers et quelques autres officiers encore.

L'amendement est rejeté.

Mr. McCay,

Je propose l'insertion des mots "Maire, etc." à la 5me ligne.

Mr. Hodge,

Je propose qu'il y ait deux enregistreurs. Il est bien connu que la Constitution a eu l'intention de prévenir les votes frauduleux, et j'espère que la majorité ne voudra pas étudier l'intention des auteurs de la Constitution. Je suis orgueilleux d'appartenir au parti qui a fait insérer cette clause dans le pacte fondamental ; et j'espère que la Législature agira carrément et honnêtement en empêchant le retour de fraudes électorales qui ont déshonoré les élections de la Louisiane. J'insiste sur l'amendement.

Mr. Boatner,

Un officier peut remplir cette mission, et je demande le dépôt de l'amendement sur la table.

Mr. Kenner,

Je voudrais présenter encore un autre amendement. Je demanderai qu'on supprime les mots "Maire et Recorders de la ville", et qu'on y substitue ceux-ci "le peuple" Si le peuple élit un mauvais officier, eh bien, libre à lui. La boîte au scrutin a été envahie par la corruption, au point que les choses ne peuvent plus continuer à rester dans le même état. La pureté des élections a cessé d'être inviolable et sacrée. Réformons ces intrigues abus de notre mieux, sans regarder mot à mot le texte de la Constitution, mais en nous conformant de bonne foi à son esprit et à ses vues.

Mr. Wickliffe,

Je vois avec peine mon ami s'échauffer à ce point. Je me rappelle qu'à une précédente session lui et plusieurs autres ont demandé qu'on nommât ces commissaires. Il s'effraie aujourd'hui de la corruption qui résulte de ces nominations, et voudrait que l'élection fût faite par le peuple. Je n'ai pas d'objection à ce que ce soit en effet le peuple qui nomme les officiers.

Mr. Defreese,

Je vois avec regret que l'affaire tourne à une querelle de parti. Si l'honorable membre de l'Ascension, (Mr. Kenner) veut bien nous donner quelque raison valable pour laquelle le Maire et les Recorders ne nommeraient pas ces officiers, je voterai alors pour l'élection par le peuple.

Mr. Boatner,

Le sénateur de l'Ascension, (Mr. Kenner) a proposé un amendement pour laisser l'élection au Bureau des Aldermen. Alors il demandait qu'on eût l'Assistant-Alderman. Les deux mesures furent adoptées. Jusqu'à ce jour, il les a regardés comme compétents pour faire ces nominations, et aujourd'hui il pense que c'est le peuple qui doit élire.

Mr. Kenner,

Il est dur pour la pauvre minorité d'avoir à souffrir de ses propres fautes et en même temps de celles des autres. Qui a voté mes amendements ? Je ne puis pas les défendre et ensuite recevoir reproche par le peuple. J'ai cru qu'avec les aldermen il y aurait déjà quelque baume appliqué sur la plaie. Je demande à notre collègue de nous rendre justice en toute sincérité.

Mr. Boatner,

L'hon. membre a attaqué la population de la Nouvelle-Orléans tout entière de corruption et fraude électorale, et c'est après une telle accusation qui entache de suspicion toutes les élections de la ville, qu'il vient nous demander de faire élire ces officiers par le peuple.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Kenner,

J'ai dit qu'il y avait des votes frauduleux, et je crois qu'il y aura en effet, et le pire sarcotère de ces débats, c'est que personne n'a nié la vérité de cette assertion. On le laisse passer de cette chambre aux journaux, par le moyen desquels il fera le tour du monde.

Mr. King,

Si l'honorable membre veut bien indiquer l'heure et le lieu de l'élection, je m'y rendrai avec lui.

L'amendement est adopté, et conséquemment les mots "nommés par les Recorders" sont supprimés et remplacés par ceux-ci "élus par la majorité des votants."

La motion est adoptée.

Mr. Hodge,

Je demande l'adoption de la 2de section du premier bill.

Mr. Beatner présente pour substitut, la 3me section du second bill, laquelle est adoptée.

Sur motion d'adopter la 4me section du second bill.

Mr. McCay,

Je suis d'accord avec le sénateur de l'Ascension sur le point, qu'il y a de la fraude. Mais, je ne puis reconnaître avec lui que cette fraude appartienne à l'un des deux partis à l'exclusion de l'autre.

Mr. Kenner,

Je n'ai pas dit cela. J'ai dit que je n'acceptais pas le dire du partisan comme une autorité pour moi.

Mr. McCay,

Très bien. Je veux prévenir la fraude par mes amendements, de quelque part qu'elle vienne, et pour cela je propose par mon amendement qu'on ajoute à la section "étant expliqué que ledit registre sera fermé vingt jours avant la prochaine élection qui suivra."

Mr. Beatner,

Je m'oppose à l'amendement. Beaucoup de personnes peuvent ne pas être en mesure de se faire enregistrer en temps, et il s'en suivrait qu'un grand nombre de votants seraient par là privés du droit de vote.

Mr. Ryan,

Je suis en faveur d'un enregistreur, mais je ne veux voter pour aucune loi qui priverait de leur droit électoral les personnes qui n'auraient pas été enregistrées et qui cependant auraient droit de vote.

Mr. McCay,

Je vois que mon amendement ne passera pas, et pour connaître la volonté du Sénat, je propose "cinq jours."

Cela serait assez bien. La Constitution dit :

"La Législature réglera, par une loi pour l'enregistrement des noms et lieu de résidence des électeurs qualifiés de la ville, et leur droit de vote résultera de cet enregistrement."

Mr. McCay a raison. L'inscription du nom au registre doit être faite pour donner aux citoyens le droit de voter. Il arrive que des hommes dans la chaleur de l'enthousiasme électoral feront de faux serments. La Mr. Ryan se fait une fausse idée de la situation, quand il propose de permettre à un homme du jour, au moment même de l'élection, qu'il a droit de vote, et de le laisser voter sur ce simple serment.

Il faut se rendre mieux compte de l'état des esprits dans ces moments d'excitation publique, où presque tout est oublié, pourvu que le but soit atteint et que le parti triomphe.

Mr. Munday,

L'amendement pour atteindre des votans ayant un droit réel,) le bill est bon par lui même sans l'amendement du sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans.

La question est ajournée.

SEANCE du 7 mars, 1854.

M. McCay introduit un bill donnant aux gardiens du port de la Nouvelle-Orléans la faculté de nommer des députés et clercs, et demande la suspension des règles pour le passage de ce bill.

M. King,

Je m'opposerai au passage du bill pour le moment, et j'en demanderai le renvoi. J'aimerais tout autant qu'on accordat aux juges de la Cour Suprême le pouvoir de nommer des députés. Le bill est on ne peut plus odieux. Personne que ceux qui sont versés dans le service maritime, ne peut remplir de semblables fonctions. En vertu du bill qu'on nous propose, ils pourraient nommer des députés et en quelque façon tirer un fermage de leurs officiers. J'ai souvent fait appel au Sénat, et maintenant je demanderai à cette assemblée si elle veut permettre qu'on afferme les officiers, de manière que le principal titulaire aille se prélasser dans le nord, et abandonne ses importantes fonctions à des députés irresponsables.

M. McCay,

Ma demande est basée sur de bonnes raisons et sur de fréquentes éventualités. Il arrive souvent que les titulaires sont ou malades ou absents. En pareil cas, ils ont besoin de députés qui les remplacent.

M. Wickliffe,

Messieurs,—La position prise par le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans (M. King) est très singulière. Nous nommons des députés pour les clercs et les shérifs, et nous ne permettrions pas que les gardiens du port nommassent des députés aussi. Le bill ne leur donne aucunement le pouvoir d'affermer leurs offices, et ce n'est certes pas la véritable raison de l'opposition que M. King fait au bill.

M. King,

Je vous demande pardon, ce serait la conséquence du bill. Relisez-le. (Il en donne lecture.)

Mr Ryan,

Je demanderai à M. King s'il ne croit pas que les personnes nommées par le gouverneur sont trop pures pour se comporter de la sorte.

M. King,

Je n'ai pas pour habitude de croire à la pureté angélique d'un homme, quel qu'il soit, quand il s'agit de législation. Mes principes sont tout opposés. Je pense tout au contraire que lorsque nous faisons des lois, c'est contre les méchants. S'il n'y avait que de bons fonctionnaires, pourquoi y aurait-il des lois contre les fonctionnaires prévaricateurs? Il est très vrai que nous avons des députés pour les clercs et pour les shérifs. Mais malgré cela, les députés-clercs sont limités. On dit que les gardiens peuvent être malades ou absents, et qu'en conséquence ils ont parfois besoin d'être remplacés. Renvoyons le bill pour qu'il y soit fait part au Comité des amendements explicites.

M Kenner,

La première question à poser est celle-ci: Y a-t il intérêt pour le public à cette nomination? Il faut répondre affirmativement. La seconde question est la suivante: Les dépenses en seront-elles augmentées? Il faut répondre non. C'est pourquoi je voterai pour le bill.

M. King,

Le bill a pour objet l'avantage du fonctionnaire

Digitized by Google

et non celui du public. Je voudrais bien savoir quel bien le public peut en retirer.

Mr Kenner,

Supposons que le gardien soit malade, et que plusieurs navires arrivent à la fois. C'est là une circonstance où l'intérêt public exigerait qu'il y eût un remplaçant.

Mr King,

L'honorable membre nous parle là d'éventualités, et ne veut rien régler à cet égard dans le bill. Pendant 20 ans, la maladie des gardiens n'a porté aucun préjudice au public. Je considère l'affaire comme très importante ; et c'est là une grande responsabilité que l'on propose d'abandonner à des mains irresponsables. Les capitaines de navires ont du fromage, du brandy, des vins et toutes ces autres petites choses qui accommodent assez généralement nos officiers, et qui feraient que les députés négligeraient trop facilement leurs devoirs. Je vois autour de moi les marques du résultat de l'action du sénat, et je sais que je parle à des oreilles qui ne veulent pas entendre.

Mr McMurdo,

Je me range aux objections de mon collégue (Mr King). En cas de maladie, il doit y avoir des députés, mais alors, que ce soit le bill qui règle cette affaire.

Mr Munday,

Je suis opposé au renvoi de ce bill. Je ne mets pas en doute l'honnêteté des gardiens ou de ceux qu'ils choisiraient pour leurs députés. Je ne crois pas que les jeunes hommes de ce pays peuvent être corrompus avec du fromage, du vin et du brandy.

Mr King,

Je n'ai accusé personne de corruption. J'ai seulement dit qu'ils étaient exposés à des tentations de corruption.

Le sénat, consulté, refuse de renvoyer le bill dont il s'agit.

Mr King,

Je demande que les députés ne puissent agir qu'en cas de maladie ou d'absence du titulaire.

L'amendement est déposé.

Mr King,

Je propose un autre amendement. Je demande que ces députés soient payés pour leurs services.

Ce nouvel amendement subit le même sort que le premier.

Mr King,

Je demande la suppression du mot "clercs" c'est déjà bien assez de leur permettre de nommer des députés.

Cette motion est également déposée.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je demande l'adoption de la section, et je demande le vote par oui et par non, pour empêcher que Mr King ne nous propose d'autres amendements.

Mr King,

Je n'en ai pas d'autres à présenter.

Mr Wickliffe,

Alors, je retire ma demande.

Les règles sont déclarées suspendues, et le bill est adopté.

Mr King,

Je donne avis au sénat que je demanderai demain au sénat un nouvel examen de cette affaire.

Mr Wickliffe,

Vous avez voté contre.

Mr. King,

Non, je n'ai pas voté contre.

Mr Wickliffe,

L'honorable membre était-il à la barre?

Mr King,

J'y étais.

ORDRES DU JOUR—AFFAIRES NON-TERMINEES.

1° Acte pour régler l'enrégistrement des votans de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans en éxécution de l'article 11 de la Constitution.

2° Et un Acte pour l'enrégistrement des noms et lieux de résidence de tous les électeurs qualifiés de la Nouvelle-Orléans.

Mr Boatner,

Avant que le sénat aille plus loin, je propose de reprendre le vote de la 2de section, et je vais en donner les raisons. La section crée deux assistans-enrégistreurs. Il est inutile d'en avoir plus d'un. Il pourrait y avoir une grande différence entre les rapports des deux assistants, et cela donnerait naturellement lieu à une grande confusion dans les retours, outre que cela occasionnerait une dépense additionnelle.

Mr Hodge,

J'ai offert hier, par l'amendement, d'insérer deux assistans. Mon objet était de donner à l'enrégistreur principal le pouvoir de nommer deux députés, qui seraient pris l'un dans un parti politique, et l'autre dans l'autre. Je demande au sénat de tacher de faire que le bill arrive à réaliser l'intention de la Constitution. L'année dernière, j'ai demandé au sénat d'exécuter la Constitution, et son refus a été la cause que nous avons assisté à la plus corrompue de toutes les élections. Hier personne n'a nié les fraudes indignes qui ont été commises, mais vous avez dit qu'elles avaient été commises par les deux partis également. Eh bien, puisque vous reconnaissez que le scrutin est faussé, puisque vous convenez que l'abus, la fraude, le mensonge, l'impureté existent là où devrait pardessus tout régner la plus pure sincérité, aidez moi donc à reconstruire l'autel qui a été renversé par des mains égarées. De quelque part que vienne la corruption, chassons la du temple de l'élection. Qu'importe qu'il en coûte quelque argent à l'Etat ? Le but n'en vaut-il pas la peine ?

La meilleure preuve que les retours seront corrects, nous la trouverons dans l'effet qu'ils produiront sur le pays. Nous sommes d'un pays où un homme serait fort mal venu, s'il ne devait sa nomination qu'à la corruption électorale. Je m'oppose à une ré-considération.

Mr Boatner,

Messieurs—L'honorable membre m'a fort mal compris Je conviens avec lui que des fraudes ont été commises à la Nouvelle-Orléans par les deux partis. Il n'y a pas dans le bill de clause qui ordonne que les deux députés enrégistreurs feront un rapport exactement semblable. Si donc l'un a compté 800 électeurs, et l'autre seulement 600, comment l'enrégistreur s'y prendra-t-il pour décider entre les deux? Si l'enrégistreur est un démocrate, il acceptera comme bonne la liste la plus nombreuse, et s'il est whig, il en fera autant; c'est pourquoi je pense qu'il serait mieux qu'il n'y eût qu'un assistant au lieu de deux.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je ne suis pas de l'avis du sénateur de Catahoula (Mr Boatner). Je suis en faveur de deux assistans. S'il y a des fraudes, je l'ignore. Je n'ai jamais été à la Nouvelle-Orléans au moment d'une élection. Mais s'il y en a, ce sont les whigs qui ont commencé, et ils ont été battus à leur propre jeu.

Mr King,

Le sénateur de Caddo (Mr Hodge) semble croire que s'il y a deux assistans, ils seront pris dans l'un et l'autre parti. C'est là une grande erreur.

Digitized by Google

Ils seront tous deux ou démocrates ou whigs. Déposé sur la table.

La motion pendante au moment de l'ajournement d'hier, étant d'adopter l'amendement de Mr McCay à la 4me section, requérant que l'enrégistrement soit fait dans les cinq jours avant la première élection qui suivra.

Mr Moore,

Je vais lire mon amendement pour répondre à l'objection que les mineurs pourront être privés de leurs franchises électorales par ce terme de cinq jours.

"Dans le cas où une personne qui n'aurait pas encore acquis la pleine franchise électorale, faute d'âge ou par insuffisance de temps exigé pour la résidence, demanderait à être cependant portée sur la liste électorale, s'il est prouvé par des témoignages suffisants et par serment que la personne aurait acquis le droit de voter avant la prochaine élection, l'enrégistreur devra faire figurer son nom sur la liste électorale, avec une note en marge indiquant que ladite personne n'est pas encore électeur, mais qu'elle le deviendra à l'expiration du temps voulu."

Je présente cette disposition en lieu et place de la 5me section.

Mr Boatner,

Je crois que l'amendement ouvrira les portes toutes grandes à la fraude, encore plus qu'elles ne le sont aujourd'hui. Messieurs, ne portons sur la liste que ceux qui sont électeurs, et non pas ceux qui le deviendront un jour.

Mr Moore,

Je ne puis pas prêter le flanc à la fraude plus que ne le fait le bill dans sa forme actuelle. Il offre le serment dans ce cas-ci, comme dans les autres, et en definitive, il faut plus ou moins que vous dépendiez du serment.

Je propose d'ajouter mon amendement à la fin de la 5me section.

Mr Hodge se déclare en faveur du délai de 20 jours.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je suis, moi, en faveur du temps le plus court. Rappelez-vous l'article 10 de la Constitution. Je voudrais que le registre ne fût clos que la veille ou le jour même de l'élection.

Mr Hodge,

Je suis on ne peut plus éloigné de la pensée de vouloir enlever à qui que ce soit sa franchise électorale. Mais la Constitution a déclaré que les noms et lieux de résidence de tous les votans qualifiés de la Nouvelle-Orléans seraient inscrits sur un registre spécial. Il faudrait que pour avoir droit de voter, tout électeur soit inscrit. Cela n'est pas pour lui, en vertu de la loi fondamentale, moins indispensable, que d'être mâle, blanc et majeur Si donc il n'est pas inscrit, il ne peut pas voter. Je dis au parti opposé qu'il ne peut pas montrer des mains aussi pures que le parti auquel j'appartiens. Nous nous appuyons sur la loi organique de l'Etat La Constitution nous commande, et nous devons lui obéir. Quels sont les actes du parti démocratique qui prouvent son respect pour la Constitution? Je n'en vois aucun. Je puis dire en toute assurance qu'on en chercherait en vain un exemple dans nos codes. Les sénateurs sont venus ici pour remplir un devoir solennel et j'espère qu'ils ne voudront pas quitter leurs sièges sans l'avoir rempli.

Mr Wickliffe,

J'ai dit qu'il y avait un article 10 de la Constitution, et que nous ne devons passer aucune loi pour priver aucun citoyen du droit de vote qui lui est reconnu par cet article. J'ai dit qu'il ne fallait pas oublier l'article 10 pour l'article 11.

L'honorable membre a dit qu'il avait été commis de grands abus et qu'on avait eu à regretter de grands scandales. J'en accuse le parti whig, et la notoriété publique est d'accord avec moi. Je suis fatigué d'entendre sans cesse cet éternel cri de corruptions. J'entends faire ici mon devoir constitutionnel, sans avoir égard aux qualifications ou accusations dirigées contre le parti auquel j'appartiens. L'honorable membre a appelé l'article 11 de la Constitution l'œuvre du parti whig, qu'il nous démontre donc que le parti démocratique n'a pas donné son concours et n'a pas appuyé un bill qui était conforme à nos principes, lequel bill a triomphé. N'avons-nous pas au contraire pris toute la chose sur nous? J'espère que le sénateur votera l'amendement.

Mr Palfrey,

Mr Wickliffe ou entend mal ou reproduit mal ce qui a été dit. Il est charitable de supposer qu'il a mal entendu.

Mr Kenner,

Je ne me fache jamais contre le vent. J'espère que les membres du parti démocrate se retireront de la discussion et voudront bien nous présenter un bill qui satisfasse leurs fantaisies sous tous les rapports.

Je voudrais seulement redresser un point dans ce qu'a dit le sénateur d'Est Feliciana. Il a dit que la fraude avait pris naissance dans le parti whig, et que le parti démocrate avait voté pour l'insertion de la clause d'enrégistrement dans la Constitution.

Mr Wickliffe,

Non, monsieur.

Mr Kenner,

Je laisse nos sénateurs à dire si l'honorable Mr Wickliffe n'a pas eu l'intention de nous donner cela a penser. (Il lit le journal de la Convention.) Il y avait 40 démocrates sur 36 qui ont voté contre la clause.

Notre collégue dit que nous ne pouvons pas prétendre que ce soit là une mesure whig, or j'ai voulu lui montrer que c'est au contraire une mesure entièrement whig.

Mr Wickliffe,

On pourrait induire de ceci que j'avais lu le journal, et que j'avais voulu dire que le parti démocrate n'avait pas fait d'opposition. Je ferai observer que le vote rapporté par le sénateur n'est pas le vote sur la clause telle qu'elle existe aujourd'hui dans la Constitution.

Mais on a dit quelques mots encore au sujet de la fraude electorale. J'ai en ce moment dans la main quelques récits concernant certaines fraudes commises à la Nouvelle-Orléans, et aussi concernant le juge Elliot.

Mr Lacey,

Je ne connais pas personnellement tous les membres de la Convention qui ont voté pour la clause d'enrégistrement, et je me lève seulement pour demander à l'honorable sénateur de l'Ascension (Mr Kenner) si ce vote auquel on fait allusion a été rapporté dans le but de montrer que le parti whig a défendu et endossé la clause de la Constitution relative à la loi d'enrégistrement, et si le parti démocrate y a fait opposition?

Mr Kenner,

Oui, monsieur, c'est dans ce but.

Mr Ryan,

Messieurs, nous pouvons rester ici pendant des semaines entières et sans cesse parler et reparler de fraudes, sans arriver à rien qu'à des provocations sans preuves Messieurs, je suis las d'entendre toujours redire les mêmes choses. Laissons donc de côté les fraudes de 1841 et celles de 1852

Digitized by Google

Ce sont là des hontes qu'il faut cacher dans l'intérêt du pays, au lieu de les étaler complaisamment au grand jour, comme on le fait. En somme, où voulons-nous en venir? Il s'agit simplement de savoir si nous passerons une loi d'enrégistrement, ou non. Eh bien, pour ma part, je ne voterai pour aucune loi d'enrégistrement qui ravira aux électeurs: "Vous ne voterez pas, si votre nom n'est pas inscrit au régistre trente jours avant l'élection. Une telle doctrine est opposée au génie de nos institutions et aux principes républicains. Je ne voterai pour aucun bill qui soit exclusivement une affaire de parti. On prétend que des fraudes immenses ont été commises, et alors pourquoi ces hommes n'ont-ils pas été traduits en justice? J'espère qu'on votera directement sur la question, et que les sénateurs ne voudront pas rappeler les fraudes de 1841 et de 1853.

Mr Wickliffe lit le journal de la Convention pour démontrer que Mr Kenner n'a pas bien lu, et demande à expliquer l'affaire en la plaçant sous les yeux du sénat.

Mr Kenner,

Je m'offre à venir en aide à l'honorable membre, et de lui montrer l'endroit où il trouvera ce que j'ai lu.

L'amendement est déposé sur la table.

La 4me section est adoptée.

Sur motion d'adopter la 5me section,

Mr McCay propose de supprimer tout ce qui suit le mot "vote" à la 9me ligne.

Mr Moore,

Je suis en faveur de cette suppression, car la clause est clairement inconstitutionnelle.

Mr Boatner,

Je demande que la motion soit déposée sur la table.

Mr Trudeau,

Je n'ai pas dit un mot sur le bill, parce que j'ai pensé que le parti démocrate le voterait quand même, et j'avais espéré que les whigs les laisseraient voter sans mot dire.

Mr Moore lit le substitut suivant pour la 6me section:

"S'il arrive qu'une personne fasse un faux serment ou produise de fausses preuves à l'appui de son droit électoral, ou si une personne vote plus d'une fois à la même élection, elle sera poursuivie par l'avocat de district, et, après conviction, condamnée aux peines portées par la loi pour le crime de parjure ou de double vote, suivant le cas."

Mr Boatner,

Je propose d'amender la 5me section en ajoutant après les mots "aura droit", les mots suivants: d'avoir son nom inscrit sur le régistre, etc.

L'amendement est adopté, et ensuite la section.

Sur motion de Mr Boatner, les mots suivants sont ajoutés à la 6me section "et s'il paraît qu'il ait droit de vote, son nom sera porté au régistre; et la section est adoptée avec cette modification.

Sur motion d'adopter la 7me section:

Mr King demande la suppression des mots "Assistant-avocat de la ville", à la 7me ligne, et l'insertion des mots "Avocat de district". Adopté.

Mr King,

Je propose d'amender en ajoutant: Le mot "contesté" sera mis en marge de chaque nom, pour servir à l'avocat de district de commencement de preuve dans les procès sur ces matières." Adopté.

Mr Martel,

Je propose l'amendement suivant; "Toute personne qui sera atteinte et convaincue d'avoir fait un faux serment relativement aux dispositions du présent acte, sera réputée parjure, et sur conviction, sera condamnée à la peine de l'emprisonnement pour deux ans au moins et cinq ans au plus". Adopté.

Toute la section est ensuite votée.

Sur motion d'adopter la 8me section:

Mr Boatner propose de supprimer les mots "Assistant-avocat de la ville" à la 1re et à la 2de ligne, et d'y insérer le mot "district" et d'ajouter après le mot "Cour" à la 14me ligne, les mots suivants: "et l'autre moitié au trésor de la ville".

Cet amendement et ensuite la section entière ainsi modifiés sont successivement adoptés.

Sur motion d'adopter la 9me section:

Mr McCay demande la suppression du mot "cinq" et l'insertion du mot "cinquante" et aussi la substitution du mot "mille" au mot "cinquante" à la 7me ligne.

Mr Hodge,

Je demande aussi qu'on ajoute après le mot "piastres" les mots suivants: "et sera condamné à un emprisonnement qui ne pourra être de moins d'un an".

L'amendement et la section sont successivement adoptés.

Sur motion d'adopter la 10me section:

Mr Palfrey propose la suppression du mot "Etat" à la 5me ligne, et la substitution des mots "Trésorier de la ville".

Déposé sur la table.

Sur motion de Mr Boatner "un demi cent" est supprimé à la 3me ligne, et remplacé par les mots "cinq cents".

Et la section est adoptée avec cette modification.

Sur motion d'adopter la 11me section,

Mr Boatner,

Je propose un amendement qui consisterait à substituer aux mots "un cent" à la 3me ligne, les mots "deux cents".

Mr Moore,

Je vote contre les deux.

Mr Kenner,

Faites-le, c'est votre droit.

Mr King,

Je constaterai qu'il y a treize mille votans et dix districts représentatifs dans la Nouvelle-Orléans, et que si vous divisez $1300 entre vingt personnes, leur rémunération sera très minime, et assurément aussi mince qu'il est permis de l'espérer.

M. Hodge,

Je voterai non, parce que je ne crois pas que le bill soit parfaitement conforme au vœu de la Constitution.

L'amendement est adopté.

Mr Hodge,

Avant que la section soit adoptée, je voudrais demander au sénateur de Catahoula (Mr Boatner) qui semble avoir le contrôle de ce bill, si l'objet de la Convention qui a créé la Convention n'a pas été de prévenir la fraude, et si le bill proposé rendra le vote frauduleux plus difficile et moins fréquent qu'il ne l'est sous le système actuel?

Mr Boatner,

Le bill ordonne la création d'un régistre spécial, et c'est tout ce que requiert la Constitution.

La section est adoptée.

Sur motion d'adopter la 12me section:

Mr Rivers,

Je propose de supprimer, à la 2de ligne, les mots "pour exécuter le vœu de la Constitution" et qu'ils les remplace par ceux-ci: "pour éluder le vœu de la Constitution".

M. Trudeau,

La section semble inspirer quelque doute à certains membres du sénat.

Digitized by Google

Mr Ryan,

Je demande qu'on mette "afin d'accomplir le vœu et d'exécuter la lettre de la Constitution."

Mr Trudeau,

Ils ont fait leur devoir, et sont contents de leur bill. C'est une chose superbe, en vérité. Laissons-le passer tel qu'il est.

Mr Rivers,

Laissons-le. C'est une fiction. Ce bill est une peinture qui nous représente une vache, quand c'est un cheval qui est en effet sur la toile.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je serai l'introducteur et le parrain de Mr Trudeau, le sénateur de Jefferson, auprès du parti démocrate. Il a avoué que les démocrates ont exécuté la prescription de la Constitution, et je lui répéterai ces vers du poète religieux :

"Allons, pécheur, la lampe brûle encore,
"Repentez-vous, pendant qu'il en est temps."

Mr McCay,

Je propose de déposer la section et l'amendement sur la table.

Mr Moore,

Je voterai pour le dépôt, parce que je crois que l'acte ne remplit pas le vœu de la Constitution.

Mr King,

Je voterai "oui", parce que la question est purement emphatique.

Mr Kenner,

Je voterai "non" pour la même raison.

Mr McCay,

Je voterai "oui" parce que quel que soit l'intérêt des amis du bill, la signification est évidemment de ne pas exécuter la volonté de la Constitution.

La motion est rejetée.

L'amendement est déposé sur la table, et la section est adoptée.

MESSAGE DE LA CHAMBRE.

Le messager spécial de la Chambre vient demander le concours aux bills suivants :

Acte pour incorporer la Compagnie d'Arbita.

Acte pour diminuer le nombre de jurés de la paroisse de la Pointe Coupée, et pour pourvoir au service des jurés de ladite paroisse.

MESSAGE A LA CHAMBRE.

Le secrétaire-adjoint vient demander le concours de la Chambre au bill intitulé :

Acte pour autoriser la ville de la Nelle-Orléans à souscrire au fonds capital de la Compagnie du Chemin de Fer de Pontchartrain, à l'effet d'aider ladite Compagnie du Chemin de Fer de Pontchartrain à construire un chemin de fer de la Nelle-Orléans à la Mobile.

Et une résolution pour l'achat de l'Histoire politique des Etats-Unis, par Bernard Marigny.

RAPPORTS DES COMITES.

Mr Boatner, au nom de la majorité du Comité de Réclamations, présente le rapport suivant :

A l'Hon. W. W. Farmer, Lieutenant Gouverneur et Président du Sénat:

Le Comité de Réclamations auquel avait été envoyé une certaine résolution requérant de s'assurer du montant que Joseph H. Maddox a droit de réclamer de l'Etat, et si la somme de $3,000 reçue par lui, en vertu d'un acte de la dernière Législature, n'a pas été reçue comme paiement définitif de toutes ses réclamations contre l'Etat pour l'impression et la publication des débats dans sa gazette quotidienne et hebdomadaire,—rapporte que le Comité n'a pu s'assurer du montant qui peut être réclamé par ledit Maddox. Et quand à la seconde partie des instructions contenues dans la résolution, votre Comité a appris que le montant payé par la dernière Législature à J. H. Maddox, a été alloué par le Comité comme paiement en plein de ce qui était dû au dit Maddox ; cependant, il n'y a pas de preuves que ledit Maddox ait consenti à cet arrangement ou qu'il ait reçu ce montant comme compensation pleine et entière de sa réclamation contre l'Etat.

[Signé] M. BOATNER.

Mr. Dupré, au nom de la minorité du même Comité, présente le rapport suivant :

A l'Hon. W W Farmer, Président du Sénat.

Le soussigné, membre du Comité auquel avait été référé la réclamation de J. H. Maddox, a l'honneur de rapporter en faveur de cette réclamation, attendu qu'il n'y a aucune preuve que ledit Maddox ait reçu les $3,000 comme compensation pleine et entière pour toutes ses réclamations contre l'Etat, mais que cette somme a été reçue en paiement de certains services rendus par lui [Signé] A. DUPRE.

Mr. Macmerdo, au nom du Comité de Finances, fait un rapport favorable à un acte pour établir un fonds permanent à l'usage des écoles publiques gratuites de l'Etat de la Louisiane, et à un autre pour exempter de la taxe l'Association de l'Asile des Marins.

Et il fait un rapport favorable à un bill pour venir au secours des vétérans de 1814 et 1815, avec amendement au titre de ce bill, de manière à ce qu'il soit ainsi conçu :

Acte pour pourvoir au déficit dans l'allocation affectée aux pensions d'après les dispositions d'un acte intitulé :

Acte accordant des pensions aux vétérans de 1814 et 1815, approuvé le 30 avril 1853.

Et il rapporte la communication du Trésorier de l'Etat, avec la résolution suivante, laquelle est lue et adoptée.

Résolution demandant des informations à l'Avocat Général.

Résolu par le Sénat de l'Etat de la Louisiane, que l'Avocat-Général soit requis d'informer le Sénat quelles procédures il a faites à l'effet de poursuivre les officiers publics délinquants dans la ville de la Nouvelle Orléans, qui ont négligé de payer au Trésorier de l'Etat, et qui ont manqué de payer le montant requis par l'acte No. 98 de l'Assemblée Générale pour l'année 1843.

Et il rapporte un acte pour approuver le cautionnement fourni par le Shérif de la paroisse de St. Landry, en sa capacité officielle, recommandant au Sénat de renvoyer ce bill au Comité Judiciaire, attendu que ce sujet embrasse une question légale.

Sur motion, ce bill est référé au Comité Judiciaire.

Et il présente aussi une communication de l'Auditeur des Comptes Publics, relativement à un réglement fait avec A. C. Bickham, et il recommande au Sénat l'approbation de ce réglement.

Et il fait aussi les rapports suivants :

A l'Hon. W W Farmer, Président du Sénat

Le Comité de Finances auquel avait été référée la pétition des exécuteurs testamentaires d'Alexandre Gordon, décédé, présente le rapport suivant :

Que bien qu'il soit convaincu que Mr. Alexandre Gordon a fait de grands services d'argent pour maintenir la Compagnie du Chemin de Fer du Golfe du Mexique, il ne croit pas que l'Etat doive accorder la demande des pétitionnaires, en les déchargeant de leur dette envers l'Etat ; mais étant d'opinion que le Chemin de Fer du Golfe du Mexique est utile et avantageux pour cette partie de l'Etat à travers laquelle il passe, et que ce serait nuire aux intérêts des habitants que de ne pas maintenir ce chemin ; et pour faire voir que l'Etat est bien disposé envers ses propriétaires, le Comité recommande qu'on accorde du temps aux exécuteurs testamentaires dudit Alexandre Gordon, décédé, pour payer le montant qu'ils doivent à l'Etat, en conséquence le Comite soumet au Sénat le bill qui accompagne ce rapport.

Digitized by Google

A l'Hon. W W Farmer, Président du Sénat.

Le Comité de Finances, auquel avait été référée la pétition d'Antoine Cambré et autres, demandant une rétribution pour avoir servi comme jurés dans la Cour du Premier District de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, dans des affaires criminelles, a l'honneur de rapporter :

Qu'il a examiné cette réclamation, et que dans le cours de son examen, il a trouvé que dans toutes les autres paroisses de l'Etat, excepté la Nouvelle-Orléans, les services de même nature sont payés des fonds appartenant aux paroisses respectivement, et que jamais aucune réclamation de ce genre n'a été faite contre l'Etat par aucune paroisse autre que celle de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Les dépenses de cette nature sont considérées comme étant de celles qui doivant être fixées par le gouvernement municipal, et que si le Conseil de Ville de la Nlle.-Orléans n'a pas adopté d'ordonnances pour pourvoir au paiement des jurés dans les affaires criminelles dans ses limites, c'est une preuve que les autorités de cette ville ont considéré ce service comme un devoir public réciproque que chaque citoyen doit rendre à son tour, sans exiger de paiement, comme lorsqu'il est appelé à servir dans la milice.

Cependant, votre comité est d'opinion que la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans est tenue, en vertu de la section de l'acte du 27 mai 1846, intitulé:

Acte pour abolir le Juri de Police dans la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, de pourvoir au paiement de semblables réclamations.

De toutes les manières, le Comité étant d'opinion que l'Etat n'est pas tenu, soit légalement ou équitablement, de pourvoir au paiement de ces services, rapporte contre la pétition.

[Signé] J. R. MAC MURDO, Rapporteur.

Le Sénat s'ajourne ensuite.

MERCREDI, 8 mars, 1854.

Mr McCay, du Comité des relations fédérales, lit le rapport suivant:

RAPPORT DU COMITE DES RELATIONS FEDERALES RELATIVEMENT AUX MESURES DE POLITIQUE INTERIEURE PRISES PAR LE GOUVERNEMENT DE L'ILE DE CUBE, ETC.

A l'honorable W. W. Farmer, Président du Sénat :

Depuis quelques mois, le gouvernement de l'Ile de Cube a institué un nouveau système de politique intérieure au sujet de la question du travail, et de l'organisation sociale de l'île, avec l'intention avouée de substituer le travail libre à l'esclavage domestique actuellement existant, et d'émanciper à un jour donné les nègres qui sont là en si grande quantité, et provenant des continuelles importations qui se font de l'Afrique, de connivence avec le gouvernement et en violation directe avec les propres lois de ce pays et avec les stipulations des traités. Pour mener mieux à fin ses projets ténébreux, le gouvernement espagnol a évidemment arrêté le dessein de procéder par affranchissements, isolés, au lieu d'émanciper en masse, dans le but d'éloigner, autant que possible, les soupçons, et de ne pas donner l'alarme. Mais le principe n'en est pas moins pernicieux, et le but que se propose le gouvernement de Cube n'en est pas moins évident, car chaque libération individuelle est un pas fait vers ce but qu'on n'ose pas avouer ostensiblement.

Pour défendre ces mesures, l'organe du gouvernement espagnol à Cube, a ouvertement annoncé et soutenu de son appui l'idée fallacieuse que le travail libre serait plus avantageux au pays et hâterait d'avantage son développement que le système actuel ; et que la mère patrie, étant une des grandes familles de nations européennes, se croyait engagée, dans l'intérêt de sa prospérité et de sa gloire, à entrer dans la voie suivie par toutes les autres puissances d'Europe, et d'en faire mettre les principes en application dans tous ses domaines.

En exécution de cette pensée, le gouvernement d'Espagne a ordonné l'émancipation immédiate d'un grand nombre de nègres connus comme 'émancipados', qui avaient pendant longtemps été privés de leur liberté, le gouvernement de Cube ayant mis en pratique le système de l'apprentissage et de réapprentissage, au lieu de leur donner leurs papiers d'émancipation en petit nombre, et de temps en temps, à mesure qu'ils y avaient droit.

Comme conséquence de cet acte, et sous le prétexte qu'il est nécessaire d'augmenter le nombre des travailleurs de Cube, le gouvernement de l'Espagne a institué un nouveau code de lois pour cette île, et ce même gouvernement stimule ses sujets à importer des travailleurs-apprentis de différentes races afin de les faire travailler à ses champs à côté de l'esclave.

Si, d'une part, il n'appartient pas au Comité des Relations Fédérales nommé par le Sénat, de discuter le droit abstrait de l'Espagne, à instituer de semblables lois dans l'étendue de ses domaines, lorsqu'elle semble croire qu'elles sont avantageuses à tout son peuple ; d'autre part, ce comité ne peut s'empêcher de dire que sa croyance est que la libération soudaine d'un grand nombre de noirs au milieu d'une population esclave, doit nécessairement éveiller de sourdes passions et produire un grand effet funeste sur la condition morale des esclaves ; et que l'institution dans la même communauté d'une classe de travailleurs-apprentis qui, pendant un certain nombre d'années, travailleront côte à côte avec les esclaves, dans un contact perpétuel, et presque dans une position égale, laquelle classe, à la fin d'une certaine période déterminée, aura droit à la liberté et même s'élèvera jusqu'aux fonctions du citoyen, que cette institution, disons nous, minera sourdement les fondements de présent système social de Cube, et arrivera enfin à détruire complètement les ressources et la richesse de cette portion des domaines de l'Espagne, et le bien-être des habitans blancs de l'île de Cube.

La proximité immédiate où se trouve cette île par rapport à nous, sa position géographique, et nos rapports avec le grand commerce extérieur qui va sans cesse en augmentant, non seulement de notre Etat, mais encore de toutes les rivières et ports des Etats du sud et du sud-ouest de la grande vallée de l'ouest, et de cette vaste région au delà du Mississippi, qui s'ouvre si rapidement à une mesure productive ; l'effet qu'un changement radical dans ses institutions sociales peut avoir sur notre esclavage domestique, et sa connexion désastreuse avec la sécurité de nos relations avec les Etats Fédéraques, par l'intermédiaire des rivers qui arrosent l'île, et de l'isthme de Panama; tous ces motifs induisent le comité à présenter au sénat quelques réflexions à propos de l'effet des mesures nouvellement prises par le gouvernement de Cube sur notre prospérité intérieure.

Son Excellence, le Gouverneur Hébert, dans son dernier message à la Législature, a fait allusion à ces faits d'une manière très nette et très éloquente.

L'abolition de l'esclavage dans l'île de Cube sera certainement la cause d'une grande émigration de la race blanche de cette île, et par suite accroîtra encore la disproportion qui existe actuellement entre les noirs et les blancs. Elle détruira toutes les sources de prospérité existant dans l'organisation morale de sa société, et en appauvrissant le reste des habitans blancs, les réduira à une condition politique, sociale et morale d'égalité avec la race demi-barbare des Africains, qui compose en ce moment une si large partie de sa population. La garantie du pouvoir social et la représentation politique qui leur serait accordées y amèneraient à cause de leur prépondérance numérique, un gouvernement faible dans tous ses éléments physiques et moraux, principalement composé de l'élément nègre, et ayant une sympathie naturelle pour les influences européennes qui l'auront créé, et par contre, une antipathie positive contre nos intérêts politiques et sociaux qui seront opposés à sa création.

Un tel événement serait un grand danger pour le sud, et même pour toute l'Union. Les eaux qui baignent nos rivages du sud seraient converties en un théâtre de guerre perpétuelle, où les intérêts en conflit de l'Amérique et de l'Europe se trouveraient en constante collision. Et la présence dans ces eaux, de cette espèce de comité européen, directement opposé dans son essence à notre développement et à notre influence, obligerait notre gouvernement national à maintenir continuellement sur ce point une force maritime considérable pour veiller à la défense de ces grandes routes de notre commerce.

Il y aurait danger pour nous dans le voisinage d'un peuple mal gouverné, ayant une organisation sociale grandement différente de la nôtre, pour ne pas dire diamétralement opposée. Cela amènerait la la création d'un gouvernement anti-américain, présentant de grands points de difficulté et de désagrément, plus encore qu'il ne peut s'en présenter avec le gouvernement actuel et plus qu'il ne pourrait s'en élever avec un gouvernement différent du nôtre dans ses principes et dans ses tendances. Cela peut nous conduire à la nécessité de prendre possession de l'île, dans l'intérêt de notre sûreté, afin de défendre notre pays contre le danger du voisinage d'un pays désorganisé dans sa condition sociale, dont les ressources productives auront été détruites, et qui sera lui-même, sous tous les rapports, dans des conditions qui rendront impossible son admission dans l'Union.

Des raisons physiques de la nature la plus forte concourent à rendre désirable, sous tous les rapports, que cette île soit en notre possession, ou en la possession d'une puissance amie et vraiment américaine. La pauvreté de nos côtes du sud en ports maritimes pour abriter ces escadrons navals dans ces mers, force, en ce moment, le gouvernement fédéral à fortifier à grands frais les roches des Tortugas, à l'entrée du Golfe du Mexique. La nécessité de cette marche est plus apparente quand nous contemplons les vastes échanges de produits qui, à une époque rapprochée, doivent avoir lieu entre les anciens peuples qui habitent les bords de l'Océan Atlantique, et les empires nouveau-nés qui se développent si rapidement sur le déclin des montagnes Rocheuses et sur les bords dorés de l'Océan Pacifique. Une grande partie de ces richesses traversent les eaux et les routes favorables que présente la configuration naturelle du continent, est obligée de passer à travers l'étroit canal qui se trouve placé à la rive septentrionale de Cube. Pendant que les nécessités de notre position particulière nous obligent à fortifier les roches Tortugas, insignifiantes sous tous les rapports, excepté sous le rapport de leur position géographique, Cube, au contraire, abonde en ports maritimes qui sont l'admiration du monde entier, en bois de construction et en ressources navales de toutes sortes. et elle possède un territoire étendu, et un sol fertile capable de fournir des millions d'amis ou d'ennemis Le commerce illimité du Mississipi et de ses affluents, et des nouveaux chemins de fer qui conduisent aux bords du Pacifique, sont forcés d'aller chercher un débouché sur les marchés du vieux monde, en passant à quelques milles des rivages de Cube. Les lois des nations peuvent s'opposer à ce que nous troublions une puissance amie dans la jouissance légale de ses domaines; mais lorsqu'une puissance dont le territoire est contigu au nôtre, abuse du privilege que lui donnent ces mêmes lois, en instituant un système de politique intérieure et en organisant des institutions sociales qui doivent inévitablement se trouver en conflit avec les nôtres, et menacer même notre sécurité et notre fortune dans l'avenir; et quand, par dessus tout, ces mesures sont prises avec l'intention évidente et presque avouée de s'interférer dans les lois de notre progrès naturel, et du développement de nos interêts et de notre influence, alors la nécessité de notre propre conservation devient la seule loi qui doive régler notre conduite.

Par ces motifs, le comité propose qu'il soit résolu et décrété:

Que nous voyons avec alarme le changement récent et avoué qui a lieu dans la politique intérieure du gouvernement espagnol à Cube, dont les tendances et le résultat manifestes seront l'abolition de l'esclavage et la destruction de la race blanche dans ce pays;

Que nous croyons qu'un tel événement produira le plus pernicieux effet sur les mêmes institutions et les mêmes intérêts dans ce qu'il détruira l'existence sociale et politique de l'île, et portera un coup matériel à la loi du progrès américain, en empêchant pour toujours l'annexion de Cube à l'Union; qu'il créera dans notre vicinité immédiate, et presque en vue de nos rivages, un gouvernement administré par une race africaine inférieure et barbare, sous l'influence immédiate des idées et des intérêts européens, et par conséquent contraire à l'influence américaine pure qui doit prédominer sur ce continent et ses îles adjacentes; que cet événement est un danger pour la sûreté de l'avenir de nos voisins et du sud ouest et des hâvres du Golfe du Mexique, de la Méditerranée américaine, et des nouvelles grandes routes du commerce à travers ses mers en passant par l'isthme de Panama; et qu'il menace matériellement les relations entre nos Etats de l'Atlantique et nos Etats du Pacifique.

Que nous approuvons les sentiments exprimés dans le message d'inauguration du général Pierce, relativement à l'extension de nos limites et à la nécessité de prevenir l'envahissement d'influences préjudiciables sur nos rivages du Sud, ainsi que les sentiments exprimés par le gouverneur Hébert dans son dernier message annuel.

Enfin, que nous pensons que le temps est arrivé où le peuple américain et le gouvernement fédéral doivent avoir les yeux sur l'attitude de Cube et des puissances européennes à Cube, dans le but d'empêcher qu'il soit pris des mesures et créé des intentions préjudiciables à notre propre sûreté et à notre fortune à venir.

THOS. S. McCAY, Président.

Mr. Moore évoque la prise en considération d'un bill pour venir au secours de Mr. Fuselier, traducteur des rapports de la Convention.

Digitized by Google

Mr Moore,

Le Comité des Réclamations a fait son rapport sur ce bill, en y laissant un blanc Je propose de remplir le blanc par la somme de $125 Mr. Fuselier ne demande pas un paiement complet. Il réclame seulement le remboursement de ses dépenses. Mais il est allé à la Nouvelle-Orléans et y est resté quarante jours pour y faire la traduction de ces rapports. et il est à présumer que ses dépenses ont pu être de $3 par jour, plus cinq piastres pour s'y rendre. Il est de toute évidence qu'il a droit au remboursement de cette somme. C'était un rapporteur habile et de plus un galant homme, et il aurait fait le travail, si on lui avait fourni les rapports.

Il s'était engagé sur l'honneur à rester quarante jours, et il doit être payé.

Mr Boatner,

Je vais lire un certificat de l'auditeur des comptes publics, montrant que Mr Fuselier a reçu une autre paye, pour vingt jours, à raison de huit piastres par jour, faisant 160 piastres.

Le bill est adopté.

ORDRE SPECIAL DU JOUR.

Acte pour venir au secours de J. H. Maddox, imprimeur public, auquel on n'a pas fourni les rapports de la Convention constitutionnelle.

Mr Boatner,

Messieurs—Comme l'affaire a donné lieu à une foule de remarques en dehors de cette enceinte, et que ma conduite a été examinée de près, j'exposerai brièvement les raisons qui me décident à voter contre le bill.

M. Maddox réclame de l'Etat la somme de $15,000, et cette réclamation a attiré l'attention la plus sérieuse de la part du Comité, auquel j'appartiens. Nous avons examiné l'affaire avec soin Nous avons pris l'avis de personnes plus versées que nous dans ces matieres, et tout le monde est tombé d'accord que lorsqu'à la dernière session, M. Maddox a reçu $3,000, c'était pour solde de compte. Il y a plusieurs sénateurs qui peuvent témoigner de la vérité de cette affirmation. Le Comité n'a pas pu admettre que M. Maddox eût un droit acquis; et il serait en effet dangereux d'établir un pareil précédent.

En 1852, M. Weisse, du journal l'Abeille, fût élu imprimeur Public pour deux ans, et s'était associé M. Mann. En 1843, la Législature élut M. LaSère, du Courrier, à la place de MM. Weisse et Mann. Il n'a pas été fait d'objection à ce mode de procéder, et MM. Weisse et Mann furent laissés de côté et se virent retirer des impressions publiques selon la volonté de la Législature, avant l'expiration des deux ans.

Mr Rivers,

Je vous demande pardon, le fait n'a pas eu lieu sans objections.

Mr Boatner,

Mais je ne vois rien de semblable dans les rapports. MM. Weisse et Mann n'ont porté aucune plainte. Les amis du bill disent que le rapporteur n'a pas fourni les rapports à l'imprimeur. Si l'imprimeur doit être payé quand le rapporteur ne fait pas ses rapports, c'est là un dangereux précédent.

Mr Hodge,

Je désire redresser une erreur commise par le président du Comité des réclamations au sujet de l'énonciation d'un fait.

La question est celle-ci: Mr Maddox, en recevant la somme de 3,000 a-t-il du recevoir le solde de ce que lui était dû? Je n'ai pas entendu dire au président du Comité que Mr Maddox l'ait compris ainsi

Mr Boatner,

Moi, je ne l'ai pas dit.

Mr Hodge,

Quand les $3,000 furent appropriées, on fit la proposition que les débats fussent discontinués, et je tiens à la main une lettre de l'Orateur de la Chambre des Représentants (Mr Saudidge), qui constate que la proposition n'a pas été sérieusement examinée et a été adoptée à-peu-près les yeux fermés.

Quant aux mérites de la réclamation, je suis autorisé par la plus haute autorité démocratique à la défendre et à l'appuyer. Nous savons de plusieurs personnes d'une irréprochable intégrité, que Mr Maddox n'a pas dépensé moins de $5,000 à $6,000 pour se mettre en mesure de faire le travail. Les preuves conservées aux archives démontrent d'ailleurs qu'il a fait dans ce but une dépense considérable. Je désirais appeler l'attention du Sénateur ce fait, qu'en vertu d'une résolution de la Convention, Mr Maddox a acheté pour $4,000 à $5,000 petits caractères d'imprimerie, par ce que la Convention avait déterminé la nature du caractère qui devait être employé pour l'impression, et il est prouvé qu'il n'avait pas de caractères de ce genre à son imprimerie. Maintenant, les plus hautes autorités soutiennent que dans tous les contrats synallagmatiques, lorsqu'une partie manque de remplir ses engagements, elle devient immédiatement responsable envers l'autre partie contractante.

(Mr Hodge se réfère ici à l'espèce de Blair et Rives contre le gouvernement, et en donne lecture au Sénat, ainsi que de l'opinion de Mr Buchanan, les deux officiers étant, selon l'honorable membre, complètement identiques.

Serait-il juste de permettre que l'Etat pût violer un contrat? L'Etat n'est-il pas tenu, aussi bien qu'un particulier, de remplir ses engagements? J'affirme que Mr. Maddox s'est toujours tenu en mesure de remplir sa part des obligations du contrat. On n'a pas à lui reprocher la moindre négligence. Il a imprimé les rapports aussitôt qu'on lui en a fourni. Conséquemment, si l'Etat, par l'entremise de son agent, refuse d'exécuter sa part du contrat, Mr. Maddox doit-il en souffrir? Les rapporteurs du Sénat et de la Chambre ont examiné l'affaire, et ils disent que si l'ouvrage avait été fait, Mr. Maddox aurait réalisé plus de $20,000. Le rapporteur n'a pas fourni les rapports, et la faute en retomberait sur Mr. Maddox, parfaitement innocent des fautes de l'Etat? On comprend que cela est impossible.

(Mr. Hodge cite ici l'affaire de l'Intendant Général des Travaux Publics ayant refusé d'employer un entrepreneur qui avait contracté avec l'Etat, et rappelle que le Congrès a ordonné subséquemment le paiement de ce contracteur.)

J'affirme, messieurs, que les précédents dans ce sens ont déjà eu lieu aux Etats-Unis, veuillez que cette réclamation soit accueillie et qu'il y soit fait droit par le paiement. Il y a là cela équité et justice. La question n'est pas de savoir si l'Etat a profité du contrat ou s'il en a souffert, mais bien de savoir si Mr. Maddox a fait son devoir, et si l'Etat n'a pas rempli sa part du contrat. S'il est ainsi, Mr. Maddox a le même droit de réclamation contre l'Etat, qu'il aurait contre un particulier.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Comme on a fait allusion à ce qui a transpiré à la session dernière, je constaterai que Mr. Maddox est venu me trouver au sujet de l'appropriation de $3,000. Je lui dis que s'il pouvait amener M. Kenner à la soutenir, je ferais un rapport favorable. Mr. Kenner et moi, nous eûmes ensuite une conversation sur ce sujet, hors la présence de Mr. Maddox. Mais certainement, Mr. Kenner et moi, nous considérâmes qu'il s'agissait d'un réglement de comptes.

Mr. King,

Nous avons entendu une longue dissertation sur l'obligation morale d'un contrat. Mais précisément nous nions qu'il y ait eu contrat. Où est-il donc, ce contrat dont vous parlez? Montrez-nous donc l'engagement de l'Etat. Pour rendre cette affaire plus claire, laissez-moi chercher quelles seraient les conséquences du principe que l'on invoque. Mr. Maddox aurait-il pu résigner ses fonctions d'imprimeur de l'Etat? Assurément, il aurait pu, et rien ne pouvait l'obliger, s'il lui avait convenu de ne pas le faire. Et maintenant, où est votre contrat, puisque vous parlez de contrat, par lequel il aurait pu être responsable envers l'Etat? L'argument, si je ne me trompe, est celui-ci, à savoir qu'il y avait engagement réciproque. Eh bien, montrez-nous l'engagement qu'a pris Mr. Maddox? Etait-il obligé d'imprimer? Evidemment non; personne ne voudrait soutenir une telle proposition. Il eût certainement pu ne pas imprimer, sans être aucunement responsable envers l'Etat.

Je crois qu'il a été fait une appropriation de $16,000, sans impression de bills. Il n'y avait que quelques rapports. A la dernière session, Mr Maddox est venu ici et a reçu $3,010 pour imprimer 60 pages de rapports, c'est-à dire autant qu'il en avait été fourni, et je dis, moi, que la totalité des rapports aurait pu être imprimée pour cette somme de $3,010. Les statuts révisés contenaient environ 600 pages, et n'ont coûté que $3,500. L'appropriation donnée fut regardée par tout le monde comme un paiement final. Si deux parties font un règlement, et qu'ensuite l'une d'elle vienne faire de nouvelles réclamations, y a-t-il une Cour qui voudra les écouter? Mr. Maddox avait tout autant de droits à faire cette réclamation; pourquoi donc ne l'a-t-il pas faite alors? c'était cependant le nommer. On eut réglé le tout à la fois.

Mais une autre objection à faire a ce bill, c'est l'incertitude de la base sur laquelle il repose. Ou sont les éléments qui constituent le bénéfice de $15,000? Je voudrais qu'on me dit au moins sur quoi l'imprimeur devait faire de pareils bénéfices. Il a fait pour $3,010 soixante pages, et peut-on nous dire combien il aurait demandé pour imprimer tous les débats? Je ne puis pas me rendre compte de cette prétention vraiment extraordinaire. Faudra-t-il maintenant que nous fassions de nos imprimeurs des hommes riches comme les Nababs de l'Asie? Sans doute, ce sont des hommes utiles et méritants, mais ils n'ont aucun droit à cette espèce de monopole.

Mr. Hodge,

J'ai généralement observé que lorsque Mr. King a quelques doutes sur la validité des arguments d'un de ses collègues, il a recours à une certaine façon de répliquer. L'honorable membre affirme qu'il n'a pas cru qu'il pût y avoir un homme au monde qui doutât des arguments de son rapport. Je dirai à notre collègue que je prétends avoir le droit de me former moi-même, et avec les éléments qui me conviennent, ma propre opinion sur un sujet quelconque, et quand je me la forme, j'ai autant de respect pour mon opinion que celle de Mr. King. Je vais lire l'opinion de James Buchanan, laquelle non seulement a droit au respect du Sénat, mais encore à celui du monde entier.

J'espère que l'honorable membre ne la traitera pas avec la même indifférence, ni avec le même dédain que les autres. (Ici, Mr. Hodge donne lecture de l'opinion de Mr. Buchanan, dans une espèce semblable.)

Maintenant, je vais répondre à Mr. King, au sujet de ce qu'il a dit sur les contrats. Nous sommes, l'un et l'autre, avocats, et il est à présumer que nous savons, l'un et l'autre, quelque chose des lois. Eh bien, je dirai à l'honorable membre qu'il n'est pas nécessaire qu'il y ait un écrit pour qu'il y ait contrat. Il me demande triomphalement: "Où est votre contrat; où est votre engagement?" Mais il n'est pas nécessaire, pour qu'ils existent, que je puisse vous les faire toucher au doigt. Un contrat peut exister et être parfaitement obligatoire sans qu'il y ait le moindre écrit. Je vais lire la loi. (Il lit la loi.)

En ce qui regarde la somme à laquelle Mr. Maddox a droit en vertu de ce contrat, la seule enquête que nous ayons à faire est celle-ci: Quels auraient été ses profits? Mr. Martin et Mr. DaPonte, tous les deux pratiquement versés dans ces matières, affirment que Mr. Maddox aurait gagné à cette affaire au-delà de $20,000.

Mr King,

Quand j'ai pris la parole, j'ai commencé mon argumentation par cette question: Mr. Maddox pouvait-il résigner? S'il le pouvait, j'en induis qu'il n'y avait pas de contrat.

Mr. Hodge,

Avez-vous connu un imprimeur qui ait résigné? S'il avait résigné, il n'y a pas de doute qu'il eût été responsable envers l'Etat.

Mr. Ryan,

Mr. King prétendrait-il dire que Mr. Maddox n'aurait pas été responsable s'il avait résigné?

Mr. King,

Oui, je le prétends, et il n'est pas un avocat dans tout l'Etat qui voulût se charger de soutenir un pareil procès.

Je vais démontrer maintenant que si même c'est un contrat, l'Etat n'est cependant pas davantage responsable.

(Ici, Mr. King lit l'art. 1927 du Code Civil, pour prouver que lorsqu'un contrat vient à manquer par suite d'un événement fortuit, la partie n'est pas liée.)

Mr. Boatner,

Comme il a été fait quelqu'allusion à moi par le sénateur de Caddo, (Mr. Hodge), je désire dire pourquoi je ne peux pas être influencé par ses arguments.

En ce qui regarde l'affaire de Blair et Rives, qui étaient des imprimeurs publics, et qui avaient fourni caution, ils ont été congédiés par une tierce partie et non par une personne ayant été partie au contrat, et il n'y a aucune ressemblance entre cette espèce et la nôtre.

Je conviens avec Mr. King, et je crois comme lui que la loi qu'il a lue est juste et bonne, et qu'il n'y a pas de précédent pour le paiement de cette réclamation. Nous avons le droit de remplacer notre rapporteur; et supposons que nous le fassions aujourd'hui, au dire de Mr. Hodge, et pour appliquer son principe, nous serions exposés à voir arriver ici Mr. LaSère, qui demanderait à imprimer les rapports.

Mr. Moore,

Permettez-moi une simple question: N'a-t-il pas été fourni aux deux comités la preuve que Mr. Maddox avait dépensé quatre ou cinq mille piastres pour se préparer à faire l'ouvrage?

Mr. Boatner,

Je crois en effet qu'il a pu être prouvé qu'il avait dépensé quelques milles piastres, mais il a été également prouvé que Mr. Maddox avait déjà reçu $20,000.

Digitized by Google

Je ne crois pas que les rapports de la Convention de 1845, doivent servir de base à la fixation des compensations, parce que la Convention de 1845 était une assemblée extrêmement parlante, et la Convention de 1852 ne l'était pas, si on en croit le discours de clôture de son digne président, Mr Kenner.

Mr. Hodge,

Il a été dit que Mr. Maddox n'a pas présenté sa réclamation l'hiver dernier, et qu'une Cour pour cela, présumerait que sa réclamation n'est pas valable. Le rapporteur n'a été malade que pendant quelques mois. Il n'était pas encore mort à la dernière session, et Mr. Maddox a supposé qu'il fournirait les rapports.

Mr. Kenner,

Je voudrais demander au Président du Comité des Réclamations, Mr. Boatner, à quelle somme le Comité a pensé que Mr. Maddox avait droit.

Mr. Boatner,

Le Comité n'a pas pensé qu'il lui fût rien dû.

Mr. Rivers. Fort bien. Je demanderai alors s'il n'était pas évident et prouvé que l'imprimeur avait fait des dépenses pour se préparer à faire l'ouvrage.

Mr. Boatner,

Je crois qu'en effet cela a été prouvé.

Mr Moore,

Il est prouvé que Mr. Maddox a dépensé quatre ou cinq mille piastres, et je voterai pour qu'on l'indemnise de cette perte.

Mr. King,

Si nous payons le prix des caractères l'Etat a droit de les prendre. Ils sont à lui.

Mr. Martel,

Je ne sais pas comment voter, car je n'ai pas de renseignemens précis au sujet de la somme qui a déjà été payée à Mr Maddox. Je serai heureux que quelqu'un voulût me renseigner à cet égard.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Je vais répondre au senateur. Mr. Maddox a reçu $16,000 pour les impressions de la Convention, les procédures, etc., etc., et $3,000 pour l'impression de la portion des débats qui lui a été fournie.

Mr McCay,

Il n'y a eu que $3,000 payées sur la réclamation

Mr. King,

Je demande le dépôt sur la table, du bill entier.

La motion est rejetée.

Le bill est adopté avec l'insertion des mots six mille piastres" à titre d'amendement.

ORDRE DU JOUR.

ACTE

POUR AUGMENTER LE SALAIRE DU CLERC DE LA PREMIERE COUR DE DISTRICT.

Mr. Rivers,

Je demande que cette augmentation de salaire soit prise sur les amendes et les condamnations. Le bill était auparavant conçu de cette manière, et je vois qu'aujourd'hui il s'agit de prendre ce salaire sur le Trésor de l'Etat.

Mr. King,

Je ne comprends pas cette action du Sénat. J'ai demandé qu'on reprît la délibération sur ce bill, et l'évoquer dans cette forme, c'est me traiter avec une discourtoisie peu parlementaire. Pas un sénateur n'avait le droit de faire une motion sur ce bill en mon absence.

Mr. McCay,

Un mot d'explication.

Le sénateur a demandé une reconsidération, mais cette reconsidération a été renvoyée à aujourd'hui, et le bill était en la possession du Sénat et conséquemment il appartenait à cette Assemblée. Je n'ai pas évoqué le bill. Il a été annoncé par le Président. Je n'ai certainement pas eu l'intention de manquer de courtoisie. Si les sénateurs ne sont pas à leurs bancs, ils n'ont pas pour cela le droit de penser que les affaires du Sénat doivent souffrir de leur absence.

Mr. King persiste dans son droit, et le Président décide que le bill était en la possession du Sénat.

Sur motion d'adopter la première section.

Mr. King,

Je demande qu'on dépose la section sur le bureau.

Mr. McCay,

J'espère que les sénateurs voient maintenant les éclaircissements que nous devons attendre de la présence des sénateurs.

Mr. King,

Je retire le bill.

Mr Palfrey,

Il a été constaté, l'autre jour, que deux députés étaient employés à raison de neuf cents piastres chacun, ce qui me paraît un salaire très élevé. Nous n'avons pas de preuve de ce fait. Et ensuite, comment se fait-il que le papier, la lumière et le charbon puissent coûter mille piastres, c'est ce que je ne puis concevoir.

Mr Lacey,

Je crois que je puis satisfaire le sénateur de Ste. Marie. Je lui demanderai s'il peut se procurer deux hommes compétents à la Nouvelle Orléans, pour $1,800 par an. Le clerc a maintenant un salaire de $4.000, sur lesquels il doit payer $1800 pour ses sous employés, plus 1,000 pour dépense de bureau. Maintenant, que reste-t-il au clerc pour vivre avec sa famille? La misère somme de $1200. Le Sénat de l'Etat de la Louisiane voudra certainement maintenir et voter la section.

Mr Rivers,

Je ne me sens aucune disposition à répondre à l'appel patriotique de l'honorable membre. Je propose que le clerc résigne, et si la place n'est pas occupée par un homme compétent, s'il n'en peut pas être trouvé au prix de $4,000 je voterai pour une augmentation, l'année prochaine.

Mr King,

Je vais ajouter un fait qui n'est pas connu. Le clerc a droit à être remboursé de ses frais pour les procès criminels quand l'accusé est condamné.

Chaque cas peut lui rapporter de cent à huit piastres.

Il touche aussi un droit pour les délits de forfaiture. Le tout peut s'élever à deux ou trois mille piastres. Nous savons aussi qu'il touche des droits sur les naturalisations. Admettons que deux clercs soient nécessaires, deux cents piastres pourraient couvrir toutes les autres dépenses, laissant ainsi au clerc $2,000 à ajouter à son salaire fixe, ce qui lui fait, suivant mon estimation, plus de $4,000, et cependant on ne craint pas de nous demander d'augmenter encore ses émoluments. Il faut donc que nous ayons la manie de dépenser à tout propos l'argent de l'Etat. J'ai déjà constaté, l'autre jour, qu'il y avait des centaines de personnes compétentes qui ne demanderaient pas mieux que de remplir les fonctions de clerc moyennant le salaire actuel.

Mr Moore,

Si vous voulez supprimer les mots "à prendre sur le Trésor," je voterai pour l'augmentation de salaire; autrement, je voterai contre le bill entier.

Mr McCay,

Je vais lire le bill, par lequel le sénateur verra que l'excédant de salaire ne devait être payé que sur le contre-seing du juge.

Les première, seconde et troisième sections sont adoptées par le Sénat.

Mr Macmurdo, au nom du Comité de Finances, rapporte au Sénat la résolution suivante, ainsi que la lettre du Secrétaire privé du Gouverneur qui l'accompagne.

Résolu que le Comité de Finances est requis de s'enquérir et de rapporter jusqu'à quel point l'Etat s'est engagé, d'après les pouvoirs confiés à la Législature en vertu des articles 109, 110 et 111 de la Constitution, et si aucun aide accordé par l'Etat aux travaux des améliorations à l'intérieur, a été donné à aucune compagnie au-delà de la proportion prescrite par l'article 109.

BUREAU DE L'EXECUTIF,
Bâton Rouge, 7 Mars 1854.

A l'Hon. J. R. Macmurdo, Président du Comité de Finances du Sénat:

Monsieur,

Conformément à votre requête, je vous envoie un exposé du montant pour lequel l'Etat s'est rendu responsable jusqu'à ce jour, d'après les pouvoirs accordés à la Législature par les articles 109, 110 et 111 de la Constitution.

Les seules dettes de l'Etat a jusqu'à présent encourues ont été contractées à l'usage des chemins de fer, savoir :

Le 27 mai 1854—76 bons, de $1000 chaque, ont été émis en faveur du Grand Chemin de Fer de la Nouvelle-Orléans, des Opélousas et de l'Ouest.

Le 30 juillet 1853—Une autre série de 45 bons de $1000 chaque, émis en faveur de la même compagnie.

Le 31 octobre 1853—Une autre série de seize bons de $1000 chaque, émis en faveur de la même compagnie.

Le 18 août 1853—153 bons de $1000 chaque, en faveur de la Compagnie du Chemin de Fer de la Nlle-Orléans, de Jackson et du Nord.

Le 31 janvier 1854—16 bons de $1000 chaque, en faveur de la Compagnie du Chemin de Fer de la Nouvelle-Orleans, des Opélousas et de l'Ouest.

Lesdits bons ont été émis en vertu des dispositions d'un acte de la Législature accordant l'aide de l'Etat aux chemins de fer ci-dessus mentionnés, approuvé le 28 avril 1853, et sur application, sous serment des parties légalement constituées, des dites compagnies de chemin de fer.

J'ai l'honneur d'être respectueusement,
votre obéissant serviteur.
T. B. R. HATCH,
Secrétaire privé du Gouverneur.

Mr. King, au nom du comité spécial, fait le rapport suivant :

A l'Hon. W. W. Farmer, Président du Sénat:

Une majorité du comité spécial auquel a été référé un acte pour régler les ventes judiciaires dans la paroisse d'Orléans, a requis son président de rapporter ce bill au Sénat, sans exprimer aucune opinion sur les mérites du bill.

[Signé] W. W. KING, Président.

Mr. Macmurdo, au nom du Comité de Finances, présente le rapport suivant :

Le Comité de Finances du Sénat s'est occupé de la question relative aux pensions accordées par l'Etat, et vous présente le résultat de son examen.

Avant le décret de l'acte intitulé acte pour accorder des pensions aux vétérans de 1814 et 1815, approuvé le 17 mars 1852, les allocations faites pour payer ces pensions n'avaient jamais excédé la somme de six mille piastres par an ; un Bureau des Pensions fut créé avec pouvoir d'agir sur ces réclamations, en vertu de certaines dispositions de la loi; et la même Législature fit une allocation de quinze mille piastres à cet effet; ce montant fut entièrement absorbé, et cependant des réclamations nombreuses, reconnues en vertu de cette loi, n'ont pu être payées, à cause de la non-équivalence de la somme allouée. Plusieurs de ces réclamations, tant parmi celles qui ont été payées que parmi celles qui sont encore dues, ont été considérées comme fausses, mais les preuves sur lesquelles elles étaient basées ont forcé le Bureau de Pensions de les admettre. Le chairman du Comité de Finances de la Chambre a appelé l'attention de la Législature de 1853 sur ce fait, en présentant un bill pour abroger l'acte de l'année précédente ; après beaucoup de discussions, on passa un acte sous le même titre, approuvé le 30 avril 1853, abrogeant l'acte de l'année précédente ; mais l'abrogation faite dans cet acte, comme dans l'autre, était trop faible pour payer toutes les réclamations qui ont été présentées; le Comité a pris en considération un bill de la Chambre allouant la somme de quinze mille piastres pour faire face aux réclamations de 1853, qui n'ont pas encore été payées, sur lequel le comité a fait un rapport favorable.

Le Comité est convaincu que l'acte de 1853, n'a pas atteint le but que se proposaient ceux qui l'ont fait décréter, et qu'aucune loi générale ne pourra empêcher la fraude de se glisser parmi ces réclamations ; et il croit que le moyen le plus sûr de protéger le trésor, serait de présenter chaque réclamation directement à la Législature, et d'en ordonner le paiement si l'individu le mérite. En conséquence, il vous présente avec ce rapport un bill à cet effet.

[Signé] J R MACMURDO.

JEUDI, 9 mars, 1854.

ORDRE SPECIAL DU JOUR.

Le comité des élections ayant constaté, dans son rapport, que le sénateur Martel était, au temps de son élection, et est encore aujourd'hui notaire public dans la paroisse de St Landry, Mr Rivers présente la résolution suivante :

Résolu qu'il y a incompatibilité constitutionnelle entre les fonctions de sénateur et celles de toutes autres fonctions salariées.

Mr Moore,

J'ai compris que l'honorable membre de St Landry avait résigné ses fonctions de notaire le premier de ce mois, et conséquemment il ne peut y avoir doute sur son droit à son siège au Sénat. S'il était encore à l'heure qu'il est notaire public il y aurait incompatibilité ; mais ce n'est pas le cas. Je demande donc qu'on ajoute à la résolution de la majorité, qui le déclare en légitime possession de son siège au sénat, les mots "attendu qu'il a résigné ses fonctions de notaire.

Mr. Wickliffe,

Messieurs, je soutiens que quand Mr Martel a prêté le serment constitutionnel, il a "ipso facto" résigné ses fonctions de notaire. (Il lit quelques autorités à l'appui de son opinion.)

Mr Ryan,

Comme c'est moi qui ai rédigé le rapport sur cette affaire, je demande à dire que s'il s'est glissé quelqu'erreur, c'est par la faute de Mr Martel, car c'est auprès de lui que nous nous sommes renseignes. Je lui ai demandé quand il avait résigné, et il m'a répondu qu'il avait envoyé sa résignation le 1er mars, c'est à dire justement le jour où j'ai fait mon rapport, et j'ai dû rapporter qu'il était alors notaire.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je pense que l'honorable membre ne pense pas que nous ayons l'intention de jeter quelque soupçon sur son intégrité. Je demande le dépôt du bill sur le bureau.

Mr Rivers,

Un moment. On peut supposer que je tiens beaucoup à faire un discours parce que j'ai introduit le bill Il n'en est pas ainsi. Pas un sénateur ne doute que Mr Martel n'ait droit en ce moment à son siège. Mais quand j'ai introduit la résolution, l'honorable sénateur était effectivement à son banc en violation à l'article 122 de la Constitution. Tout ce que je demande, c'est l'adoption de l'amendement de Mr Moore à la résolution de la majorité, pour montrer que l'action du Sénat était basée sur la résignation. (Il lit les articles 10 et 27 de la Constitution.) Je demande que le Sénat vote sur la question de principe, à savoir: si les fonctions de notaire sont incompatibles avec celles de sénateur. Personne ne conteste le siège de Mr Martel; il n'a pas de rivaux qui le lui disputent, et quand même il y aurait incompatibilité, j'aurais de la répugnance à le voir privé de son siège.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je suis pleinement de l'avis de Mr Rivers. Mr Martel ne pourrait pas conserver son siège, s'il était encore aujourd'hui notaire public, mais il ne l'est pas.

Mr Hodge,

Je demande au sénateur de Feliciana si sa pensee est que l'article 122 de la Constitution déclare l'incompatibilité des fonctions de sénateur avec toutes espèces de fonctions.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je ne puis empêcher l'honorable membre de penser comme il lui plait. Mes paroles sont assez claires. Il n'avait plus de fonctions publiques, quand Mr Martel a eu prêté serment comme sénateur.

Mr Rivers.

Je propose l'amendement suivant: "L'office de notaire étant devenu vacant par l'effet même de la loi.

Cet amendement est adopté, et la résolution est ensuite votée en conservant son siège à Mr Martel.

Le sénat prend ensuite en considération

Un acte pour régler les ventes judiciaires dans la paroisse d'Orléans,

Et un substitut portant le même tite.

Mr Kenner,

Je demande le renvoi indéfini des deux bills.

Mr Lacey,

Messieurs, je n'ai pas l'intention de faire un discours. Je donnerai seulement les raisons qui me portent à voter en faveur du substitut. J'avais d'abord l'intention de voter pour le bill originaire, parce que c'était le meilleur moyen d'avertir les parties. Dans ce bill, si les personnes sont en âge, elles peuvent choisir qui bon leur semble pour vendre leur proprieté, une autre disposition du bill donne aux mineurs la garantie de la surveillance de la Cour. Ce principe est né avec nous, et nous demandons de donner aux mineurs la même protection pour les ventes que pour les autres cas. Si le bill originaire ne protège pas plus efficacement les droits des mineurs, où est l'objection à faire contre le substitut?

Mr Trudeau,

Je voudrais savoir si le substitut a été introduit par la majorité ou par la minorité du comité.

Mr McCay,

Les faits sont ceci: Le bill originaire a été référé au comité judiciaire qui a fait un rapport favorable. Sur motion du sénateur de l'Ascension [Mr Kenner], il a été référé de nouveau à un comité special. Trois membres de ce comité ont rapporté favorablement, en l'absence du sénateur de l'Ascension, qui était l'un des membres du comité spécial. A sa sollicitation, je demandai moi-même que le bill fût encore une fois référé au même comité; ce qui fut fait, et sur ce dernier rapport, l'affaire est enfin venue devant le Sénat.

Mr Trudeau,

J'ai compris que le substitut avait été voté par le comité, et je croyais que celui-ci n'était pas le même. Mais je trouve que c'est bien le même en effet, et je suis surpris de cette explication.

Mr Lang a dit que les mineurs étaient protégés par le bill. Il s'en suit, alors, que s'il y a un mineur dans une succession, tous les autres héritiers doivent être soumis à cette règle arbitraire. Le bill n'est pas une amélioration. Il repose sur le même principe que l'autre. On a fait une tentative pour faire de ceci une mesure démocratique. Mais je suis heureux de voir que le parti démocrate ne donnera pas son appui à l'odieuse doctrine des monopoles. Il me semble que c'est aller un peu loin, que de priver les citoyens de la Nouvelle-Orléans du droit de choisir qui bon leur semble pour faire leurs ventes.

Mr Munday,

Il paraît que ces messieurs ne peuvent pas s'entendre, et je vais essayer de verser un peu d'huile sur les eaux trop troublés de la discussion en offrant un substitut au substitut.

Mr Kenner,

Le substitut n'est pas à l'ordre du jour. (Il lit l'article 11 des réglements du Sénat.)

Mr McCay,

Je demanderai la division de la question.

Mr le Président décide que la question est divisible.

Mr McCay,

Sur quel bill voterons-nous d'abord?

Mr Kenner,

Vous avez demandé la division; faites vous-même votre choix; nous n'entendons pas faire ce choix.

Mr McCay,

Fort bien, votons d'abord sur le bill originaire.

Le premier bill est alors remis indéfiniment.

Le Président décide que le substitut reste devant le Sénat, malgré le sort du bill originaire.

Mr McCay,

Messieurs, comme j'étais l'introducteur de ce bill, et qu'il a existé de vives discussions dans la presse et parmi le public, qui se sont montrés très hostiles à son égard, on me permettra sans doute d'exposer les motifs qui m'ont conduit à l'introduire. Je n'ai été porté a cela par aucune considération de parti.

Le premier objet du bill est de protéger les droits de toutes les parties ayant des ventes judiciaires à faire. Je parle du bill originaire. Par nos lois, les mineurs et les interdits ne peuvent pas être parties agissantes dans un contrat; il faut qu'elles agissent par l'entremise de leurs représentants. Je crois que le bill permet de faire tout ce que permet le substitut, excepté dans le cas où il y a des mineurs, et dans un petit nombre d'autres cas. Toute la force de l'argument du sénateur de l'Ascension, c'est que le bill aurait pour effet de nous priver de nos droits, de nos droits naturels, comme on s'est plu à les appeler. Messieurs, telle n'a pas été mon intention.

Mais, messieurs, les mineurs et les interdits ne peuvent pas choisir par eux-mêmes. Le sénateur de Jefferson, Mr Trudeau, a dit que lorsqu'il y avait un mineur, son intérêt contrôlerait le choix. Le bill n'empêche pas le majeur de choisir; il l'empêche seulement de choisir pour le mineur.

Les lois de notre Etat ont entouré de beaucoup de garanties la propriété. Nous avons des hypothèques de toutes sortes, hypothèques légales, hypothèques tacites, etc, et cependant la personne qui vend la propriété est la seule qui ne soit pas assermentée, parmi celles qui sont chargées de ces sortes d'affaires. Les encanteurs, avec lesquels vous pouvez vous entendre pour tromper,—car je dis que c'est là ouvrir la porte à la fraude,—les encanteurs, dis-je, font souvent ainsi et les intérêts des parties sans défense sont sacrifés, et ils ne possèdent pas une seule des garanties que donne la responsabilité légale d'un officier assermenté. Dans quatre-vingt-dix cas sur cent, les biens des successions sont vendus par l'officier légalement constitué de la Cour qui ordonne la vente.

La Constitution dit que tout officier devra recevoir sa commission du Gouverneur. Personne ne prétendra qu'un encanteur est un officier. Il n'est pas responsable comme le serait l'officier de la Cour. Vous ne pouvez pas intenter un procès sommaire contre lui, comme vous le pouvez contre un officier de la Cour, et vous n'arriverez jamais à trouver en lui la même responsabilité que vous rencontrez dans le serment et la caution du Shérif.

Le sénateur de l'Ascension a beaucoup parlé des dépenses qu'entraînerait ce mode de procédure, on a dit et beaucoup de journaux ont répété cette assertion. On a dit que le shérif gagne maintenant $20,000 par an. J'ai une copie certifiée de toutes les ventes de successions de la Nouvelle-Orléans, extraite des livres du shérif, depuis le premier décembre 1851, jusqu'au 1er décembre 1853. J'ai aussi à offrir au Sénat une liste des souscriptions ouvertes depuis le 1er janvier 1853 jusqu'au 31 décembre de la même année, dans laquelle se trouve compris la saison de l'épidémie.

Je soussigné, Alexandre Derbès, clerc de la Seconde Cour de District de la Nouvelle-Orléans, certifie par ces présentes, que le tableau qui précède renferme la liste exacte des successions ouvertes dans le ressort de cette Cour depuis le 1er janvier 1853 jusqu'au 31 décembre de la même année.

Signé, A. DERBES, Clerc.

Voici maintenant le relevé des livres de James P. Freret, shérif:

Reçu comptant pour salaires, droits de commission de ventes, garde des prisonniers, etc., du 3 décembre 1551 au 31 décembre 1853,	$91,935 47
Payé pour salaires des officiers, achats de livres, papier, fournitures de bureaux, et frais de tous genres, pendant le même espace de temps,	$83,365 94
Net profit, du 3 décembre 1851 au 31 décembre 1853,	$8,569 53
Montant approximatif des sommes portées aux livres comme dûes, et non recouvrées.	$8,000 00

Je soussigné, certifie que le tableau ci-dessus est le relevé exact de mes livres.

A la Nouvelle-Orléans, le 20 janvier 1854.

Signé, A. K. LEGETT, Teneur de livres
de Jas. P. Freret, Shérif,

Je certifie que le relevé ci-dessus, fait par mon teneur de livres, est sincère et correct.

Nouvelle-Orléans, le 20 janvier 1854.

De la copie certifiée de toutes les successions ouvertes dans les douze derniers mois à la Nouvelle-Orléans, il résulte que le montant des ventes porterait la compensation du Shérif un peu au-delà de $10,000. Par l'autre document, vous apercevez que la somme probable et collectée sur les $8,000 restant dûe, s'élèvera environ à $2,000, ce qui, dépenses payées, ne laisse en réalité qu'une somme nette de $10,000 en deux ans.

C'est là ce grand monopole dont on a fait tant de bruit. Les bénéfices de la place de shérif pourront peut-être s'élever par la suite, si le bill est adopté, à une somme de $12,000 ou $15,000, laquelle somme est, à tout prendre, une paie très minime pour une charge qui entraîne une aussi grande responsabilité. Il est nécessaire que l'homme chargé d'affaires aussi importantes ne soit pas un individu inconnu à la loi. J'ai été témoin de fraudes et de collusions commises par l'intermédiaire des encanteurs, lesquelles n'auraient pas eu lieu, si les affaires avaient été dans les mains du shérif.

Le sénateur de Jefferson, [M. Trudeau,] a parlé de l'obligation où l'ont placé les propriétaires, comme d'une chose tout-à-fait nouvelle en législation. L'hon. membre ignore-t-il que trente des Etats de l'Union sont régis par le même système?

Cessez donc de parler de ce bill comme d'une chose étrange et anormale. Il n'y a rien là que de juste et de très ordinaire. C'est la loi de tous les pays.

Mr. KENNER,

Monsieur,

S'il y a quelque chose de fait pour abattre le courage d'un homme peu habitué aux luttes oratoires, c'est assurément la certitude où il serait d'avoir à défendre une cause perdue d'avance dans l'esprit de ceux à qui il s'adresse.

Cette position est la mienne. Je m'adresse à des hommes qui ont un parti pris sur la question et qui condamneront mes idées sans se donner la peine d'écouter mes arguments. Toutefois, quelque je sente parfaitement, d'après tout ce qui se passe autour de moi, que les esprits des sénateurs ont un parti pris de voter en faveur du bill, je ne m'en efforcerai pas moins de faire quelques remarques contre ce bill, par la raison qu'à la suite des observations que j'ai faites en une précédente occasion, les amis du bill ont été contraints de changer leurs bases et d'introduire un substitut à la place de leur mesure originaire. Comme mes adversaires ont été déjà obligés d'abandonner leur première position, quelques-uns d'entre eux pourront peut-être encore prêter l'oreille aux accents de la vérité, et voter contre le substitut, comme ils ont voté contre le bill. C'est là, messieurs, mon espérance et c'est ce qui m'encourage à discuter au sénat quelques instants encore.

On se rappellera que, dans une précédente occasion, je me suis appuyé sur ce principe si généralement admis, que chaque homme doit avoir le droit plein et entier de choisir son propre agent, quand il veut disposer de sa propriété. Que le droit de chaque homme à vendre le fruit de son industrie et de ses économies, quand, comment et pour combien il lui plaît, était le droit naturel de tout citoyen américain, aussi inviolable que celui de respirer l'air.

Il n'y a pas dans Euclide de proposition mathématique plus susceptible de démonstration que celle-ci. On peut dire que cette proposition est évidente par elle-même, Le droit qu'a tout homme de disposer de sa propriété est aussi positif que le droit qu'il a de la conserver, et ce dernier point est la base des sociétés civilisées, et de tout gouvernement social. Avais-je tort, messieurs, quand je disais que celui qui prétendait pouvoir dépouiller les citoyens de la Louisiane de ce droit inviolable, était disposé à exercer une autorité plus despotique même que celle de l'autocrate de toutes les Russies, ou des successeurs de Mahomet. On peut dire que cette violation ne serait pas plus despotique que ne le sont le knout, le bannissement en Sibérie, &c. Si ce principe est admis, nous ne sommes pas des hommes libres, nous sommes en réalité des esclaves, Oui, messieurs, le bill qui est sur le bureau, propose purement et simplement de nous mettre en esclavage. Il ne le fait pas directement, mais il ne l'en fait pas moins, quoiqu'indirectement. La loi actuelle ordonne qu'un administrateur ou exécuteur de succession, aura le privilège de choisir l'encanteur qui doit en vendre les biens. Le bill en discussion propose de rappeler ce privilège et de forcer tout homme chargé de la liquidation d'une succession à la Nouvelle-Orléans, à la faire vendre par le shérif de la ville.

Peu importe que le shérif soit ou ne soit pas capable d'être encanteur, peu importe qu'il n'en ait aucune des qualités, c'est lui, ou ses députés, qui auront le droit exclusif de vendre tous les biens des successions vendus par ordre des cours. Et, messieurs, quelles raisons nous donne-t-on pour dépouiller ainsi de leurs droits les citoyens de la Nlle Orléans. Pourquoi nous demande-t-on d'augmenter encore les embarras et l'influence d'une charge déjà trop importantes, et qui est considérée comme le plus profitable de l'Etat. Voyons un peu ce qu'il y a au fond de cette affaire, messieurs, et nous trouvons que loin d'être entraînés vers ce bill par quelque bonne raison, nous n'aurons à combattre que des arguments vicieux au plus haut point, et nous reconnaîtrons que toutes les considérations d'intérêt public doivent nous le faire rejeter immédiatement.

Y a-t-il dans cette assemblée un seul sénateur qui prétende dire que l'Etat de la Louisiane est meilleur juge de la valeur et de l'aptitude de l'agent qui vendra les propriétés, que les parties intéressées elles-mêmes ?— Je ne le pense pas.—Alors, de quel droit empêcher les parties intéressées de choisir elles-mêmes leur agent ? Comment se fait-il, messieurs, que la loi de 1852, dont on demande le rappel, se trouve dans notre code ? Y a-t-elle été placée accidentellement, ou bien l'y a-t-on insérée dans le but d'être utile à quelques intérêts privés, ou bien parce que les intérêts généraux de la grande ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, exigeaient l'adoption d'une loi semblable ? Pour répondre convenablement a cette question, je vais être obligé de prier le Sénat de vouloir bien écouter pendant quelques instants, l'historique que je vais lui retracer de la loi de 1852.

Vous vous rappelerez, messieurs, qu'avant l'adoption de la Constitution de 1845, alors qu'on était encore sous l'empire de la Constitution de 1812, toutes les ventes de successions faites par ordre des cours, se faisaient à la Nouvelle-Orléans par l'enrégistreur du testament, &c., dans les paroisses de la campagne, par les juges des paroisses. —Vous n'avez pas non plus oublié combien ce système fut considéré comme oppressif par la masse des citoyens de la Louisiane Que de plaintes s'élevèrent de toutes parts, au sujet de ce cumul de fonctions diverses par une seule personne ; car le même homme agissait sur les pétitions pour ouvrir les successions, et provoquait les conseils de famille, les présidait, donnait l'ordre de la vente, vendait ensuite lui-même la propriété comme encanteur, passait les titres comme notaire et enfin enregistrait les décès. On disait même alors que souvent ce même fonctionnaire multiple percevait des honoraires pour chaque formalité qu'il remplissait. C'était en un mot l'homme universel. Le peuple s'en plaignit avec raison, messieurs, car il ne pouvait supporter qu'un seul homme pût agir ; qu'il ne pût pas avoir de compétiteurs, et conséquemment que chacun dût-être soumis a ses exactions, s'il en commettait ; qu'on eût consulté l'intérêt du fonctionnaire et non pas celui du public. Tel était l'état des choses quand la Convention de 1845 se réunit, fit une nouvelle constitution, et laissa la législature libre de prendre à l'egard du sujet qui nous occupe telles mesures qu'elle croirait à propos. La première législature qui se réunit sous la Constitution de 1845, sur la Législature de 1846-47. Qu'a fait la Législature ? A-t-elle proposé de revenir à l'ancien système de 1812, c'est-à-dire d'exiger que tous les biens des successions fussent vendus par ordre des cours et en passant par les mains d'un seul homme ? A-t-elle voulu continuer ce monopole exclusif, sans avoir égard à l'habitude des affaires et aux qualités de l'homme en place, non plus qu'aux intérêts et aux vœux du public ? Non, messieurs; cette Législature a vu les choses sous un meilleur point de vue, et laissez moi vous dire que cette Législature de 1846-47 était en grande majorité democratique. La ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans comptait au nombre de ses représentants au Sénat, MM. Pierre Soulé et L. P. Durant, et parmi ses représentants à la Chambre, des hommes d'une égale distinction. Que fit donc cette Législature pour satisfaire aux désirs et aux besoins du public ? Elle a voté l'acte suivant, que j'appellerai l'acte de 1847. (Ici Mr Kenner donne lecture de l'acte de 1847, ayant pour objet de régler les ventes judiciaires, lequel acte donne pouvoir à l'encanteur, à l'administrateur ou au syndic de choisir l'encanteur ou de faire la vente lui-même, (pourvu que dans ce dernier cas il ne reclamât aucun salaire.) Voila, messieurs, ce qu'a fait cette Législature, non pas pour retrancher les honoraires de qui que ce fût, mais bien pour donner une juste satisfaction aux besoins et aux vœux du public. Ce fut en 1852 qu'on s'occupa de nouveau du même sujet. Une autre Législature venait d'être élue. Des représentants fraichement sortis du peuple venaient d'être choisis pour faire les lois qu'exigeaient les besoins du moment, et, cette fois, la Législature était whig. La Nouvelle-Orléans comptait au nombre de ses représentants et sénateurs, MM. Benjamin, James Robb, Campbell, Ranney et autres également dignes de confiance. Eh bien, messieurs, qu'a proposé cette Législature? A-t-elle essayé de rappeler l'acte de 1847, que je viens de lire au Sénat ? A-t-elle tenté de retourner à l'ancien système de 1812 ? —non, messieurs. Voici ce qu'elle a fait : la loi de 1847 ayant été faussement interprété par quelques-uns des juges de la Nouvelle-Orléans, qui se croyaient autorisés à nommer le shérif encanteur, contrairement aux vœux des administrateurs, etc., la Législature dont je vous parle passa l'acte de 1852, lequel non seulement fit revivre le principe du bill de 1849, mais encore impose aux juges l'obligation de nommer pour encanteur la personne choisie par l'administrateur. En rendant ainsi toute mauvaise interprétation impossible d'une chose qui était deja claire par elle-même, la Législature de 1852 a enfoncé le clou qu'avait seulement posé celle de 1852.

J'ai fait seulement une allusion passagère à la compléxion politique des Législatures qui ont passé ces actes, et je n'ai fait cette allusion que parce que les sénateurs du bord opposé avaient jugé convenable de faire un appel au parti pour l'engager a soutenir cette mesure, comme si une Législature démocrate devait rappeler la bonne loi pour l'avantage des hommes en place, élus dans le sein des démocrates. En 1847, la Législature était démocrate, et J. Lewis était shérif. Cependant la loi de 1847 passa. En 1852, la Législature etait whig, J. P. Freret, un whig, était shérif, et l'acte de 1852 passa également, corroborant encore l'acte de 1847.

C'est en vain que je demande une seule bonne raison, pour justifier ce besoin de rappeler la loi de 1852. A-t-on trouvé qu'elle fonctionnait mal ? sur quels faits s'appuie-t-on pour nous prouver qu'elle est contraire à l'intérêt public ? Avons-nous un seul mémoire, une seule pétition sur ce sujet, qui nous en demande le rappel ? non, messieurs, mais il y a au contraire un mémoire dans le sens inverse, une longue liste de nos concitoyens les plus influents, qui nous adjurent de ne pas rappeler la loi de 1852. La voix publique dans notre grande cité, s'élève toute entière contre cette mesure. Une loi comme celle-ci qui peut affecter la propriété de chaque homme qui meurt dans la Nouvelle-Orléans, ne doit pas être rappelée sans qu'on ait égard à l'opinion publique. Et comme preuve des sentiments du peuple à ce sujet, je vous réfère à l'expérience que le public a faite de la loi; Par la loi actuellement en vigueur, tout homme qui, en qualité d'administrateur, obtient d'une cour un ordre de vente relativement à des biens de successions à la Nouvelle-Orléans, est autorisé à choisir soit un encanteur, soit le shériff pour les vendre. Il vous est donc facile de voir par la préférence des particuliers, quel est le sentiment public. Qu'a fait le public sous l'empire de cette loi? on a-t-il porté ses préférences? voyons un peu. Consultons les journaux, et voyons quel est l'usage du peuple de la ville. Je tiens à la main cinq des journaux de la Nouvelle-Orléans, tous publiés le jour même où ce bill fut mis en discussion devant le Sénat. Je trouve dans ces feuilles dix-neuf avertissements de ventes à l'encan. Dix-huit de ces ventes devaient être faites par des escanteurs, pendant qu'une seule devait l'être par le shérif. Ainsi dix-huit d'une part, et un de l'autre, telle est la proportion. Rien n'empêchait les parties intéressées à choisir le shérif. Vous voyez donc dans cette proportion la juste mesure des sentiments de la masse. Qu'on vienne dire maintenant que le peuple demande le rappel de la loi de 1852, et l'adoption de cette loi de contrainte que vous entendez établir. Encore une fois, messieurs, vous devez maintenant savoir à quoi vous en tenir. Et tenez, quelque chose de plus fort encore. Consultez les statistiques, et faites la comparaison entre la valeur des biens de successions à vendre par les encanteur, et celle des biens à vendre par le shérif, vous trouverez une différence beaucoup plus grande encore Les biens à vendre par les encanteurs s'élèvent à des centaines de mille piastres, tandis que ceux a vendre par le shérif consistent à peine dans la valeur d'un nègre. Je pense, messieurs, que les quelques remarques que je vais faire, ne seront pas regardées comme des personnalités, si je fais allusion à ce que font en pareil cas, deux des avocats distingués de cette loi de violence. Je veux parler de MM. King et McCay. On sait parfaitement que ces deux messieurs sont des avocats de distinction, et qu'ils sont très souvent appelés à régler des successions Maintenant, messieurs, ces deux sénateurs nous disent ici que chaque administrateur doit être forcé d'employer comme encanteur le shérif. Cependant, quelle est leur pratique constante? Je prie le Sénat de ne pas rire, si je lui dis que, chaque fois que MM. King et McCay ont été appelés pour demander à la Cour un ordre de vendre des biens de successions, ces biens ont été vendus, non pas par le shérif, mais bien par l'un des encanteurs de la Nouvelle-Orléans Je voudrais savoir maintenant, messieurs, comment ces deux sénateurs peuvent nous demander aujourd'hui de passer une loi qui force le public à aller au shérif, lorsqu'eux-mêmes, ayant le choix de l'encanteur ou du shérif, conseillent à leurs clients de donner la préference à l'encanteur? Ai-je donc tort de demander au Sénat de suivre, dans cette affaire, la pratique constante de MM. McCay et King, et non pas leurs avis?

Messieurs, il est naturel que l'administrateur qui a des propriétés à vendre, aime mieux employer pour faire la vente un homme qui a vieilli dans le métier, que de s'adresser au shérif, qui a été choisi par le peuple, non pas a cause de sa capacité comme vendeur public, mais bien a cause de sa qualité de whig ou de démocrate, ou encore a raison de ses éminentes qualités sociales et de sa popularité. Que ces messieurs me permettent de leur dire que ce n'est pas chose facile que de devenir bon encanteur. J'ai entendu une fois un homme dire que le premier imbécile venu pouvait faire un excellent plaideur, eh bien, que le premier cerveau creux essaye, et on verra que le résultat de son administration sera de ne pouvoir rien tirer d'un sol pourtant fertile, et de trouver un déficit dans sa caisse à la fin de l'année.

On se tromperait de la même manière si l'on pensait que le premier venu pût-être un bon encanteur. Il n'est pas suffisant pour cela de monter sur une table et de crier à pleins poumons: " une fois, deux fois, trois fois." (going, going, gone!) Il faut quelque chose de plus. Il faut une grande promptitude de coup-d'œil, qui le mette à même de juger immédiatement dans un regard, dans un froncement de sourcil, dans un mouvement des muscles du visage, de la disposition de l'enchérisseur, même avant qu'il ait mis son enchère, et d'aller ainsi par anticipation au devant de la secrète pensée de l'amateur. Il est nécessaire aussi pour être un bon encanteur, d'avoir une connaissance parfaite de la nature des objets mis en vente, de leur qualité et de leurs défauts. Autrement, comment s'y prendrait il pour vanter les uns et passer légèrement sur les autres? Il faut à l'encanteur un tact exquis et une longue pratique des affaires. Et encore faut-il un homme spécial pour chaque genre d'articles. Il est en effet impossible de trouver un homme qui se connaisse à vendre des objets de toutes sortes. Parmi les encanteurs, les uns excellent à vendre les propriétés foncieres, d'autres des marchandises seches, &c. Comment donc imaginer qu'un homme, uniquement parce qu'il est shérif, ait tout à coup en lui la science universelle, et qu'il puisse connaître pratiquement toutes les sortes de marchandises, de biens et de valeur qui peuvent se trouver dans les successions.

L'Angleterre, messieurs, compte deux grands encanteurs, Mr Robins et le célèbre Tatersall, et ils n'excellent pas tous les deux dans la même spécialité. Quelle est la personne, un peu soucieuse de ses interêts, qui voudrait employer Mr Robins pour vendre un cheval, lorsque c'est à la spécialité où se distingue Mr Tatersall? Personne, messieurs.

Permettez-moi, messieurs, de vous raconter un incident dont j'ai été témoin à la Nouvelle Orléans, afin de vous faire voir quelle folie il y aurait à supposer qu'un homme puisse vendre toutes sortes de propriétés également bien. La plupart des sénateurs qui connaissent la Nouvelle Orléans, connaissent Mr Beard, ou en ont entendu parler. Mr Beard est l'un des premiers encanteurs de cette ville, s'il n'en est pas le premier. Un de nos amis désirait faire vendre plusieurs chevaux à l'encan, et on lui conseillait d'employer Mr Beard. Ces chevaux étaient tous des animaux de race, et quelques-uns avaient acquis une grande réputation dans les courses. Le jour de la vente arriva. Le premier cheval qui fut amené, était le fameux cheval Bees Wing (Ailes d'Abeille), un animal dont la beauté exterieure n'était égalée que par la richesse de son sang et la puissance de ses muscles. Le poitrail, la croupe, la tête, les jambes fines comme celles d'un cerf, tout était admirable. L'œil était vif, les nazeaux fumants, le pied fouillait impatiemment le sol et faisait jaillir des étincelles; le poil était lisse et lustré comme le satin. Toutes ces beautés, toutes ces richesses, toutes ces perfections furent signalées à l'encanteur par le propriétaire du cheval. Ce fut en vain. Le major Beard ne les vit pas. Il ignorait la difference des races. Pour lui, ce n'était qu'un cheval. Tout au plus se fût-il aperçu s'il était boiteux ou non. En tout cas, c'est là seulement ce qu'il eût regardé. Un cheval de l'espèce la plus ordinaire eût eu à ses yeux tout autant de valeur que ce noble animal. Eh bien, messieurs, quand cet encanteur, pourtant célèbre à juste titre, voulut assayer de tracer devant le public la généalogie de cet intrépide courseur, généalogie qui remontait à une époque très reculée en lui faisant une série d ancêtres aussi illustres que celle de la race royale des Plantagenet eux-mêmes, généalogie qui prouvait la noblesse du sang qui coulait dans ses veines, et attestait une origine aussi élevée que celle de tous les Howards, eh bien, dis-je, messieurs, les noms furent estropiés, les sexes furent confondus. Il fit de la mère un étalon et du père une jument. Enfin ce fut à ce point que le propriétaire lui-même se perdit dans la généalogie qu'il possédait si bien. Et tout cela, messieurs, quelle en était la cause? L'incompétence de l'encanteur Beard, son défaut de connaissance en cette matière spéciale. Mais, messieurs, si vous veniez maintenant à voir Mr B-ard dans un encan d'objets qui lui sont familiers, ce sera tout l'inverse. Voyez-le, par exemple, vendre un bloc de bâtiments ou un lot de terrains, alors vous assisterez à un spectacle qui vous étonnera. Quelle différence! vous sentez qu'il est chez lui, sur son terrain favori, et vous comprenez que personne ne pourrait faire mieux que lui valoir les avantages de la propriété.

Il est inutile, messieurs, que j'insiste d'avantage sur ce sujet. J'aurais beaucoup à dire en réponse aux arguments de Mr McCay, mais je suis averti par le doigt de l'horloge que trois heures vont sonner. Je demanderai au Sénat de vouloir bien permettre que je termine demain ce discours. C'est pourquoi, je le prie de vouloir bien accepter ma motion d'ajournement.

RAPPORT DES COMITES.

Mr Defrees, au nom de comité des dépenses casuelles, auquel avait été référée la pétition en faveur de Horatio Davis, ex-secrétaire du Senat, présente le rapport suivant:

A l'Honorable W W Farmer, Président du Sénat.

Le comité des dépenses casuelles auquel avait été référée la résolution pour payer au général Horatio Davis, ex-secrétaire du Sénat, la somme de cinq cents piastres, comme compensation pour ses services à l'ouverture de la présente session, présente le rapport suivant:

Le secrétaire du Sénat, en vertu de la loi, recevait quatorze piastres par jour, comme rétribution pleine et entière pour les services qu'il est appelé à rendre comme tel. Votre comité est d'opinion, qu'avec cette somme on peut se procurer les services d'hommes capables sous tous les rapports, de remplir les devoirs difficiles de cette place: et il ne croit pas que ceux qui ont rédigé cette loi aient eu l'intention d'allouer aux officiers du Sénat durant l'existence de cette loi, d'autres salaires que ceux qui y ont été fixés d'une manière si précise, ceci est, nous croyons, la vraie interprétation de la loi, et la seule qui puisse être donnée, et de laquelle il ne peut rien résulter de préjudiciable à l'une ou à l'autre partie. Mr Davis s'est présenté comme candidat et a été élu Secrétaire avec la connaissance de la loi qui fixe le montant de la compensation, et bien qu'il soit admis par tous, qu'il a rempli les devoirs de cette place à la satisfaction du Sénat, cependant votre comité ne croit pas que pour cela il ait droit à une augmentation de salaire ou de tout autre salaire que celui qui est fixé par la loi, si ce n'est la satisfaction d'avoir rempli les devoirs si difficile d'une place importante de manière à mériter l'approbation de ses concitoyens.

En se référant au journal du Sénat, votre comité a vu que le dernier jour de la session, ce corps a passé une résolution allouant au général Davis, la somme de sept cent cinquante piastres comme compensation additionnelle. Il n'y a rien dans le journal du sénat qui fasse voir que cette compensation a été allouée pour des services extraordinaires rendus. Ce qui fait croire à votre comité que cette somme n'a été allouée que comme un don fait à Mr Davis,—puisqu'il avait déjà reçu le 'per diem' voté par la loi. Les services qu'il a rendus durant la présente session, et pour lesquels d'après la rétribution qui a été référée à votre comité, on doit lui payer la somme de cinq cents piastres consistent, à s'être présenté et d'avoir assisté à l'ouverture de la session et avoir rempli les devoirs de Secrétaire pendant quelques minutes, jusqu'au moment où son successeur a été élu et a pris sa place. Ses services auraient pu être rendus par tout autre nommé par le Président, sans occasionner aucune dépense. De toutes manières, le général Davis n'avait pas le droit de réclamer plus de quatorze piastres, ce que votre comité considère comme une rétribution équitable pour les services rendus par lui; et cependant la résolution lui alloue cinq cents piastres pour ce service. Dans cette circonstance, votre comité ne peut pas considérer la compensation qu'on veut allouer comme une compensation gratuite, attendu qu'elle n'est basée sur aucun fait établissant les services extraordinaires ou équivalents Votre comité déclare sans hésitation que les représentants du peuple n'ont pas le droit de faire des largesses avec l'argent du peuple, Les fonds qui se trouvent dans le trésor viennent du peuple qui paie des taxes pour faire face aux dépenses nécessaires du gouvernement—et il a droit d'exiger qu'ils soient dépensés avec économie et non pas gaspillés en faisant des largesses inutiles.

Pour ces raisons, votre comité est d'opinion que cette résolution doit être rejetée par le Sénat.

Pour terminer, le comité appellera l'attention du Sénat sur le montant énorme qui est annuellement alloué par les deux branches de la Législature comme compensation extra en faveur des officiers des deux Chambres; il considère ces compensations comme un mal qui augmente rapidement, et qui, si on n'y met pas un terme, absorbera inévitablement, en grande partie, le trésor public.

Chairman.

JEUDI, 9 mars 1854.

SEANCE DU SOIR.

Affaires Recusées.

M. Hodge fait la motion de prendre en considération le bill pour le règlement des affaires récusées.

M. Hodge,

Je fais la motion d'effacer l'exception qui exclue la paroisse d'Orléans de la première section et d'ajouter la 2de section.

Cette motion est adoptée.

Sur motion de M. Hodge les règles sont suspendues et le bill est adopté.

BILL POUR VENIR AU SECOURS DE M. GILL.

Le bill pour venir au secours de W. Gill, de la ville de Baton-Rouge, est pris en considération.

M. Rivers,

Je désirerais que quelqu'un nous dise ce que M Gill a fait pour avoir droit à du secours et si tous les officiers occupant le même emploi que lui auront droit au même secours. Je désire savoir si nous aurons à payer $300 dans chaque paroisse.

M. Lacey,

Je vais lire la loi en vertu de laquelle ce secours est demaudé. (Il lit la loi.)

Ce service lui a été imposé par la loi de 1838.

Digitized by Google

Pour ce service le comité des réclamations a cru devoir rapporter cette somme. Je ne crois pas que ce soit trop. $300 pour citer tous ceux qui manquent aux revues de la milice, ce n'est pas extraordinaire. Je demande la suspension des règles.

Le Sénat refuse d'accéder à cette motion.

MAITRES DU PORT A LA NLLE-ORLEANS

Le bill déterminant les devoirs des maitres du port à la Nlle-Orléans est pris en considération.

La section exigeant que les maitres du port aient été matelots au moins douze mois avant leur nomination étant sous considération.

M. Lacoste objecte à cette section.

Mr McCay,

Je crois qu'il y a de bonnes raisons pour quer cette section soit conservée et je ne doute pas que le Sénat ne me soutienne dans mon opinion La suggestion a été faite par un des partisans du bill. Il arrive quelquefois qu'on nomme à ces places des personnes qui n'ont pas la moindre idée des devoirs qui y sont attachés. Ces devoirs sont précisément de la nature de ceux que doit connaitre et comprendre le premier marin venu. De là la nécessité de cette section.

M Hodge,

Il me semble que cette section n'est pas marquée au coin de la sagesse. J'ai entendu discuter ce même point hier, dans l'autre Chambre. Sans doute le principe émis par le Sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans est correct; mais ces raisons devraient influencer le Gouverneur dans ses nominations. Le Gouverneur s'enquiert sans doute avec soin des qualifications de ceux qu'il nomme à cette place si importante et si pleine de responsabilité.

Mr McCay,

S'il y a aucune objection à ma motion je la retirerai.

La section est effacée et le bill est adopté.

VENTE DE SPIRITUEUX.

Le bill relatif à la vente des liqueurs spiritueuses est pris en considération.

Mr King,

Je fais la motiou d'effacer le mot "ward."

Mr Munday,

Je demande que la motion soit déposée sur le bureau.

M. King,

Vouloir intervenir dans le droit de propriété c'est entreprendre une chose bien dangereuse. Si je ne me méprends pas au sujet de ce bill, il propose d'autoriser les uotants de chaque ward à décider eux-mêmes si des licences seront accordées dans les limites du dit ward. Je suis tout à fait opposé à cela; ce serait un empire dans un autre empire, imperium in imperio; cela donnerait lieu à une confusion, à des irrégularités intolérables. Au lieu d'avoir un effet salutaire cette mesure ne fera qu'empirer le mal. Il est de toute nécessité que nos lois soient uniformes et régulières. Nous ne devons pas avoir des systèmes différents dans les différentes parties de l'Etat, encore moins dans les différentes parties de la même ville.

Pourrait-on faire exécuter cette loi ? Le peuple la répudierait et il ne serait pas possible de la mettre en vigueur.

Ces propriétés seraient améliorées dans certains wards, grâce à ce système et elles perdraient de leur valeur dans d'autres. Si j'étais en faveur du principe de ce bill, je ne saurais du moins l'accepter dans ses détails. Voulons-nous soumettre la question ? eh bien ! que ce soit au peuple de tout l'Etat et non à celui des wards ou des districts en particulier.

Je considère cette proposition comme étant tellement monstrueuse que je ne crois pas devoir m'y arrêter plus longtemps.

Mr Munday,

Le Sénateur n'est pas le seul qui ait le droit de parler. Il a des droits, mais nous aussi nous en avons Lorsque j'ai demandé que sa motion fut déposée sur le bureau il a persisté à vouloir parler quoiqu'il ne fut pas à l'ordre, Mr le président.

J'ai des droits également et j'insiste pour qu'ils soient respectés quoique je ne représente ici qu'une humble paroisse.

paroisse.

Mr Hodge,

L'amendement entrainerait la défaite du bill Son but est de faire que les amis de la tempérance puissent prendre le vote par wards sur la question de la vente des liqueurs et si la population d'un ward quelconque veut l'abolir, leur permettre de le faire. Il n'y a pas longtemps que le vote a été pris à ce sujet à la Nouvelle-Orléans; une élection générale a eu lieu. La partie de la ville située au dessus de la rue du Canal a voté, je crois, contre les licences et cependant d'après la loi actuelle elle n'a pu obtenir ce qu'évidemment elle désirait. Ce bill donne pouvoir aux résidants de chaque ward de disposer de cette question à leur gré conformément au vœu de la majorité. C'est ainsi que cela se fait dans les campagnes.

Mr King,

Je ne fais pas objection à ce que le vote des citoyens soit pris; je désire seulement que ce soit celui de tous les citoyens en général et non par fractions.

Il y a encore une autre objection. Nous n'avons pas d'organisation qui permette la mise à exécution de cette mesure. Supposons que l'on divise Shreveport et que les citoyens de chaque ilet décident cette question,—cela reviendrait au même.

Le peuple de la Nouvelle-Orléans doit décider en corps sur cette question. Si j'insistais pour qu'on adoptat une legislation locale dans une paroisse quelconque on me dirait que cela ne me regarde pas, que je n'y ai aucun intérêt. Le peuple de la Nouvelle-Orleans s'opposerait du reste lui-même à ce bill et je suis convaincu qu'il serait presque unanimement répudié.

Je ne cesserai donc pas de m'y opposer.

M. Hodge,

J'insiste sur la motion de déposer sur le bureau.

M King,

Je demande alors l'appel nominal.

Le Sénat refuse de déposer sur le bureau et l'amendement est adopté.

M. Hodge,

Je demande une réconsidération; je désire que mon vote soit enrégistré. Si seulement le Sénat veut réfléchir à cette question je ne doute pas qu'il ne sente et ne comprenne combien est peu judicieuse cette mesure. Je ne crois pas que réellement il y ait une majorité en faveur de cet amendement. Ces dispositions faites dans le bill pour la Nouvelle-Orléans sont les mêmes que veut la campagne. A Shreveport le vote a été pris et les cabarets ont été abolis; mais il s'en trouve encore tout autour de la ville. A quoi servirait-il de les abolir dans un ward s'ils sont tolérés dans le ward voisin. Je crois cependant que si cette question était soumise au peuple en général que partout les cafés seraient abolis parce qu'il sont réellement une nuisance L'autre jour le Sénateur a éloquemment défendu le principe que le peuple de la Nouvelle-Orléans a le droit de voter pour lever des taxes et émettre des bons en faveur de corporations particu-lières. Ce principe est le même et le peuple a autant le droit de voter sur une question de cette nature.

Le Sénateur dit que cela donnerait lieu à de la confusion. Il serait en donc alors de même dans les campagnes. Si les licences sont abolies dans un ward et pas dans l'autre n'y aura-t-il pas confusion ? Pourquoi alors faire une exception pour la ville seulement ?

Mr King,

Je fais la motion de déposer sur le bureau la motion de réconsidération.—Adoptée,

Mr Rivers,

L'amendement du Sénateur tue le bill entier; il lèse autant la campagne que la ville. Il n'établit aucune distinction. N'était cela je n'aurais pas fait d'objection.

Je demande que le bill soit repris de nouveau.

Cette motion est adoptée.

VENDREDI, 10 Mars 1854.

Mr. Lacoste,

Je demande l'autorisation d'évoquer le bill de la Chambre qui accorde des pouvoirs additionnels au Juri de Police de la paroisse d'Orléans, rive droite du Mississipi.

Le bill est pris considération et lecture en est donnée par le Secrétaire.

Mr. Moore,

N'y a-t-il pas déjà des actes de la Législature qui accordent des privilèges exclusifs à quelques personnes.

Mr Lacoste,

Je ne crois pas.

Mr. King,

Les ferries sont adjugés par contrat. Ils sont sous le contrôle de la ville. Je ne crois pas qu'il y ait des privilèges exclusifs accordés à qui que ce soit. Il est possible que quelques personnes ayant des contrats de ferries aient concédé de certains droits dans lesquels nous ne pouvons pas intervenir.

Je ferai la motion d'amender le bill en insérant une clause portant qu'il n'interviendra aucunement dans les droits acquis.

Le bill est adopté.

BANQUES LIBRES.

Mr. McMurdo évoque le bill supplémentaire à l'acte qui etablit le système de banques libres.

Mr McMurdo,

Je demanderai que ce bill soit mis à l'ordre du jour pour après-demain.

Cette motion est adoptée.

NAVIGATION DE LA RIVIERE ROUGE.

Mr. Hodge évoque le bill pour l'amélioration de la navigation de la rivière Rouge.

Mr. Hodge,

En se référant au rapport de l'ingénieur de l'Etat, on verra que la navigation de la rivière Rouge est sur le point de devenir tout à fait impossible à cause des obstacles qui s'y accumulent. Dans tous les cas, une chose du moins est très probable: c'est que pendant les eaux basses, elle ne soit tout à fait impraticable A la dernière session, l'Ingénieur de l'Etat a appelé sur ce fait, l'attention de la Législature.

Je ne crois pas nécessaire d'expliquer longuement ici de quelle manière ces obstacles se forment ni comment ils entravent la navigation. L'effet produit est déjà considérable. Lorsque les eaux ne baissent pas excessivement, il y en a assez dans la rivière; mais lorsque les eaux sont basses, c'est à peine même si le fond est couvert. Tel est le cas à présent. Il y a maintenant à Shreveport 40,000 balles de coton qu'on ne peut en faire sortir. La rivière Rouge est un cours d'eau d'une très grande étendue ; elle arrose un pays immense. Il y a maintenant le long de ses rives, au moins 100,000 balles de coton qui auraient dû depuis longtemps être rendues sur le marché. Les planteurs ont eu beaucoup à souffrir de cet obstacle et de ces délais. Mais ce ne sont pas seulement les intérêts agricoles du nord de la Louisiane, de l'Arkansas et du Texas qui en souffrent; les intérêts commerciaux en sont également affectés. L'absence d'eau à l'embouchure de la rivière est préjudiciable non seulement aux planteurs dont les produits ne peuvent s'écouler, mais encore aux négociants qui ont fait des avances sur les récoltes.

Je demande que $5000 soient mises à la disposition de l'ingénieur de l'Etat, afin qu'il puisse faire les améliorations qu'il jugera nécessaires. Je ne demande pas que ces améliorations soient faites par un autre que l'officier de l'Etat, ni que cette somme soit mise sous aucun autre contrôle que le sien. Je ne désire pas non plus intervenir dans l'exécution de ses travaux ; il ne fera que ce qu'il jugera lui-même nécessaire. Le Président du Comité de Finances nous a dit que l'argent ne devrait pas être retiré du fonds général ;—qu'il devrait y avoir un fonds spécial résultant d'une taxe. Le sénateur oublie que des bills de revenu ne peuvent pas émaner du Sénat. Lorsque cette question sera régulièrement posée, je suis prêt à voter en faveur de tout bill rédigé dans ce but.

Le bill est adopté.

ORDRE DU JOUR.

Le Sénat prend en considération l'acte de consolidation de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans.

Mr. King,

Je fais la motion que le bill soit référé à un comité spécial composé de la délégation d'Orléans.

Cette motion est adoptée.

SALAIRE DU GREFFIER DE LA PREMIERE COUR DE DISTRICT.

Le bill augmentant le salaire du greffier de la Première Cour de District est pris en considération.

Mr. Rivers,

Je fais la motion de déposer indéfiniment le bill sur le bureau, et je demande l'appel nominal.

Mr. Rivers retire ensuite sa motion et demande l'appel nominal sur l'adoption du bill.

L'appel nominal constate 13 oui, 14 non.

Mr. Wickliffe,

Je préviens que je demanderai demain une reconsidération du vote. Je désire que les partisans de ce bill aient une chance de voter en sa faveur. Je ne crois pas qu'il soit convenable de profiter de leur absence.

RECLAMATION DE J. H. MADDOX.

Le bill pour venir au secours de J. H. Maddox, est pris en considération.

Mr. Evans,

Voici comment je comprends cette réclamation. L'Etat a failli dit-on, à remplir sa part d'un contrat passé entre lui et Mr. J. H Maddox, comme imprimeur de la Convention. On choisit un rapporteur qui fut chargé de rapporter les débats. Ce rapporteur mourut peu de temps après sans avoir donné la copie à l'imprimeur.

Mais je ne vois pas du tout qu'il y ait là violation de contrat de la part de l'Etat. Il a payé à Mr Maddox tout l'ouvrage exécuté par lui et n'est pas responsable de ce qu'il n'a pas fait. Le rapporteur est mort; mais l'Etat pouvait-il l'empêcher?

Le bill est adopté.

BILL POUR REGLER LES VENTES JUDICIAIRES DAN LA PAROISSE D'ORLEANS.

Les affaires non-terminées de la veille étant à l'ordre du jour, la discussion du bill pour régler les ventes judiciares dans la paroisse d'Orléans, est reprise

Mr. Kenner,

Comme les usages parlementaires m'accordent la parole, après avoir remercié mes collègues de la courtoisie dont ils ont fait preuve à mon égard en s'ajournant pour ma convenance, j'achèverai les observations que j'ai commencées, hier, sur le sujet qui nous occupe. Je prouverai ma reconnaissance au Sénat en les abrégeant autant qu'il me sera possible. Afin d'éclairer quelques côtés de la question, je commencerai par donner un bref aperçu de l'histoire de la loi de 1852. Cette loi n'avait en vue aucun objet spécial ou partiel. Elle n'était pas faite pour la convenance d'un individu ou de quelques individus en particulier. Elle a été adoptée dans l'intérêt et pour les besoins du commerce de la Nouvelle-Orléans en général. Ces intérêts et ces besoins demandaient l'adoption de la loi actuelle et ils ont été satisfaits par la passation de cette loi par la Législature.

Je donne cette explication afin qu'on comprenne bien d'où émanait la loi et afin qu'avant de la rappeler, nous puissions nous demander si les intérêts des commercants et des propriétaires de cette ville demandent un changement. Dans les remarques que j'avais préparées en réponse aux chiffres présentés par l'honorable membre de la Nouvelle-Orléans, j'ai été obligé de prendre en considération la question des honoraires, bien que quelques personnes, fort à tort, selon moi, la regardent comme peu importante, attendu que les honoraires sont tout simplement, d'après notre législation, pris dans la poche d'un individu et mis dans celle d'un autre. Dans le courant de ses remarques, l'honorable préopinant dit que d'après un certificat fourni par Mr. Leggett, teneur de livres de confiance de Mr. Freret, les recettes brutes du bureau du shérif, du 31 décembre 1851 au 1er janvier 1853, pendant une période de 2 ans, se sont élevées à $91,429 Il y a en outre certaines sommes dues et non encore touchées qu'il croit pouvoir évaluer à $8,000 Je reproduirai mot à mot les paroles de l'auteur de ce certificat. (Il lit le certificat.)

On voit donc qu'en deux ans, le Shérif de la paroisse d'Orléans a reçu $100,000, soit en chiffres ronds $92,000 comptant, et $8,000 à toucher. Le certificat dit que pendant ce temps, les dépenses du bureau, telles qu'appointements des commis, imprimes, papeterie et dépenses incidentesse sont élevées à $83,365. La somme réalisée en deux ans, a donc été de $16,000, soit le chiffre assez rond de 8,000 par an. Il me semble que ce sont là des appointements fort respectables. Un observateur superficiel ou une personne peu au courant des affaires praiques de la place de shérif,ne saurait, d'après ces données, se former qu'une idée fort incomplète du résultat. Il regarderait cette somme comme une compensation fort modérée. Mais je demande la permission d'appeler l'attention de mes collègues sur un point Qu'entend-on par dépenses incidendentes? Que gagne-t-on par les appointements? Ce sont là des questions qu'il faut se faire pour bien comprendre le sujet qui nous occupe. Que chaque sénateur réfléchisse et la réponse se présentera d'elle-même. Eh bien ! d'après l'exposé que je viens de lire au Sénat, dans l'espace de deux ans les recettes du bureau du Shérif ont été de $16,000, et les dépenses se sont élevées à $83,000. Je donne des chiffres ronds ; ils se rapprochent assez du chiffre exact pour ce que je prétends prouver.

Je demande à toute personne qui veut se donner la peine de réfléchir, comment une somme aussi considérable peut avoir été dépensée en deux ans. Que ceux de mes collègues qui ont une connaissance pratique des affaires répondent à cette question. Y a-t-il aux Etats-Unis un établissement manufacturier qui, après avoir payé les gages de ses ouvriers, les appointements de ses employés, les dépenses de toute espèce et l'intérêt du capital, puisse présenter un bilan aussi peu satisfaisant que celui-là? Est-il donc dans cette enceinte un planteur dont l'etat de comptes soit aussi déplorable? Le fait que la presque totalité des revenus de la place a été absorbée par les dépenses, doit surprendre tout le monde.

Je le demande à mes honorables collègues : quel est la cause de ce singulier résultat? D'après l'exposé que je viens de lire, une partie très considérable de la somme dépensée, a été consacrée à payer les appointements des employés. Le shérif en a sans doute un grand nombre ; mais encore, à combien se monte ce chiffre de leurs appointements? Et puis, une somme fort élevée est portée en compte comme ayant été dépensée en papeterie. On se rappellera que lorsque le bill pour augmenter les appointements des greffiers de la Première Cour de District fut soumis au Sénat, ce fonctionnaire déclara qu'il était obligé de faire une dépense de mille piastres pour papeterie et frais de bureau.

L'honorable membre de la Nouvelle-Orléans (Mr. King) rit de ce chiffre et tourna en ridicule l'idée qu'une telle somme pût être dépensée pour un tel objet. Il alla jusqu'à avancer que pour $70, il pouvait acheter tout ce qu'il fallait. Et comment se fait-il que les dépenses au bureau du shérif aient atteint ce chiffre énorme? Je crois pouvoir donner l'explication de cette anomalie D'après les lois existantes, tout fonctionnaire de l'Etat, dont les honoraires s'élèvent à plus de $4,000, doit en verser une partie dans le trésor de l'Etat ; c'est-à-dire, que l'Etat reçoit un tiers et le fonctionnaire deux tiers de toute somme excédant le chiffre de $4,000.

Lorsque le shérif voit les recettes considérables que produit sa place : $100,000 en deux ans, il songe naturellement à trouver un moyen qui le dispense de verser dans les coffres de l'Etat, le tiers de la partie de ses revenus qui dépasse $4,000 par an. Dans ce but, il s'efforce d'accroître le chiffre de ses dépenses, il augmente le nombre de ses députés. Il nomme à ces places ses amis et des hommes de son parti, et, en prétendant leur donner de forts appointements, il parvient à établir un compte de dépenses considérables. Mais l'Etat n'en est pas responsable. Il ne doit pas permettre qu'on présente un bilan fait de cette sorte, dans le but de grossir des appointements dont le chiffre est déjà énorme. Le shérif de la paroisse d'Orléans a la meilleure place que le peuple puisse donner. A mon avis, elle est non-seulement bien rétribuée, mais payé deux fois ce qu'elle vaut. Il n'y a pas de pays au monde, pas même l'aristocratique Angleterre, tout accablée de taxes qu'elle est, où les employés publics soient mieux rétribués qu'en Louisiane. Et même ici, les émoluments de cette place sont deux fois aussi élevés que ceux de quelque autre place que ce soit dans l'Etat.

Examinons maintenant l'histoire de la législation sur la place de shérif. A une certaine époque la place de shérif de la paroisse d'Orléans était considérée comme ayant une si grande valeur qu'on adopta une loi qui la partageait en six, c'est-à-dire qu'on créa six shérifs pour la paroisse d'Orléans.

Et pourquoi cela? La raison en est fort simple.

Digitized by Google

Les émoluments de cette place étaient tellement élevés qu'on les regardaient comme beaucoup trop considérables pour un seul homme. On vit qu'une si forte rétribution ne pouvait pas être accordée à une seule personne ; on considera, et non sans raison, que la possession et l'usage d'une si forte somme par un employé public, pouvait avoir des conséquences fâcheuses ; que c'était encourager la corruption et placer trop d'influence et de pouvoir entre les mains de celui qui occuperait une telle place. On crut qu'il n'était pas convenable qu'un homme devint riche en deux ans, plus riche qu'un autre ne peut le devenir après de longues années de peines assidues et d'honnête travail. On regardait cela comme anti-républicain et contraire à l'esprit de nos institutions. C'est pourquoi on divisa la place eton fit six shérifs Cette mesure ne suscita pas alors les clameurs que nous entendons aujourd'hui; on ne s'écria pas que les places ne valaient plus la peine qu'on les recherchât. Au contraire, on s'efforça d'obtenir ces places, et soyez persuadés qu'on ne les eût pas briguées avec tant d'avidité si elles n'eussent été d'aucun rapport. Loin de là, on les regardait, même alors, comme les meilleures places de l'Etat. Que doit donc valoir la place actuelle qui les réunit toutes les six. Pouvons nous croire qu'elle rapporte moins maintenant, malgré l'accroissement du commerce et de la population et l'augmentation d'affaires qui en est la conséquence. Je maintiens que si cet emploi valait $30,000 en 1830, il doit rapporter $50,000 en 1853. Le commerce de la ville a doublé, la population et les affaires ont plus que doublé; comment sup oser que les revenus du shérif n'aient pas suivi la même proportion? Je maintiens que le certificat que vient de nous lire l'honorable membre de la Nouvelle-Orléans, ne montre pas clairement ce qui se passe dans ce bureau. Il porte en lui sa propre réfutation. Je ne connais pas Mr. Leggett, mais je ne doute pas qu'il ne soit un homme d'honneur et de probité. Il éta t, je crois, le teneur de livres de confiance de Mr. Frèret, et depuis lors il a été employé par Mr. Marigny dans la même capacité Il est en ce moment un des députés du shérif. Je le crois donc honnête homme; le fait seul qu'il occupe une position qui l'astreint à une si grande responsabilité, est une preuve évidente de son intégrité. Je ne prétends donc nullement mettre en doute la véracité de Mr. Leggett; un honnête homme seul doit occuper la place qu'il remplit. Je ne fais que répéter des asse.tions que j'ai entendues. On m'affirme qu'apres que ce certificat fut rédigé, Mr. Marigny demanda à Mr. Fréret de le signer. Eh bien! Mr. Fréret refusa de le signer, il dit qu'il ne pouvait se porter garant de son exactitude.

Mr. McCay,

L'honorable préopinant prétend-il dire que Mr. Fréret a refusé de signer le certificat parce qu'il ne le croyait pas correct!

Mr Kenner,

Voici ce que je lis sur ce certificat. (Il lit.)

Je sais positivement que lorsque le certificat a été envoyé ici, je demandai si Mr. Freret avait signé ce certificat, on me répondit qu'il ne l'avait pas fait parce qu'il ignorait s'il était on non correct et que par conséquent il ne pouvait pas le signer. C'est la ce que j'ai dit et ce que je répete maintenant.

Mais je ne m'inquiète guère que le certificat soit correct ou qu'il ne le soit pas. Il est évident, rien qu'à le voir, que, dans tous les cas, il ne présente pas le tab eau entier et correct ; il ne dit pas qu'elle partie de la somme portée au compte des dépenses entre dans la poche du shérif, ni quelle somme est payée aux employés. Je dis cela sous ma propre responsabilité. Me comprend-on maintenant? J'ai, moi aussi, quelques chiffres à soumettre au Sénat. C'est le montant des propriétés foncieres qui ont été vendues et des émoluments, touchés par les encanteurs dans la ville de la Nouvelle-Orleans, en vertu d'ordres de cour. Il est probable que je ne me suis pas fait très bien comprendre sur ce point. Outre les $100,0 0 touchées par le shérif dans deux ans, il était question d'augmenter son salaire et de le porter à une somme vraiment fabuleuse.

Lorsque le bill fut pris en considération, je fis la motion de le refèrer de nouveau en recommandant au Comité de faire un rapport sur le montant des appointements, touchés maintenant par le shérif et de ceux qu'il toucherait si ce bill devenait loi. Le Comité ne s'est pas réuni et ne s'est pas procuré les informations que j'avais espéré qu'il se procurerait et qui, on doit l'avouer, sont indispensables pour qu'on puisse bien apprécier les conséquences qui résulteraient de l'adoption de ce bill. Je m'adressai donc à quelques amis qui me dirent combien de propriétés ont été vendues l'année derniere par quelques-uns des principaux encanteurs de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orleans.

Voici un certificat de S. Guinault. Il dit que le montant des ventes faites par lui en vertu d'ordres de cour a eté, pendant l'année 1853, de $125,854 39 c. En voici un autre de N. Vignie, déclarant que le montant des ventes faites par lui, pendant la même année, a été de p us de $275,000. En voici un autre des encanteurs les plus populaires de la Nouvelle-Orléans, Messrs. Beard et May. Ils ont vendu par ordre de Cour pour $823,436 49c.

Ainsi donc trois encanteurs de la Nouvelle-Orléans ont vendu l'année dernière en vertu d'ordres de Cour, des propriétés pour une valeur de $1,224,290 88 c Il y a, je crois, vingt-cinq encanteurs à la Nouvelle-Orléans. Si je me trompe, j'espère que quelque sénateur voudra bien me faire voir mon erreur. Nous avons des certificats de trois de ces vingt-cinq encanteurs et nous voyons, ainsi que je l'ai indiqué plus haut, qu'ils ont vendu pour plus d'un million deux cent mille piastres. On peut raisonnablement supposer que tous les autres encanteurs réunis ont dû vendre pour au moins $400,000 00. Cette estimation n'est pas exagerée. Elle serait plutôt trop faible que trop forte.

Voyons maintenant ce qui a dû revenir au shérif de ce million six cent mille piastres, pour ne prendre que des chiffres ronds. Je consens à prendre pour base de mon estimation celle qu'il a prise pour la sienne. Il dit que la moyenne de ce que touche le shérif est de 3¼ pour cent. A ce taux, c'est-à-dire calculant les 3¼ pour cent d'un million six cent vingt-quatre mille piastres, nous avons plus de $12,000 comme montant provenant de la vente de propriétés vendues en vertu d'ordres de cour. Je crois le calcul juste. Donc, outre les $50,000 que le shérif reçoit deja, vous voulez encore lui donner $12,000 de plus par an. Certaines considérations doivent faire supposer que cette année, par suite de l'augmentation de valeur des propriétes, le montant de ces appointements sera également augmenté considérablement. Je ne dois pas éveiller des souvenirs de deuil et de mort en rappelant la terrible épidémie qui, l'année dernière, a decimé notre population et l'angoisse, la profonde terreur à laquelle notre Etat était en proie ; mais du moins, je puis dire, comme argument en faveur de ce que j'avance, que l'année dernière, la mortalité a été effrayante. Un grand nombre de personnes sont mortes à la Nouvelle-Orléans et sans doute il y a eu beaucoup plus de successions ouvertes qu'il n'arrive d'ordinaire. Les ventes de propriétés en vertu d'ordres de cour, excèderont probablement celles de 1853, d'une somme au moins suffisante pour rapporter au moins $15,000 de plus comme appointements. Et c'est cette somme additionnelle que les partisans du bill voudraient placer entre les mains du shérif. La Législature pourra-t-elle consentir à cela? Le Sénat voudra t-il accorder cette immense augmentation des appointements du shérif qui, déjà, sont si extraordinairement élevés? Je ne le crois pas. Je ne puis pas le croire, l'injustice serait trop palpable; le danger trop manifeste.

Mr. le président, je le dis ici formellement, positivement cette question de salaires est de la plus grande importance. Mais quelque importante qu'elle soit, elle n'est pas la base principale de mon objection au ce bill qu'on nous propose. Si je ne pensais que l'intérêt public en souffrira, si je ne pensais que ce fût contraire et nuisible aux intérêts que nous représentons, je ne ferais pas une opposition aussi vive. Je ne connais personnellement aucun encanteur, si ce n'est Mr. Sykes. Je n'ai de rapports avec ceux qui font le plus d'affaires qu'à titre de connaissance. Avant la semaine dernière, je n'avais conversé avec Mr. Sykes que d'affaires. La manière dont le bill affectera le shérif on les encanteurs n'est pas du tout ce qui motive mon opposition ; je me préoccupe seulement de la manière dont il affectera l'intérêt public. Bénéficiera-t-il? ou bien, au contraire,aura-t-il à souffrir? C'est à ce point de vue que la question doit être envisagée.

Mr. le président, il est nécessaire maintenant que je corrige deux erreurs dans lesquelles semble être tombé le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Des remarques faites par les partisans du bill, sont de nature à faire croire que les encanteurs pourraient commettre des fraudes dans des affaires de cette nature. Je comprends très bien qu'on n'a pas dit que des fraudes eussent jamais été commises par un encanteur ou par un autre; on a seulement voulu donner à entendre que cela pouvait se présenter. Lorsqu'il s'agit d'un mineur, une assemblée de famille est convoquée et un administrateur est nommé. Mais comment? Quelques personnes demandent l'administration des biens de la succession, et puis que fait on? Un avis est publié dans les journaux annonçant que telle ou telle personne a fait application. S'il n'y est pas fait opposition, les lettres d'administration sont données par le Greffier.

Mr. McCay. Par le juge.

Mr. Kenner,

Je m'adresse à certains sénateurs qui se sont occupés spécialement de ce côté de la question. D'après la loi, qui doit désigner la cour? L'héritier légal, et s'il n'en existe pas, le plus proche parent, s'il n'en existe pas, elle doit alors nommer la personne le plus directement, le plus immédiatement intéressée. Lorsque la propriété doit être vendue, l'administrateur convoque une assemblée de famille. Les intéressés dans les affaires des mineurs désignent l'encanteur qui doit faire la vente.

Que fait alors l'encanteur? Il crie la propriété en vente publique et essaie d'en obtenir le plus haut prix possible. Et alors où va l'argent? entre les mains de l'encanteur? nullement. Il est d'abord payé au notaire devant lequel les actes de vente sont faits et sont transférés par le notaire à l'administrateur. Où donc et quand la fraude peut-elle être commise? On nous dit que l'encanteur peut empocher l'argent et disparaître. Sans doute quelques sénateurs ont cru à cela ; mais je pense avoir prouvé qu'il n'y a pas la moindre possibilité que ce soit fait. On a cité un exemple dans lequel disait-on il y avait eu collusion entre l'administrateur et l'encanteur. Mais la friponnerie venait de l'administrateur et non de l'encanteur. L'encanteur ne pouvait rien faire sans lui. Si un étranger entre dans mon champ et qu'il remarque un épi maigre lorsque tous les autres sont beaux et riches, pourra-t-il dire avec quelque raison que mon système de culture est mauvais, défectueux? La Bible dit : "Qu'il est aussi naturel à l'homme d'être méchant et trompeur qu'à l'épervier de voler, au poisson de nager." Nous sommes tous mortels et si, parmi nous, il se trouve un coquin, y a-t-il à cela rien d'étonnant?

Il y a plusieurs autres points sur lesquels je désirais m'arrêter dans le cours de mes remarques, mais je ne voudrais pas monopoliser la tribune, et garder la parole si longtemps qu'aucun autre sénateur ne puisse se faire entendre. Il y a, cependant, un point sur lequel j'insisterai. On a dit que, à une certaine époque toutes les ventes de succession étaient faites par le shérif. Il arriva alors, tout simplement, que plusieurs grandes successions furent ouvertes. Le général Lewis était alors shérif. Les parties intéressées allèrent à lui et lui payèrent les commissions auxquelles il avait droit. Elles se rendirent ensuite auprès d'un encanteur et le payèrent aussi pour qu'il vendit les propriétés sachant bien que par ce moyen, elles en obtiendraient un prix beaucoup plus élevé. Ils voulaient que justice fût faite et ils savaient qu'elle ne pouvait l'être par le shérif, quelque bien disposé que pût être d'ailleurs cet officier. Je sais positivement que dans plus d'une circonstance, les commissions ont été aussi payées deux fois.

Mr. McCay,

Le sénateur a-t-il dit que le certificat fut présenté à Mr. Fréret, qui refusa de le signer parce qu'il était incorrect?

Mr Kenner,

J'ai dit que Mr. Freret a refusé de signer ce certificat parce qu'il ignorait absolument ce quoi il y était question.

Mr. McCay,

Les faits sont comme suit: Mr. Marigny alla trouver Mr Freret relativement à cette affaire, et celui-ci le référa à Mr. Leggett, qui écrivit le certificat qui a été présenté ici. Mr. Marigny porta ce certificat à Mr. Fréret, qui ne l'examina pas, disant qu'il ne savait rien à ce sujet, que ce certificat était sans doute correct, car Mr. Leggett connaissait bien toutes les affaires du bureau.

Le sénateur est tombé dans une autre erreur. Il dit que le shérif a reçu, pendant son terme de deux ans, la somme de $100,000, dont $8,000 sont encore dues. Dans ce calcul, il n'a pas fait entrer les frais. Il ne faut pas oublier que le shérif a trente deputés auxquels il paie $36,000 par an. Il y a toujours à la prison de paroisse, une moyenne de deux cents prisonniers aux besoins desquels il faut fournir. Supposez qu'ils coûtent l'un dans l'autre vingt-cinq cents, c'est donc $50 par jour ou environ $20,000 par an. Les frais du bureau du shérif s'élèvent à $56,000 par an, rien que par ces deux dépenses. Puis, le shérif est souvent forcé de dépenser de l'argent pour la protection des propriétés et il n'obtient jamais que cet argent lui soit rendu. Il a des frais indispensables au moins de $83,000 par an, et les dépenses contingentes élèvent cette somme à un chiffre considérable.

Mr. Kenner,

Je dirai que ma conviction est que le shérif gagne plutôt qu'il ne perd sur les frais de nourriture des prisonniers.

Mr. McCay,

Cela est très vrai, mais ce qui provient de cette source est comprise dans les $100,000.

Mr. Ryan,

Lorsque le bill primitif, auquel celui qui nous occupe en ce moment a été substitué, fut présenté par l'honorable membre de la Nouvelle-Orléans, (Mr. McCay) ce fut peut-être un malheur pour moi de devoir différer d'opinion, sur ce point, avec une grande majorité de ceux de mes collègues avec lesquels j'agis ordinairement de concert sur les questions qui sont soumises à l'attention du Sénat. Quand ce premier bill fut présenté à cette assemblée, je fis à ce sujet quelques remarques qui me vinrent à l'esprit dans ce moment, mais qui n'étaient nullement le résultat de réflexions antérieures. Dès le commencement, j'avais eu quelques doutes sur la justice du bill et je les exprimai dans les observations que je présentai alors dans cette enceinte. Ces doutes avaient pris naissance chez moi en entendant la lecture du bill; j'avais entendu les argumentations pour et contre, et je dois dire ici, que l'opinion que je m'étais formée ne fut pas ébranlée. Tout en déplorant de n'avoir pas partagé, sur ce point, l'avis de mes amis politiques, j'éprouve un certain sentiment d'orgueil en songeant que quelques-uns des honorables membres qui, alors, prêtèrent un chaleureux appui à cette mesure, ont déclaré, hier, en votant pour le déposer sur le bureau, que mon opinion était fondée.

Lor que le bill fut présenté au Sénat, le rapporteur du Comité Judiciaire, déploya en faveur du bill, toutes les splendeurs de sa parole vive et éloquente. Il l'éleva aux nues et nous assura qu'il était parfait, qu'aucun défaut n'en gâtait les admirables proportions.

Le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans qui avait présenté le bill s'arma pour le soutenir de toutes les ressources de son esprit subtil et rigoureux, de toute la force de sa puissante intelligence Le bras puissant et la logique serrée du rapporteur du Comité des Améliorations Intérieures furent également mis à contribution pour défendre cette mesure. Mais malgré la grande somme de talent, d'éloquence et de logique que mes savants collègues apportèrent à la discussion de la question, je sentis en lisant le bill qu'il contenait certaines dispositions que je ne pouvais pas sanctionner de mon vote, quelque chose d'anti-démocratique et qui, selon moi, établissait un odieux monopole. Mon devoir, comme sénateur démocrate, dont les principes dictent la conduite, me forçaient d'élever la voix contre le bill. C'est ce que je fis et je m'efforçai, autant qu'il était en moi, d'en faire ressortir les défauts et de mettre en évidence les raisons qui me portaient à le combattre. Plusieurs semaines se sont écoulées depuis la présentation du bill. Il a été référé à un comité spécial, et hier, il a de nouveau été soumis au Sénat. Ceux de mes collègues qui, d'abord, avaient fait tant d'éloges du bill, qui avaient déclaré que l'adoption de cette mesure était nécessaire aux intérêts de leurs commettants, ont témoigné, par leurs votes, de la justice de mon opposition Hier, le bill a été rejeté. Après mure délibération, après de longs débats, il a été déposé sur le bureau par le vote de ces mêmes sénateurs. Après cela, comment croire à leur infaillibilité? quel importance pouvons-nous attacher à leurs vues, quel poids pouvons-nous donner à leur opinion, lorsqu'ils viennent aujourd'hui proclamer que ce substitut est une œuvre parfaite?

En présence du fait que le bill primitif qu'ils déclaraient être parfait sous tous les rapports, a été mis de côté par leur propre vote, comment pouvons-nous les croire lorsqu'ils accordent les mêmes éloges au substitut qui est maintenant présenté par l'honorable membre de la Nouvelle-Orléans, (Mr. McCay) le même sénateur qui a introduit le bill primitif? Il se peut que le substitut soit bon; il se peut que les mesures qu'il propose soient de nature à recevoir l'approbation du Sénat, mais il faut, pour nous en convaincre, d'autres preuves que l'assurance que nous en donnent ces messieurs et d'autres garanties que leur recommendation. Ils nous ont dit que le bill primitif était parfait, et par leurs votes ils ont avoué le contraire. Il n'y a rien de plus beau que d'être toujours d'accord avec soi-même. Si j'avais été en faveur du bill primitif, si j'en avais fait l'éloge pompeux qu'en a fait l'honorable membre de la Nouvelle Orléans, je ne l'aurais jamais abandonné; je n'aurais jamais, par mon vote, démenti mes propres paroles, j'aurais été vainqueur ou vaincu avec le bill. Il résulte donc de ces faits, de deux choses l'une: ou que ces messieurs se sont trompés dans l'opinion qu'ils ont exprimée d'abord, et dans ce cas ils seraient mal venus, à prétendre maintenant à l'infaillibilité, ou bien ils ont voulu, en changeant seulement les expressions du bill, faire revenir de leur opposition, les sénateurs qui n'approuvaient pas la mesure primitive. Je maintiens qu'il n'y a pas de différence essentielle entre les deux bills, ou tout au moins elle n'est pas assez importante pour motiver un changement d'opinion sur les merites de la question. Je voterais pour l'un aussi bien que pour l'autre, et pour justifier ce que j'avance, je demande la lecture du substitut.

Le Secrétaire lit le substitut.

Je disais, lorsque j'ai demandé la lecture du substitut, qu'il n'y avait aucune différence entre ce projet et le bill primitif. Examinons la question et voyons si les faits viennent à l'appui de mon assertion. Le premier projet de loi qui a été présenté, donnait au shérif le droit de faire toutes les ventes de successions. On prétend que le substitut offre sur ce point, une différence essentielle. Mais quel exception établit il? Y en a-t il réellement une? Quoiqu'il en soit, je crois qu'elle existe plutôt dans l'imagination de quelques uns de mes collègues que dans le substitut. La seule exception qui y soit établie a trait aux propriétés des majeurs, mais pour les mineurs et les absents, les dispositions du projet primitif ne sont pas changées, et le shérif est chargé de toutes les ventes où ils sont intéressés. Où donc est l'application de cette exception? Mes honorables collegues n'ignorent pas que les majeurs n'ont pas besoin de faire vendre les propriétes qui leur échoient en héritage, et qu'un article de notre Code Civil dit qu'ils pourront effectuer entre eux le partage de la succession. C'est ce qui constitue en jurisprudence la différence entre un partage volontaire et un partage judiciaire. Il n'y a donc entre le bill primitif et le substitut aucune différence, la seule exception qui soit reconnue dans le dernier est pour un cas ou elle est déjé établie par la loi. S'il est dans cette enceinte un sénateur qui ait cru devoir refuser son appui au projet primitif, il ne peut sans se mettre en contradiction avec lui-même, élever la voix en faveur du substitut. Je le répète, messieurs, j'ai clairement prouvé qu'il n'y a aucune différence entre les deux bills. Comme je l'ai dit, le seul cas qui soit excepté est un cas où on n'a pas besoin d'avoir recours à des mesures judiciaires; un cas où le Code a pourvu à un partage volontaire; je le répète donc, il n'y a pas la moindre différence entre les deux projets.

Je m'étonne qu'avec les profondes connaissances légales que nous leur savons, certains sénateurs qui défendent ce bill cherchent à nous persuader qu'il y a entre les deux projets une différence assez grande pour pouvoir influer sur les objections que nous présentons à cette mesure. Ils parvien drout peut-être, à entraîner quelques esprits irréfléchis, mais leurs arguments ne soutiennent pas l'examen. A quoi bon nous dire qu'il y a une différence quand tout homme qui a la moindre connaissance des lois voit de prime abord, qu'elle n'existe pas.

Comme par votre vote d'hier vous vous êtes prononcés contre le bill, comme par ce fait vous avez retracté tout ce que vous aviez dit antérieurement en faveur de cette mesure ; comme vous avez avoué qu'il ne méritait pas votre appui, comme enfin je vous ai prouvé qu'il n'y a aucune différence entre les deux projets, je demande que vous votiez contre le substitut. Il faut que vous le fassiez si vous voulez être conséquents avec vous-mêmes. Si le bill primitif était mauvais, le substitut ne vaut pas mieux puisqu'il n'y a aucune différence entre les deux. Laissez-vous guider dans cette circonstance, par cet esprit de suite qui doit dicter les actions des hommes sérieux. Vous avez par vos votes, rejeté le bill primitif, repoussez également par vos votes, le substitut. Je vais maintenant tâcher de répondre à quelques-uns des arguments que l'honorable membre de la Nouvelle-Orléans, (Mr. McCay) a mis en avant dans le discours qu'il a prononcé hier. Je ferai remarquer d'abord que les raisons qu'il a alléguées ne peuvent avoir aucune influence sur mon esprit, et si je ne me trompe elles ne sont pas de nature à ébranler les convictions d'un seul de mes collègues. Quelle est en effet la position qu'il occupe? Il nous dit que l'affaire qui nous occupe n'est nullement une question de parti; et sur ce point nous sommes tout à fait d'accord.

A Dieu ne plaise que nous fassions de cette mesure une question politique ; la politique n'est pour rien dans cette affaire et je suis bien aise que l'honorable membre le reconnaisse comme moi. C'est tout simplement une question de droit et de justice, et le seul point sur lequel nous ayons à nous prononcer est de savoir si la mesure qui nous est soumise est bonne ou mauvaise, et c'est sous ce seul point de vue qu'un sénateur de la Louisiane doit envisager la question. Je suis libre de toute préoccupation politique et j'aime à croire que tous mes collègues en sont exempts. Examinons maintenant si les arguments que le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans s'est efforcé de faire valoir sont basés sur la loi ou sur une saine logique. Permettez-moi d'abord, de vous faire remarquer que je n'avais pas l'intention de présenter des observations sur le sujet qui nous occupe, beaucoup moins de faire un discours, et je n'aurais pas pris la parole si l'honorable membre de la Nouvelle Orléans ne s'était adressé, hier, à plusieurs reprises au sénateur des Rapides et des Avoyelles. Il nous disait que le substitut ne s'appliquait qu'à des enfants, à ces êtres faibles et sans protection, qui sont incapables de faire valoir eurs droits, et dont la loi doit sauvegarder les intérêts. Qu'il me soit permis de rappeler à l'honorable membre que les enfants n'ont pas le droit de former un contrat ; qu'ils sont mineurs et ne peuvent accomplir aucun acte légal. Mair, si je puis me servir de cette expression, les majeurs mettent les pieds dans leurs souliers. Par une fiction de la loi, les mineurs deviennent majeurs par la représentation. Ils sont majeurs en tant que représentés par leurs tuteurs. Mes honorables collègues souriront s'ils veulent, mais tout avocat reconnaîtra la vérité de ce que j'avance, et je le dis sans crainte d'être contredit.

Je dis que les mineurs deviennent majeurs par la représentation. L'acte du tuteur, alors qu'il se conforme à la loi, est regardé comme étant exercé par le mineur. Dans ces cas, les mineurs sont donc, à toutes fins, majeurs. L'honorable membre dit encore que les encanteurs ne sont pas des officiers assermentés et que ce sont les seuls officiers non-assermentés par les mains desquelles passent les propriétés. J'appelle l'attention des sénateurs sur la réponse à cette proposition. Je crois inutile de leur rappeler que le terme officier vient du mot latin officium qui veut dire devoir. L'honorable membre dit que l'encanteur n'est officier d'aucune cour Je conteste la vérité de cette proposition. Du moment où il reçoit l'ordre de faire une vente, il devient officier ad hoc negotium, pour cette affaire, il devient fonctionnaire de cette Cour. Il doit se conformer aux lois de cette Cour, et il est tenu responsable par elle pour le fidèle accomplissement de son devoir.

Permettez-moi, de citer un exemple à l'appui de ce principe. Supposez que je demande à une Cour une commission pour prendre des témoignages dans un autre Etat—le Kentucky, le Texas et l'Ohio. Si je nomme l'individu et que ce soit un magistrat autorisé à prendre des dépositions, il devient, du moment que l'ordre est émis, un officier de cette Cour sans avoir besoin pour cela, ni d'un certificat du gouverneur ni même de son sceau. Mais si je nomme pas cet individu il faut que le gouverneur de l'Etat certifie qu'il était Juge de Paix à cette époque. Ainsi, nous voyons qu'un citoyen du Kentucky ou d'un autre Etat peut, pour un objet spécial, devenir officier d'une Cour.

Permettez-moi maintenant de vous demander si le shérif est l'officier d'une Cour pour faire les ventes judiciaires, à moins qu'il ne soit nommé à cet effet comme un encanteur. Les parties intéressées peuvent demander que le shérif fasse leurs ventes, si elles veulent, mais avant d'en recevoir l'ordre, il n'est pas plus un officier de la Cour que ne l'est un encanteur. Respectez les intelligences ordinaires ! Ne vous figurez pas que le pays ait envoyé sur ces bancs des sénateurs incapables de porter un jugement dans les questions les plus simples ou de découvrir une fausseté évidente. Ne vous faites pas cette illusion. Nous ne prétendons pas à l'éloquence, au talent et à l'instruction qui caractérisent certains sénateurs, mais nous demandons le respect qui est dû aux intelligences même les plus faibles et les plus modestes. Nous ne nous vantons pas de l'éclat de notre rhétorique, de l'éloquence de notre élocution, de la profondeur de notre logique ; il se peut que nous soyons rudes dans nos expressions et peu poétiques dans nos discours, mais nous prétendons avoir du moins le sens commun et un jugement droit. Ne proposez donc pas un bill qui, comme celui-ci, doit choquer l'intelligence ordinaire des hommes ordinaires. Je passerai maintenant à l'examen de quelques autres objections présentées par l'honorable membre, du système qui régit aujourd'hui les ventes judiciaires. Il y a à ma connaissance un cas qu'il nous a cité et où des propriétés ont été vendues vendues à une perte énorme. Il a donné à entendre que les encanteurs, en s'entendant avec des administrateurs qui ne seraient pas honnêtes, peuvent suivre tel marché que bon leur semble.

Je ne veux pas admettre, pas même pour les besoins de la cause, que tous les administrateurs soient nécessairement gens de mauvaise foi. Je crois que généralement ils ont à cœur, les intérêts qui leur sont confiés. Mais, permettez-moi de vous rappeler que les encanteurs ne peuvent pas, dans les ventes judiciaires, disposer des propriétés dans la manière et au prix que bon leur semble. On nomme toujours des commissaires-priseurs assermentés, chargés d'estimer la valeur de la propriété de manière à prévenir toute fraude. Une propriété qui vaudrait mille piastres ne peut pas être adjugée pour cinquante ou pour cent piastres comme l'honorable membre voudrait nous le faire croire. Dans tous les cas, il y a des commissaires-priseurs qui ont prêté serment de remplir fidèlement leur devoir. Pour ma part, je ne me laisserai jamais séduire par ces arguments, ad captandum vulgus. Ils peuvent embarrasser certaines gens, mais ils ne sauraient égarer un esprit qui réfléchit et qui raisonne. Cette objection tombe donc à plat: touchée par le glaive de la raison et de la vérité, elle s'évanouit dans l'air.

Dans le courant de la discussion, on a parlé des honoraires. Pour ma part, je n'ai jamais attaché une grande importance à ce côté de la question. Il ne s'agit pas de savoir ce que telle ou telle personne reçoit ou voudrait recevoir. Nous n'avons à nous occuper que de savoir si la loi qui nous est soumise est bonne ou non. Améliorerait-elle le système qui est maintenant en vigueur? ou ne serait-elle, au contraire, qu'injuste dans son application et nuisible dans ses effets?

Peu m'importe que le shérif actuel de la Nlle-Orléans, soit millionnaire; peu m'importe qu'il soit riche ou pauvre, ce sont là des choses dont je ne me préoccupe pas. Mr. Marigny a récemment été élu shérif. Il a trouvé la place telle qu'il la briguait. S'il n'a pas trouvé la place aussi lucrative qu'il se l'imaginait, j'en suis désolé pour lui, mais je ne puis faire une injustice pour le servir. Revenons maintenant à la question. Quel avantage résultera-t-il de cette loi? Est-ce une panacée destinée à guérir tous les maux que l'honorable membre entrevoit dans le système actuel? Rendra t-elle les tuteurs, les curateurs et les administrateurs, fidèles et honnêtes? Je ne le crois pas. Les administrateurs prévaricateurs resteront prévaricateurs, et les tuteurs malhonnêtes ne deviendront pas intègres.

Je vois au contraire, que cette mesure créera une odieuse tyrannie, un monopole insupportable. Nous pourrions tout aussi bien adopter une loi qui forcerait les planteurs à consigner tout leur coton et tout leur sucre à une seule maison que de les priver de vendre leurs propriétés comme ils l'entendent. Cette proposition renferme pour moi, quelque chose de si radicalement anti-républicain, que je ne peux et ne veux pas y donner mon concours. Je ne me sers pas du mot démocratique dans le sens qu'on y attache dans nos distinctions de parti, mais j'entends justice et droit républicain. Je l'emploie dans l'acception qui a fait de ce pays, ce grand et puissant état qui est l'admiration du monde, cet édifice élevé par la sagesse et la valeur des philosophes, des héros et des patriotes; dans cet esprit qui a fait de notre pays un arbre majestueux qui, arrosé par le sang de nos pères, croît vigoureusement, projette au loin ses rameaux protecteurs et couvre de son ombre bienfaisante les enfants de leurs climats. C'est le chêne gigantesque qui protège et abrite sous son épais feuillage les mille plantes qui se groupent autour de lui. Voilà dans quel sens je me suis servi de ce mot et non dans l'acception moderne qui ne contient que la moitié de la véritable signification.

Je répète que dans ce sens, le bill contient un principe anti démocratique, un principe qui répugne à nos idées de justice républicaine. J'aime à voir que mon honorable collègue n'ait pas voulu faire de cette affaire une question politique, et si on avait voulu l'envisager sous ce point de vue, moi au moins, je me serais certainement élevé au-dessus de telles considérations. Je suis également charmé que les sénateurs mêmes qui avaient présenté cette mesure aient témoigné par leurs votes, la justice de mon opposition. Je suis aussi aise qu'ils aient ainsi approuvé la position que j'avais prise et qu'ils aient virtuellement déclaré que j'avais eu raison de me prononcer contre le bill primitif. Je m'y suis opposé dès le commencement et je continuerai à le combattre aussi longtemps que le droit et la justice seront de mon côté.

Mr. Lacey,

Ce serait faire violence à mes sentiments, je l'avoue, que de ne pas exprimer mon admiration pour la candeur et l'évidente sincérité de l'honorable sénateur des Rapides. Je consens à accorder à ceux qui sont opposés au bill autant d'honnêteté au moins qu'à ceux qui le défendent. Si le sénateur doit apprendre avec plaisir qu'il a renversé le bill originel, je consens à le lui laisser goûter à son aise. Je ne désirerais pas le troubler dans la jouissance de ce plaisir qu'il savoure avec tant de volupté.

Je n'ai pas besoin, je crois de rappeler ici cette vérité banale, que l'homme est faillible même alors qu'il est sénateur. Dieu seul est infaillible. Si le sénateur doit apprendre avec plaisir que mon opinion a changé et que je me suis rangé à la sienne, mon Dieu ! qu'il le croie. Je ne m'y oppose pas. Je dois dire pourtant que tel n'est pas le cas ; que je n'ai pas du tout changé d'opinion. Seulement afin d'arriver enfin à un résultat après tant de débats et de discussions longues et fatiguantes, je me suis résigné à un compromis qui put rallier toutes les opinions; c'est là tout ce que j'ai fait, tout ce que j'ai voulu faire. J'espère que mes collègues ne s'arrêteront plus à des futilités, qu'ils ne s'armeront plus de technicalités et qu'ils laisseront enfin arriver le substitut. Je n'ai pas l'intention de faire un discours sur cette question, car déjà il n'en a été que trop souvent et trop longuement question; je désire seulement que l'on sache que ma conduite n'est influencée par rien que je ne puisse avouer. Qu'était le bill originel? Il avait pour but d'accorder au shérif, le droit de faire toutes les ventes judiciaires? Et qu'elle a été ma position relativement à ce bill? Vous la connaissez tous et l'expliquer de nouveau ici, serait fort inutile.

Mr. Trudeau,

J'appelle à l'ordre le sénateur. Il n'y a qu'un substitut devant le Sénat, et c'est celui qui a été présenté par le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Parler d'un ordre est manquer au règlement.

Mr. Lacey,

Je désire tout exposer devant le Sénat. Mes idées n'ont aucunement changé. Je suis disposé à concourir avec vous pour que le substitut du sénateur d'Est Féliciana, soit pris en considération. Quelques personnes ont cru que voter contre, la motion du sénateur de l'Ascension, serait s'engager en faveur du substitut présenté par le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans. C'est là une grande erreur. Seulement, nous pourrons évoquer à son tour celui du sénateur d'Est Féliciana. Le sénateur de l'Ascension qui a si bien, si longuement discuté les mérites de la question au point de vue qu'il favorise ne persistera pas, je l'espère, à s'opposer à la prise en considération, du substitut additionnel. Je demande au Sénat de se joindre à moi, pour obtenir ce que je cherche. Que tout soit mis devant le Sénat; considérons tous les projets, tous les plans soumis.

Je vote contre la motion du sénateur de l'Ascension, non dans le but de faire rejeter le substitut du sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans, mais pour faire prendre en considération l'autre substitut.

Je le répète, en cela, je ne suis pas influencé par des considérations de parti. Je crois que le changement proposé est juste, parfaitement juste ; mais comme je ne pense pas que le bill qui est maintenant devant le Sénat, obtienne une majorité des votes, je n'insisterai pas là dessus. Seulement, je désire que l'autre bill ne soit pas détruit lorsqu'il n'est encore qu'à l'état d'embryon, sans qu'il ait vu le jour, sans qu'on ait pu le lire, l'examiner, en étudier les dispositions, en apprécier les mérites, en discuter les principes.

Mr Trudeau,

Après les paroles éloquentes qu'ont prononcées le sénateur de l'Ascension, (Mr Kenner) et le sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans, (Mr. McCay) il peut sembler présomptueux de ma part de prendre la parole sur une question qui a été si bien, si longuement, si profondément discutée Je me bornerai donc dans les remarques que je vais faire à quelques points qui sont d'un intérêt tout local.

J'ai essayé de prendre note de quelques uns des arguments du dernier orateur qui vient de prendre la parole et je crois qu'il ne serait pas difficile d'y répondre, si j'en avais le loisir maintenant ; mais cette question me semble décidée ou à peu près, et je n'y insisterai plus.

MESSAGE A LA CHAMBRE.

Le secrétaire-adjoint du Sénat va informer la Chambre que le Sénat a donné son adhésion aux bill suivants de la Chambre.

Acte pour autoriser Louis Auguste Leonold Bernard à faire certaines dispositions de ses propriétés.

Acte pour venir au secours de Peter K. Wagner, imprimeur de l'Etat en 1847, 1848 et 1849.

Et avec amendement au bill intitulé acte pour créer un gardien du port pour le 4me district de la Nouvelle Orléans.

Et il demande le concours de la Chambre aux bills suivants du Sénat.

Mr. Lacey, au nom du Comite Judiciaire, fait un rapport en faveur du bill intitulé acte pour amender la 30e section de l'acte intitulé acte pour établir un système uniforme d'élection dans l'Etat de la Louisiane. (la paroisse d'Orléans exceptée.)

Il rapporte contre le bill intitulé acte relatif à la nomination des administrateurs dans certains cas.

Il rapporte avec amendement en faveur du bill intitulé acte pour ratifier le cautionnement fourni par le shérif de la paroisse de St. Landry, dans sa capacité officielle.

Il rapporte contre le bill intitulé acte pour prendre le vote du peuple de l'Etat sur la nécessité de changer le siège du Gouvernement de la ville de Baton Rouge à la ville de la Nouvelle Orléans.

Il rapporte en faveur du bill intitulé acte pour amender l'acte intitulé acte pour pourvoir au transfert de certains documents publics du 4me district de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans à la paroisse de Jefferson.

SEANCE DU SOIR.

VENDREDI 10 mars 1853.

BILL POUR VENIR AU SECOURS DE WILLIAM GILL.

Mr Martel,

Le comité de la milice a examiné cette question et il est venu à la conclusion que cette réclamation est juste. Il a en conséquence rédigé le bill dont lecture vient d'être donnée. Je vais lire la loi d'après laquelle ces services ont été rendus. (Il lit la loi.)

La loi que je viens de lire s'explique d'elle-même. Elle imposait au pétitionnaire qui était alors Juge de Paix le devoir qu'il a rempli : elle dit de plus que ce service doit être fait aux frais de l'Etat.

Mr De Russy,

Que les frais d'emprisonnement soient payés simplement par l'Etat, il n'importe. Ce n'est qu'une question d'équité et de justice. Ce Mr Gill a été appelé à juger ces personnes qui étaient absentes de leurs devoirs. Plusieurs ne voulurent pas payer et conséquemment il fut forcé de les envoyer en prison. Il présenta pour cela un compte de $700 qui est réduit à trois cents quinze piastres. Il présente des listes de noms montrant le nombre d'affaires portées devant lui et le nombre de personnes envoyées en prison.

Si jamais réclamation fut juste c'est bien celle-ci. La loi dirait distinctement que si quelqu'un refusait de payer il devait être emprisonné aux frais de l'Etat. La rémunération du juge devait également être payée par l'Etat. Cette demande est bien insignifiante, bien faible. Le pétitionnaire a rempli les devoirs que la loi lui imposait, il les a remplis fidèlement, consciencieusement, il doit être payé.

Mr King,

Les nombreux coups de lancette donnés au trésor public sont de nature à causer de justes alarmes. Ce peuvent être de petites saignées, mais plusieurs petites saignées, dit-on en style vulgaire, en font une bonne. Il se peut que l'on considère cette réclamation comme bonne et juste; pour moi je ne pense pas ainsi. L'intention de la loi était que les prisonniers payassent eux-mêmes les frais, et en cas de refus de leur part, le dernier recours devait être l'emprisonnement. (Il lit la loi) On voit donc que ces personnes-là doivent être retenues en prison aux frais de l'Etat; mais ne doit pas payer tous les frais y compris ceux de la rémunération du juge.

Mr le Président,

Si l'Etat était tenu de payer toutes les réclamations de ce genre il ne faudrait pas moins de cent mille piastres pour satisfaire à toutes les demandes. A la Nouvelle Orléans il y a un très grand nombre de cas de cette nature et il pourrait être présenté à ce sujet un compte très considérable. Nous donnerons lieu à de grands mécontentements si nous commençons à payer des réclamations résultant d'une loi qui dans tous les cas a été répudiée par le peuple. On se rappelle qu'il y a quelques années on voulut essayer de rendre obligatoires les devoirs de la milice à peu près de la même manière qu'à présent. Nous savons tous comment cette mesure a été reçue et quel succès elle a obtenu.

Mr Munday,

Le Sénateur de Natchitoches nous a dit que cette réclamation est très peu de chose. Je ne vois pas en quoi cela se rapporte à la question qui nous occupe. Une faible réclamation doit être soumise à la même investigation sévère qu'une réclamation importante. Dire qu'elle est peu importante n'est pas du tout pour moi un argument en sa faveur. Cependant quelque faible quelle soit, si nous l'acceptons, nous nous condamnerons à nous accepter des centaines d'autres qui réunies formeront une somme considérable. Il y a huit de ces magistrats dans chacune des paroisses de l'Etat. Puis nous devons compter les commandants de divisions, de brigades et de régiments, les officiers etbalternes, etc., etc., et en total nous verrons qu'il n'y a pas moins de plusieurs centaines de cas parfaitement semblables à celui qui nous occupe. Je ne puis croire que l'intention de la loi fut que la rémunération des juges instructeurs fut payée par l'Etat.

On dit que ces frais n'ont pas été calculés. Lorsqu'un homme est mis en prison pour un motif de cette nature, on suppose qu'il est insolvable et alors l'Etat paye les frais. Cette somme peut être très faible et comme nous touchons au terme de la session actuelle, il est possible qu'on ne nous présente pas immédiatement les centaines de reclamations de la nature dont j'ai parlé déja. Mais à la prochaine session elles fondront sur nous comme une grêle, comme une avalauche et comment pourrons-nous refuser de les payer si nous établis sons une fois au président ? La Législature de 1834 était, je n'en doute pas, aussi bien composée, aussi intelligente que celle-ci et cependant je suis bien convaincu que la Législature actuelle ne passerait jamais une semblable loi. Je donne en fait que ces personnes n'étaient pas insolvables et on aurait dû les contraindre à payer. Il n'est pas prouvé qu'il y ait eu un seul cas d'emprisonnement.

Mr Martel,

Je ne suis pas disposé à fatiguer, sur ce sujet plus que sur aucun autre, le Sénat de longs discours, mais j'ai entendu discuter des réclamations de quinze mille et de cinquante mille piastres et j'ai vu à ce propos des Sénateurs se lever de leurs siéges pour soutenir que des individus auraient droit non seulement à leurs salaires réguliers et au payement du prix du travail exécuté réellement mais aussi à celui d'un travail qui aurait pu être accompli, et des profits qui auraient pu être réalisés. Lorsque je revis des Sénateurs soutenir la demande pour des milliers de piastres présentée pour l'impression d'une douzaine de feuilles de papier, et s'opposer ensuite à la juste réclamation d'une personne qui se présente ici les mains nettes et qui demande payement pour des travaux réellement exécutés, je dois le dire, cela m'étonne. Le comité a examiné tous les documents présentés, et a trouvé la réclamation raisonnable et correcte. Comment donc des Sénateurs peuvent-ils s'opposer à une réclamation juste, en se basant sur ce motif que l'accepter serait nous exposer à voir arriver devant nous de pareilles réclamations. Je répète que le comité a axaminé attentivement cette affaire, et est satisfait de la justesse de la réclamation. Personne n'est plus que moi dans le Sénat opposé à des réclamations mensongères, mais quand j'en rencontre une basée sur la loi et la justesse, je n'hésite pas à l'appuyer. Je demande au Sénat de ne pas réjeter ce bill sans mûrement examiner le sujet. La loi n'entend pas que les juges à la Nouvelle-Orléans puissent emprisonner, mais elle ne s'est pas occupée des cas où des juges de paix pourraient avoir à le faire. Quant à moi, je vote pour le bill persuadé, que je suis, que la demande est juste et doit être satisfaite.

Mr De Russy,

Je ne désire pas fatiguer le Sénat de nouvelles remarques sur ce sujet; mais lorsque je suis convaincu de la justesse d'une réclamation, comme je le suis dans ce cas particulier, je ne puis rester les bras croisés, et permettre sans venir à leur secours, qu'on essaye de priver un honnête homme de recevoir ce qui lui est dû. Nous avons devant nous l'affidavit de Mr Gill, citoyen âgé et respectable, établissant ce qu'il a fait. Ce témoignage est fortifié par le témoignage de Mr Dufrocq, maire de cette ville. Des Sénateurs disent que ce n'est pas une réclamation fondée. Examinons combien Mr Gill a versé au trésor de l'Etat avant de produire sa demande pour trois cents quinze piastres. En nous rapportant aux documents nous voyons qu'il a commencé par l'affaire No 1115 Qu'a-t-on fait des autres? Parce que les amendes collectées ont été versées au trésor. Est-ce la façon convenable de traiter un honnête homme qui a bien et loyalement rempli ses devoirs envers l'Etat? Non certes Les mêmes Sénateurs qui s'opposent à cette réclamation savent en soutenir d'autres qui sont moins bien fondées. J'espère que le bill sera adopté

Mr Kittridge présente un amendement portant que toutes réclamations semblables soient payées par l'Etat

Mr Trudeau,

Je crois l'amendement convenable et je voterai pour. Le comité trouve la réclamation juste, certainement nous devons payer, toutes celles de la même nature.

Mr King,

Je pense qu'au moins cinquante mille piastres seront nécessaires pour payer toutes celles qui peuvent être présentées—Je demande par conséquent une allocation de cinquante mille piastres pour les couvrir.

Mr Martel,

Je fais la motion que les amendemens soient déposés sur le bureau.

Mr Munday,

Le Sénateur des Natchitoches dit que Mr Gill a commencé au No 1115—C'est seulement là le numéro de l'affaire—Tous les juges de paix numérotent les affaires sur leurs régistres. C'est là son numéro d'ordre et non le numéro qui se rapporte à ces affaires de l'année.

Mr Martel,

Mr Gill réclame seulement 71 affaires.

Mr Hodge,

Je n'ai pas examiné la question et je demande par conséquent à être dispensé de voter.

Le bill et les amendemens sont déposés sur le bureau.

LE S. W. M.

Mr Mac Murdo,

Je demande la prise en considération du bill incorporant les s.w. m. de l'Etat de la Louisiane.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je désire avoir quelques renseignements avant de voter sur ce bill. Je crois que le Sénateur est membre de cet ordre et il pourra probablement nous en dire quelque chose.

Mr Mac Murdo,

J'ai été élu membre il est vrai mais on ne ma jamais initié aux mystères de l'ordre—Je suis informé par un individu qui malheureusement ne fait pas partie du Sénat que le but est la charité, etc.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je n'ai pas d'objection au bill.

Mr Trudeau,

Je désire savoir ce que s. w. m. veut dire.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je suppose que cela signifie seven wise men (les sept hommes sages).

Mr Evans,

Je désire connaitre quelque chose de l'objet de cette société avant de donner mon vote pour l'incorporer. Elle pourrait avoir pour but de renverser le gouvernement, de prendre l'Ile de Cube ou d'accomplir quelqu'acte tout aussi désespéré.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je suis étonné de l'objection que fait le Sénateur de Claiborne. J'ai déjà dit que l'honorable président du comité de finances est un membre de cette société et que par conséquent il n'a pas à craindre que le gouvernement soit renversé par les actes de cette société. C'est un ordre secret comme les Odd Fellows, les Maçons et d'autres, et comme eux il a pour but la charité. On m'assure que pendant la dernière épidémie, ses membres ont secouru beaucoup de malades et ont accompli beaucoup de bien.

Digitized by Google

Le bill est adopté.

DISCUSSION DE LA COUR SUPREME.

La discussion s'engage sur le bill des salaires du rapporteur de la Cour Suprême.

Mr Hodge,

Je désire savoir de quel travail parle le bill. Si je ne suis pas dans l'erreur le salaire de 1852 est le 6e tableau Il n'est pas encore imprimé. La condition du bill est que l'argent ne sera compté qu'après le travail achevé. Est-ce un procédé usuel? Cela semble donner à entendre que le rapporteur avait le dessein de prendre son salaire sans faire le travail. Le rapporteur est un des officiers de l'Etat C'est son devoir que de faire l'arrenage avant que de venir demander payement, et je ne doute pas qu'il ne remplisse son devoir.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je fais la motion de retrancher le proviso.

Le proviso est supprimé et le bill est adopté.

LA RIVIERE OUACHITA.

Le bill pour allouer mille cinq cents piastres pour le relevé de la rivière Ouachita est pris en considération.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je ne comprends pas qu'on donne 1,500 piastres à un officier pour faire un travail qui fait partie de ses devoirs. Je n'approuve pas un pareil système. Je pense que ce bill doit être renvoyé au comité convenable.

Mr Boatner,

Je félicite le Sénateur de l'Est Féliciana de son zèle dans cette affaire. Mais s'il connaissait cette section du pays comme je la connais il ne s'opposerait pas à ce bill comme il le fait. Si ses dispositions sont adoptées le résultat sera l'ouverture de la navigation du Ouachita sur une grande étendue et le bénéfice de la population agricole de la vallée du Ouachita et du commerce et des relations de toute cette section. L'ingénieur a instruit le comité de l'autre Chambre que par suite des affaires qui sont maintenant en train dans son bureau il lui sera impossible de veiller lui-même à ce travail. Ce fait a engagé le comité à rapporter en faveur d'une allocation qui permette d'envoyer un député. Il n'y avait pas d'autre manière d'arriver au résultat. L'Etat ne nous a jamais accordé une grande attention dans cette section et je pense qu'il nous est dû quelque chose. Je m'oppose au renvoi.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je pense que c'est un mauvais système de législation que celui qui consiste à charger un officier de s'occuper de toutes les choses de ce genre. Le bill propose mille cinq cents piastres pour faire ce qui rentre dans ses devoirs—Je suis opposé à donner d'une part à un ingénieur trois mille cinq cents piastres pour faire le travail en général et de lui en donner mille cinq cents pour faire un travail en particulier. Si c'est une chose vraiment nécessaire et s'il est indispensable qu'elle soit faite ainsi, le comité rapportera sans doute un bill favorable. Le fait que pareil rapport a déjà eu lieu dans l'autre Chambre n'est point une règle pour nous. Beaucoup de bills sont ici rejetés après avoir été rapportés unanimement dans l'autre Chambre. L'endossement du comité de l'autre chambre n'est point assez pour nous. Je crois que le bill doit être référé—Si je suis forcé de voter à présent j'enregistrerai mon vote contre le système qui consiste à accorder à un hommes des salaires extras pour faire son devoir.

Mr Lacey,

Si ce bill est référé ce délai peut lui être fatal—Il est vrai de dire comme l'a fait remarquer le Sénateur de Caldwell que cette section a reçu peu d'attention de la part de l'Etat. Il est temps de faire quelque chose pour elle et nous ne pourrions mieux commencer qu'en procédant à ce travail nécessaire. L'ingénieur ne peut le faire en conséquence des affaires multipliées qui se sont accumulées dans son bureau Un député est par conséquent nécessaire. Ce bill a déjà été examiné par un comité dans l'autre chambre et j'espère qu'on ne mettra pas en danger son existence par le renvoi proposé.

Mr Wickliffe,

L'ingénieur a déjà un député payé par l'Etat.

Mr McCay,

C'est là une allocation extra ordinaire ayant eu but un seul objet et presqu'égal à la moitié du salaire payé à l'ingénieur d'Etat. C'est une somme assez ronde pour six mois de travail. La chose me dit-on a déjà été faite par l'Etat dans d'autres cas, mais on a mal fait suivant moi. Si le comité rapporte que la somme demandée est nécessaire, je voterai pour le bill.

Mr King,

Je crois que cette allocation est convenable. Il y a dans la rivière Ouachita deux ou trois chûtes qui, dans les eaux basses, la rendent innavigable presqu'autant que la rivière Rouge. L'intérêt commercial de la Nouvelle-Orléans en a souffert immensément. Mille cinq cents piastres sont peut-être trop, mais je ne désire pas allouer toute la somme pour le même cours d'eau. Nous avons consacré de fortes sommes d'argent à la Rivière Rouge. Il est bon de donner maintenant quelque chose au Ouachita.

Mr Moore,

Plutôt que d'adopter l'amendement proposé il vaut mieux retrancher entièrement le section—L'ingénieur m'a dit que si nous lui donnons assez dans le bill des allocations générales pour qu'il puisse payer les dépenses il ne demandera rien de plus.

Mr Boatner,

On a dit que ce travail avait déjà été fait une fois—Je dirai comment l'ingénieur, Mr Wooldridge vint s'embarquer sur la rivière à Monroe et la descendit en skiff—Il s'arrêta pour dîner chez le major King et continua ensuite jusqu'à Harrisonburg. Il ne fit pas d'autre examen que celui qu'il pouvait faire en descendant en skiff comme je l'ai dit—L'ingénieur a reçu une fois déjà l'ordre de faire ce travail, mais il ne s'est jamais rendu jusqu'à l'endroit et je pense qu'il ne ferait rien aujourd'hui à moins d'y être forcé.

Mr Hodge,

Je désire savoir si la Législature n'a pas ordonné l'enlèvement de certaines roches? Je crois qu'oui—L'ingénieur donna pour raison de la non-exécution de cet ordre qu'il n'avait pas de bateau convenable pour le faire, mais qu'il y en avait un en construction.

Mr Boatner,

Je ne me rappelle pas les circonstances dont parle le Sénateur—Je me rappelle que le relevé a été ordonné et qu'on s'est excusé de ne pas le faire par l'existence de la fièvre jaune—Je répète que cet ouvrage est indispensable, une fois achevé il accroîtra la navigation d'aumoins 125 milles—Ce n'est que récemment qu'un bateau a pu cette année

Digitized by Google

remonté la rivière. Il avait été donné aussi des instructions à propos de la Petite Riviere, cours d'eau très important et qui augmente en importance chaque annee—L'ingénieur a répondu au colonel Campbell, président du comité dans l'autre Chambre, qu'il était important que l'ingénieur donnat à ces matières son attention personnelle. Le bill porte écrit de la main du colonel Campbell un rapport unanime en sa faveur. Je suis certain qu'il a subi un examen approfondi.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je désire qu'il soit entendu que je ne suis pas opposé à ce bill et que je ne veux pas priver le peuple de cette section du bénéfice de la navigation, mais je suis, en termes généraux, opposé à ce système de législation—Je ne veux pas payer à l'ingénieur des sommes supplémentaires pour faire ce qu'il doit faire. Si un assistant est nécessaire, on le lui donnera—Je suis en faveur de la suggestion faite par le Sénateur de St. Martin (Mr Moore) Adoptons tout le bill hormis cette section et comprenons dans le bill des allocations générales suffisamment pour payer ce travail extra.

Mr Lacey,

Il me semble que c'est là un travail très important, actuellement nécessaire pour cette section de l'Etat et en même temps d'un grand intérêt pour la population commerciale de la Nouvelle-Orléans —Il serait étrange qu'après avoir ce matin alloué cinq mille piastres pour une rivière nous refusions mille cinq cents piastres pour une autre.

Mr Hodge,

L'allocation dont parle le Sénateur était pour la Rivière Rouge et, comme je l'ai demandée, je profite de l'occasion pour expliquer de nouveau les circonstances de ce cas special—L'allocation était pour un travail spécial—Si le Séanteur veut me montrer que cette allocation est indispensable pour poursuivre le travail commencé, je voterai pour le bill—J'ai dit que le relevé avait déjà été fait parce que j'ai rencontré à Monroe Mr Wooldridge alors ingénieur d'Etat pendant qu'il était occupé à le faire et qu'il me dit être en train d'y procéder. Je ne ne suis rien de la descente dans un skiff bien que sans doute elle ait eu lieu comme l'a dit le Sénateur. Ce que je sais c'est qu'il m'a dit qu'il était alors en train de procéder à un travail, et s'il a été fait, je ne vois pas de nécessité à le recommencer. Je ne nie pas que ce ne soit là un ouvrage important. Au contraire je suis d'accord sur tout ce qui a été dit à ce sujet. Pour ma part, je désire le voir achevé—Je ne suis pas en faveur d'un système de lésinérie à propos de nos améliorations intérieures —Je désire que l'argent soit réellement dépensé dans ce but et ne soit pas gaspillé. Chaque piastre dépensée pour des améliorations intérieures nous reviendra quadruplée—Je suis également en faveur des élections des officiers par le peuple que je crois être parfaitement compétent pour cela—J'espère que nous n'aurons jamais des officiers assez négligents pour qu'il soit nécessaire de faire faire leur travail par un autre. Je répète que j'ai rencontré à Monroe Mr Wooldrige lors qu'il procédait à cette même opération. Il me dit alors qu'il était en train de faire le relevé et je présume qu'il l'a fait. Est-il possible qu'il ait été assez négligent pour qu'il faille aujourd'hui recommencer ce travail ? Je ne fais pas de réflexions sur notre présent Ingénieur, je crois qu'il veut agir aussi bien qu'il le peut. Si l'on peut me convaincre que ce montant est nécessaire pour exécuter l'objet proposé, je voterai pour le bill avec empressement. Il vaut donc mieux attendre le bill des allocations générales.

Mr Boatner,

Je ne puis pas dire ex-cathedra que le travail coutera exactement la somme spécifiée dans ce bill.

Mr Hodge,

Si l'ingénieur veut employer los fonds économique ou ne point employer un assistant hautement retribué parce que les fonds ont été alloués, je suis prêt à lui donner ce qu'on demande.

Mr Boatner,

Je n'ai pas d'objection à ce que la dépense de la somme soit entourée de toutes les restrictions convenables—Je ne désire pas certainement voir cet argent gaspillé—Le président ingénieur, Mr Wooldridge, homme estimable, visita la rivière en conséquence de l'ordre de la Législature. Les faits que j'ai signalés sont malheureusement notoires—Il parcourut plus de 150 milles en deux jours—Certainement qu'un relevé fait avec soin ne pourrait être fais dans un pareil temps—Il fit un rapport dans lequel il fut établi qu'il y avait des barres là où dans le fait il n'en a jamais existé—Ce sont là des faits de notoriété publique et connus de tous les habitans du pays. Je répète que je suis prêt à approuver toute restriction raisonnable qui sera imposée—Non pour empêcher l'ingénieur de faire son travail mais pour prévenir le gaspillage de l'argent, il serait convenable que dans ce but un rapport fut ordonné pour être présenté à la Législature prochaine.

Mr Munday,

Quand ce bill a été pris en considération, je l'ai pris pour un autre. Le bill a été adopté par l'autre Chambre allouant mille piastres pour le relevé du Bayou Bœuf—Dans ce cas aussi l'ingenieur dit qu'il n'a pas le temps de faire le travail lui-même mais qu'il peut le faire faire pour mille piastres. C'est un travail très important. Il y a sur le Bayou un grand nombre de sucreries qui n'ont pas d'autre voie de transporter leurs produits sur le marché. Il y a dans ce moment une grande quantité de sucre et de mélasse accumulées sur ses bords et qui ne peut être expédiés. L'ingénieur reconnait l'importance du travail; pour mille piastres il peut s'assurer les services d'un assistant ingénieur et faire exécuter l'ouvrage. C'est à dire un relevé sur lequel on puisse opérer. Ma section ne me demande rien semblable à l'Etat, mais je crois toujours avec plaisir que les autres sections sont aidées proportionnellement à nos moyens. Le peuple de ce Bayou a gravement souffert par l'absence de voies de communications convenables et permanentes avec le marché de la Nlle-Orléans et avec la communauté commerciale de cette ville—Il en est résulté pour lui de grands inconvéniens. Ces deux relevés peuvent être faits par la même personne et donner ainsi lieu à une économie. Le Sénateur des Natchitoches verra mieux que moi s'il doit en résulter quelque différence. Je pense qu'une seule personne pourrait faire les deux pour moins de deux milie cinq cents—On pourrait encore en en inclure d'autres de même nature qui peuvent exister. Je crois que nous devons tendre à faire le plus de bien avec le moins d'argent possible et ménager, autant que cela se peut nos ressources.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je pense que la suggestion du Sénateur de St. Martin doit être adoptée. Ordonnons à l'ingénieur de faire le travail et incluons la somme qu'il faut pour cela dans le bill des allocations générales—Je presente moi même une motion à cet effet et j'ajoute un proviso ajoutant que l'allocation ne fera pas partie de l'allocation générale, si un ingénieur assistant est nommé.

Mr Hodge,

J'offrirai un autre proviso afin que si un ingé-

Digitized by Google

nieur assistant est nommé ce soit le premier travail auquel il procède.

Mr Munday,

Je désire que les deux travaux soient faits. Référons les bill au comite des améliorations intérieures qui peut demain présenter son rapport.

Mr Boatner,

J'ai une objection à l'amendement mais nous sommes si rapprochés du moment de la clôture que d'un retard peut dépendre l'existence du bill.

Mr Wickliffe,

Le Sénateur veut-il lui dire qu'il ne peut pas en résulter plus d'un quart d'heure de retard. Le bill sera envoyé demain à la Chambre qui sans aucun doute le considérera et lui donnera son concours. La Chambre ne peut pas avoir d'objection à allouer l'argent du trésor lorsque l'allocation ne peut être exécutée que dans certaines conditions. En tous cas ce bill doit retourner à la Chambre—Il faut qu'il y aille pour être signé par l'Orateur et y subir certaines formalités. Cet amendement ne peut retarder le bill et il lui sera au contraire favorable.

Mr Boatner,

Le Sénateur se trompe. La Chambre a adopté une règle dont elle ne se départ pas. C'est de ne donner aucun tour de faveur à un bill. Un comité a été ce matin désigné pour choisir les bills nécessaires à adopter et pour mettre les autres de côté. Ce bill ne pourrait pas être appele avant vendredi prochain et il faudrait qu'il passât par toutes les formalités dont le Sénateur a parlé. Le priviso me convient. Je crois moi même qu'il rend le bill meilleur mais je crois qu'il empêchera le bill de pouvoir être adopté par suite de retard.

Mr de Russy,

Ce bill est très important et doit être adopté.

JEUDI, 11 mars 1854.

ENTREE DES TERRES PUBLIQUES.

Bill pour autoriser Brebaran La Branche à enregistrer certaines terres.

Mr Kenner,

Ces personnes font partie d'une nombreuse et riche famille dont la respectabilité est incontestable. Je suis certain qu'elles ne songeraient à rien de mal et ne prépareraient rien de pareil.—Elles possèdent des terres de façade sur un certain point de l'Etat. Les terres en arrière de ces points sont nécessairement de valeur pour eux, elle desirent en faire l'entrée; mais en se livrant aux démarches nécessaires elles ont trouvé que ces terres n'étaient point arpentées. L'ingénieur peut avoir des amis intéressés auxquels il peut communiquer les informations nécessaires et qui, lorsque l'arpentage sera achevé, peuvent s'empresser d'aller au bureau des terres pour faire l'entrée de celles dont je parle, dans un but spéculatif, et se mettre ainsi à même de réclamer un prix élevé du propriétaire de la façade. Et parce que les messieurs La Branche désirent agir avec droiture, faire ce qu'ils ont le droit de faire et ce qui doit profiter à l'Etat, entendons nous dire que leur but est d'agioter dans les terres marecageuses? Les repousserons-nous uniquement parce que ce sont des hommes riches et respectables? Je ne désire point soutenir une mesure qui serait blamable et je préférerais voir le bill dispersé en mille morceaux. La seule objection de quelque poids consiste à dire que les limites ne sont pas suffisamment définies. L'objection du sénateur prétendant que ces terres sont reservées pour des railroads ne s'applique point à l'espèce. Je n'ai cependant aucune objection à inserer une clause décrétant que rien dans ce bill ne pourra être interprété de manière à priver de leurs droits les compagnies de railroads.

Mr King,

Je ne me suis pas trompé quand je disais que les individus arpenteraient eux-mêmes les terres qu'ils devaient entrer. Ceci ne fait point partie des devoirs de l'arpenteur des Etats-Unis. Ceux qui le mettent à l'ouvrage doivent le payer et quant au titre d'arpenteur général c'est purement un nom de guerre. Le sénateur vient de dire que ce n'est pas là une opération d'agiotage sur les terres marécageuses. Je crois pouvoir démontrer qu'il en est ainsi. Ces personnes nous ont remis un mémoire concluant pour une demande à la Legislature pour le passage d'un bill leur accordant certains privilèges. Si elles ne doivent retirer de cette mesure aucun profit pourquoi désirent-elles son accomplissement? S'il y a profit pour elles, il y a donc une faveur à faire en disposant d'une façon particulière d'une portion des terres marecageuses. C'est ce que j'appelle agioter sur ces terres. Pour ma part je ne vois pas comment on en ferait usage pour de pareils buts. Je ne vois pas pourquoi tout notre système de terres marécageuses serait mis en désordre par exception spéciale en faveur de cette famille. Si nous adoptons ce bill nous aurons l'hiver prochain cent demandes d'une nature semblable, sur lesquelles nous ne pourrons refuser d'agir de la même manière, après avoir etabli un précedent. Les consequences seront l'irrégularité et la confusion introduites dans le système de terres marécageuses. Je fais la motion que le bill soit déposé sur le bureau.

Mr Kenner,

Je prendrai la liberté de proposer une question au Senateur. Il vient de dire que l'expression d'arpenteur général est simplement un nom de guerre. Mais le bill avait d'abord pourvu à l'accomplissement du travail par l'arpenteur général des Etats-Unis. Le sénateur y a objecté. J'en fais en conséquence le devoir de l'arpenteur général de l'Etat et j'entends objecter que ce titre n'est qu'un nom de guerre. Comment le senateur entendrait-il resoudre la question?

Mr King,

J'ai étudié les lois de l'Etat avec autant de soin probablement qu'aucun de nos concitoyens et je n'ai vu nulle part les devoirs de cet officier definis. Je sais que cette charge existe, mais la question est de savoir quelles obligations y sont attachées.

Mr Kenner,

Je dis que cette fonction est d'une grande importance; et si le sénateur a étudié les lois de l'Etat aussi profondément qu'aucun de nos concitoyens, il l'a fait sans résultat. La loi dit que l'arpenteur doit procéder à ces opérations lorsqu'il en est requis. Telle est la loi, et certainement le sénateur l'ignore en tant qu'elle s'applique à ce sujet spécial. C'est là, je le répète une fonction importante et qui implique des devoirs importants à remplir.

Le bill est déposé sur le bureau.

Levées dans les paroisses de Carroll, Madison et Catahoula.

Le sénat prend en considération le bill pourvoyant à une compensation à accorder aux paroisses de Carroll, Madison et Catahoula, pour des levées construites en conformité de l'acte de 1832.

Mr Clifton offre un amendement statuant que le montant devra être prélevé des fonds à l'usage de ce district.

Mr Rivers,

Je demanderai la permission d'appeler l'attention du sénat sur la loi. Le district des levées est com-

Digitized by Google

posé des paroisses de Catahoula, Carroll et Tensas, et il a à sa disposition un fonds destiné à la construction des levées. Avant la nomination des commissaires des terres marécageuses une somme importante a été employée à construire des levées sur la garantie de la foi de l'Etat donnée pour les recevoir. Cette somme s'est montée la première année à environ $80,000. Le bill propose d'en accorder seulement $30,000 pour couvrir la somme entière dépensée et maintenant le senateur veut l'amender en demandant que le montant soit prélevé sur les fonds appartenant à ce district. Le sénateur est il partisan de la répudiation? Le sénateur désire-t-il lever les objections de la loi? Cet amendement consacrerait une injustice flagrante pour le district que je représente. En vertu de la loi, l'Etat s'est obligé à recevoir ces levées une fois terminées et sans cette promesse elles n'auraient probablement point été construites. Le sénateur veut prélever la somme nécessaire des faibles moyens qui appartiennent à ce district. Que les sénateurs veuillent lire la loi et ils verront que l'Etat est obligé de recevoir ces levées Je suis étonné que le sénateur ait présenté un semblable amendement lorsqu'il a obtenu une si large part d'allocation pour construire la grande levée dont l'importance comparative par rapport à celles qui nous occupent, est celle d'une utopie en présence d'une montagne. Dans ces paroisses la taxe pour levées s'est élevée dans certains cas à cinq pour cent par an.

Mr Clifton,

Mon seul but en offrant cet amendement est de prélever la somme à payer sur les fonds déjà appropriés à cet objet. Dans ma paroisse nous construisons nos levées au moyen du travail des esclaves. Le district en question a préféré le faire autrement. En fait il n'a point payé une somme plus forte et n'a droit à recevoir rien de plus que tout autre district En recevant des sommes sous divers prétextes du fonds général, il aura finalement réussi à recevoir beaucoup plus que sa part.

Mr Boatner.

Si le sénateur de la Pointe Coupée comprenait bien le sujet, il retirerait son amendement et je suis certain que son sentiment de justice l'engagera à le faire après mûre réflexion. Je dois me rappeler que la totalité de cette section était exposée à l'inondation et aurait peut-être complétement été détruite si rien n'avait été fait Le danger était imminent et le fonds des terres marécageuses mettait une telle lenteur à grandir, qu'il était inutile d'attendre aucun secours de ce côté. La population résolut en conséquence de faire elle-même ce travail, Elle s'adressa à la Législature de 1852 et demanda que les deux paroisses fussent érigées en district de levées. Il a été fait droit à sa demande. Se fondant sur cette loi et sur la ferme conviction que l Etat remplissait les obligations qui en étaient la conséquence, le peuple des trois paroisses a levé des taxes appplicables à la construction des levées jusqu'à concurrence de $80,000 ou $90,000. Il importe peu de savoir si le travail a été fait par des esclaves ou si on a eu recours à des taxes pour l'accomplir. Le fait est que des levées ons été construites et que l'Etat devait les faire Aujourd'hui le peuple vient à nous et nous demande de nous conformer aux dispositions de la loi. Il est impossible qu'on ait pu penser que le montant payé dût être remboursé sur les fonds appartenant à tel district particulier, attendu qu'à cette époque les districts n'étaient point formés. Ces paroisses ont dépensé de fortes sommes et ont sauvé de l'inondation des milliers d'acres de terre. Mais les principes de justice s'accordent pour exiger de nous que nous nous conformions aux dispositions de l'acte approuvé par la précédente Législature. Je reste convaincu qu'après réflexion, le sénateur retirera son amendement.

Mr Moore,

Je vais donner les raisons de mon vote contraire à l'amendement et favorable au bill. La Législature, en 1852, a adopté une loi stipulant que si les paroisses construisaient des levées de manière à utiliser les terres marécageuses, l'Etat recevrait ces levées et rembourserait aux paroisses la totalité de leurs dépenses. Le peuple des paroisses en question a prélevé en conséquence $80,000 ou $90,000 par voie de taxation pour construire des levées qui permettent de mettre en valeur des terrés marécageuses appartenant à l'Etat. Ce fait ne sera démenti par aucune personne connaissant ces paroisses. Des levées ont été construites; pour quelle raison n'en rembourserait-on pas le le prix? La loi qui a divisé le fonds général ne date que du mois d'avril 1853. Nous n'avons pas le droit d'appliquer les conséquences de cette division à des travaux précédemment accomplis. Nous devons rembourser ces paroisses. Dans d'autres les mêmes faits n'ont point eu lieu et je voterai contre de semblables allocations. Mais la loi que nous avons nous-mêmes votée exige que ces levées soient acceptées par l'Etat et que le prix en soit remboursé. Ces paroisses ont construit les levées, elles ont rempli leurs parts d'obligations, notre devoir est d'en faire autant de notre côté.

Mr King,

J'ai à présenter quelques remarques sur le sujet qui nous occupe ; et en donnant un vote contraire au bill, je me crois obligé d'exprimer quelques-uns des motifs qui m'obligent à le faire, afin qu'il ne soit pas mal interprété. La demande qui nous est faite de la part de ces paroisses n'a point pour but de faire construire des levées pour leur usage, mais de payer le prix des levées déjà construites. Aussi longtemps qu'il reste d'importantes lacunes à remplir dans l'ensemble de nos levées, il me parait d'une mauvaise politique de payer aux paroisses celles qu'elles ont construites pour leur propre protection. Il existe un endroit qui porte nom Diamond Island, où la levée n'est pas construite et où la riviere submerge le sol à une profondeur de huit a dix pieds. L'ingénieur dit que lorsque cette echancrure sera fermée nous aurons une chaine non interrompue de levées depuis l'Arkansas jusqu'au Golfe. Aussi longtemps qu'un anneau de cette importance n'est pas exécuté dans cette chaine nous ne devons pas dépenser d'argent dans d'autre but. C'est sans aucune comparaison l'ouvrage le plus nécessaire et le plus important que nous ayons à faire, et je suis certain qu'aucun membre du sénat ne me contradira sur ce point. Les sénateurs qui ont pris la parole ont cité la loi, je ne reculerai pas devant la discussion; il faut qu'elle soit notre pierre de touche. Lorsque la loi a été votée, j'étais sous l'impression que les terres marécageuses constitueraient un magnifique domaine donnant des revenus suffisants pour permettre à l'Etat de devenir un grand constructeur de levées. En conséquence l'Etat devait tout faire. Telle était l'impression de la Législature l'année dernière, telle est encore aujourd'hui l'impression d'un grand nombre de ses membres; mais jetons les yeux sur les retours du bureau des terres, les recettes provenant des terres marécageuses sont estimées à 75'000 piastres par an. Aucun homme sensé n'entreprendrait même de commencer la construction d'un système général de levées avec d'aussi faibles moyens. Nous avons compté sur des ressources qui ne pourront jamais exister. L'idée reposait sur une erreur gi-gantesque. Examinons la loi et voyons si elle ne justifie pas ma maniere de voir. (Ici monsieur King donne lecture de la loi.) Il ressort de là qu'on a eu en vue l'entreprise par l'Etat d'un système général de levées; et aussi longtemps que ce système général ne peut s'exécuter, quel droit avons nous d'écouter des demandes comme celles qui nous sont faites? Il est évident que lorsque cette loi a été adoptée on s'est basé avec confiance sur la possibilité de construire un système général de levées pour tout l'Etat, mais jamais il n'en pourra être ainsi. Pourquoi donc permettrions-nous à ces trois paroisses de prélever une somme aussi importante sur ce fonds? Leurs levées coûtent-elles plus que celles d'autres paroisses? Demandent-elles plus de soin ou plus d'argent? Je ne puis par croire qu'il en soit ainsi. Sont-elles plus nécessaires, plus difficiles à construire que celles de la Pointe Coupée? J'ai la conviction qu'il n'en est rien Dans la paroisse de Concordia les conséquences sont-elles plus fatales en l'absence des levées? Il faut se rappeler qu'il est question ici, non d'une allocation générale, mais spéciale au contraire et pour l'usage de trois paroisses. Je ne pense pas qu'en recourant à la loi, les sénateurs qui me sont opposés renforcent leur position. La loi, comme je l'ai dit, a été votée en vue de l'établissement d'un système général de levées, d'après lequel les fonds devaient être distribués au 'pro rata' non point entre les paroisses, mais parmi les personnes construisant les levées suivant les dispositions de la loi. Il en résulte que si quelqu'un a droit de nous adresser une demande, ce ne sont pas les paroisses, mais bien les personnes qui ont payé les taxes pour aider à la construction des levées. Un droit acquis existe dans les contribuables au moins contre les paroisses. Si nous adoptons le bill et si nous reconnaissons ainsi que nous sommes obligés de rembourser les prix de ces levées, nous reconnaissons ainsi aux contribuables le droit de venir nous demander le remboursement de tous leurs débours, et en admettant que nous ayons déjà payé les paroisses, ça ne serait pas contre eux une défense légale ni même équitable. Nous devons recourir à quelque moyen pour nous décharger de cette responsabilité, sans quoi nous sommes exposés à une demande de remboursement de la part de ceux qui ont payé les taxes pour un pareil objet. J'ai la plus grande confiance dans les sénateurs, mais peuvent-ils insister sur cette allocation de soixante mille piastres. Je pense avoir démontré que cette réclamation ne repose sur aucune base de justice; mais en admettant la justesse de la position prise par les sénateurs qui nous sont opposés, il resterait encore à dire qu'ils n'ont rien spécifié. Ils ne nous ont pas fait connaître les levées qui ont été construites, leur hauteur ni leur largeur, tous ces éléments essentiels pour apprécier leur valeur. Je me suis laissé dire qu'une partie importante de ce travail a été accomplie dès avant le passage de la loi Nous devons au moins exiger la preuve que ces levées ont été construites recemment et des témoignages sur lesquels nous puissions nous reposer pour établir leur valeur. Je demande que les preuves nécessaires soient faites. Si elles existent, qu'on les produise; si elles n'existent pas, il faut mettre un terme à ce te législation irrefléchie qui fait approprier des milliers de piastres sans savoir souvent comment et pourquoi. Au moins devons-nous faire attentivement examiner par un officier compétent ces levées dont on nous réclame le paiement.

Quelles preuves avons-nous aujourd'hui qu'elles aient même été construites? Je ne doute pas un instant de rien de ce que les sénateurs nous ont dit, mais en même temps je dois répéter que rien d'officiel, rien qui soit de nature à nous permettre d'agir, n'est devant le Sénat. On a appelé ce bill un compromis; nous n'avons pas le droit d'en faire avec les parties qui s'adressent à nous. S'il existe un droit acquis, il reste dans les contribuables et non dans les paroisses. Pour ces motifs, je vote contre le bill.

Mr Moore,

Le sénateur qu'on vient d'entendre demande la preuve que trois levées ont été construites, et croit que nous procédons en aveugles Si le sénateur veut examiner la loi, il trouvera que l'arpenteur doit d'abord examiner les levées et que si il les trouve construites conformément à ce que la loi exige, les paroisses doivent recevoir ce qui leur est dû d'après les dispositions de cette même loi.

Mr King,

Supposons que l'arpenteur ne trouve de levée que pour une valeur de cinq mille piastres.

Mr Moore,

Alors les paroisses ne reçoivent que cinq mille piastres.

Mr King,

J'en demande pardon au sénateur, mais elles recevront le montant total.

Mr Moore,

Je vais citer la loi. (Mr Moore donne lecture du texte.) Elle doit être considérée dans son ensemble. Nous n'avons pas à payer jusqu'à ce que les levées soient acceptées par les commissaires des terres marécageuses. Aucun des sénateurs qui connaissent les paroisses de Madison et de Tensas et qui savent que chaque mille de levée permet de mettre en valeur plus que le montant stipulé de terres marécageuses, n'objectera à ce bill. Je renouvelle ma motion de déposer l'amendement sur le bureau.

Mr Lacey,

Je vote pour déposer l'amendement sur le bureau. Je pense que tout amendement est de nature à tuer le bill, et en conséquence, je suis opposé à tous ceux qui peuvent être présentés; sans cette raison je serais probablement en faveur de celui qui est offert.

L'amendement est déposé sur le bureau.

Mr King offre un autre amendement.

Motion est faite de le déposer sur le bureau.

Mr Martel,

La première partie de la loi fait un devoir aux commissaires des terres marécageuses de recevoir les levées, qu'elles soient construites ou non conformément à la loi. Voici ce qu'on y lit. (Mr Martel donne lecture du texte.) J'établis une grande différence entre une chose optionnelle et une chose impérative. Cette loi impose aux commissaires le devoir impératif de recevoir ces levées soit qu'elles permettent ou non de mettre en valeur des terres marécageuses. Si nous recourons à l'acte de 1852, nous voyons que dans le cas où ces levées rendent utilisables des terres marécageuses, alors la Législature s'engage à allouer les fonds nécessaires pour en rembourser le prix. Je suis opposé à un pareil gaspillage des fonds de l'Etat. Il y a une immense distinction à établir entre les dispositions de cette loi et celles de l'acte de 1852. En vertu de ce dernier si les commissaires trouvent que des levées permettent de mettre en valeur des terres marécageuses, ils peuvent les comprendre comme faisant partie du système général et alors l'Etat doit nécessairement en payer la valeur. Mais jusqu'à ce qu'elles soient ainsi adoptées par les commissaires, nous n'avons point à nous en occuper. L'acte est sans ambiguité. Il permet à la population des diverses paroisses de se taxer dans le but de faire des levées, il prévoit aussi le mode à suivre pour prélever cette taxe, la nomination des commissaires, etc, et dans la dernière section il dit que l'attention de commissaires sera appelée sur ces levées. Si les officiers de l'Etat trouvent qu'elles lui profiteront un bénéfice et qu'elles permettent réellement de mettre en valeur des terres marécageuses lui appartenant, alors je n'aurai aucune objection à voter pour le montant total demandé; mais jusqu'à ce que cela soit fait, je dois m'y opposer. Je ne puis soutenir un bill qui ordonne aux commissaires d'accepter toutes ces levées en partant de la supposition qu'elles rendent utilisables les terres marécageuses. L'application de la mesure proposée devrait au moins être laissée à l'adoption des commissaires ou dépendre de cette considération. Qu'on ajoute une disposition de cette nature et alors je n'aurai aucune objection à voter les cinquante mille piastres. Mais je dois le dire, c'est une somme bien importante. La Constitution nous oblige à ne point voter au-dela de cent mille piastres d'allocation sans pourvoir aux moyens de faire face à la dépense, et dans cette occasion nous disposons de la moitié du montant pour une seule allocation. Je vous le dis, ce n'est pas là une chose de peu d'importance. J'engage les membres du Sénat à lire attentivement l'acte de 1852 et à le comparer avec les dispositions du bill soumis à notre codsidération. Quand j'ai voté contre l'amendement précédent je n'avais pas encore lu l'acte; mais en m'apercevant que l'acte de 1852 laisse à l'option des commissaires la réception des levées, et que cette réception ne devient impérative qu'autant que ces levées permettent de mettre en valeur des terres marécageuses, j'ai considéré qu'il était injustifiable que ce bill en fit un devoir impérieux à ces commissaires. Bien loin que cet acte soit à conformité avec le précédent, il équivaudrait en son rappel: ce qui était laissé optionnel par celui là, devient impératif pour celui-ci, car les levées doivent être reçues, soit qu'elles permettent on non, de mettre en valeur des terres marécageuses. Je suis donc contraire au bill parce qu'il consacre une injustice et nullement par envie de faire une opposition systématique au paiement de réclamations légitimes. Je répète au Sénat qu'on se trompe sur cette partie de la loi, elle a trait à toutes levées 'qui peuvent être' et non 'qui doivent être' reçues. Si la Législature en fait une obligation, elle renverse l'esprit de cet acte Le bill dit que l'argent sera prélevé sur le produit de la vente des terres marécageuses Si le Sénat désire en agir ainsi j'enrégistrerai mon vote contraire, si même je suis tout seul de mon avis. Je désire agir conformément à la loi. Telle est la raison qui me fait agir et ce n'est nullement par esprit d'opposition a des allocations destinées à la portion du pays que représente mon honorable ami. Sur quelques questions de ce genre j'ai voté aveuglement parce que j'ai suivi l'exemple de sénateurs que j'avais lieu de supposer bien informés. Je suis en faveur des améliorations intérieures. J'ai dit à l'honorable sénateur de St. Martin que j'avais confiance en lui et que je voterais pour les bills qu'il présenterait; mais il ne s'agit point ici d'améliorations et ce bill n'est point de la nature de ceux auxquels je fais allusion. Je dois dans cette occasion demander la permission de différer d'opinion avec mon honorable ami. Je considère que la proposition faite n'a la sanction ni de la raison ni de la loi. J'ai lu le bill avec attention, j'ai formé un jugement en conséquence, j'ai voté contre le proviso, maintenant je voterai contre le bill.

Digitized by Google

Mr Boatner,

Je ne saurais me refuser à dire qu'on ne saurait trop reconnaître le zèle que le sénateur déploie dans son opposition à d'injustes allocations. Si cependant nous lisons l'acte nous trouverons que l'argumentation du Sénateur ne repose sur aucune fondation. Il pense que cet acte rend obligatoire aux commissaires la réception de ces levées et qu'il leur est commandé de payer $50,000 dans tous les cas Ce bill ne renferme rien de pareil. Le Sénateur doit l'avoir vu d'un œil égaré, s'il peut tirer cette conclusion de sa rédaction. Certainement ce bill est écrit en bon anglais et le Sénateur doit être capable de la comprendre (Mr Boatner donne lecture du texte) Je demanderai au Sénateur s'il considère que le pouvoir donné de faire une chose équivaut à un mandat impératif. Si tel est le fait la signification des mots diffère complètement de celle qu'ils avaient avant Si le mot ordonné était employé comme dans les lois obligatoires, il en serait autrement, mais il est fait usage du mot autorisé Le Sénateur prétend que la somme peut-être payé lors même que les levées ne vaudrutent que $5000. La présomption légale est que les officiers de l'Etat feront leur devoir. Les commissaires des terres marecageuses sont des hommes hautement placés dans la communauté et dignes de la confiance qui a été mise en eux. J'ai la conviction qu'ils ne recevraient pas les levées et n'autoriseraient aucun paiement avant d'être satisfaits que ces levées sont construites conformément aux dispositions de l'acte de 1852 Que le Sénateur nous prouve que l'intention des commissaires des terres marécageuses est de violer leurs devoirs envers l'Etat avant de faire de cette violation la base de son argument. Que les opposans prouvent d'abord que ces officiers sont indignes de la haute confiance dont ils sont investis, et alors moi même je voterai avec l'opposition.

Mr Martel,

Les remarques du Sénateur réclament de ma part un mot d'explication, Le bill autorise les commissaire à recevoir ces levées, mais comme il ne leur est pas optionnée de les recevoir ou non, il en résulte que la réception devient obligatoire. C'est la seule objection que j'ai contre le bill.

Mr Boatner,

Je ne crois pas que telle soit la signification du bill. Voici ce que le mot autorisé signifie suivant moi. En conséquence du pouvoir discrétionnaire que ce bill renferme, ils peuvent se refuser à recevoir et alors ce bill reste nécessairement sans effet. Si les intéressés recevaient réellement ce qui doit leur revenir d'après l'acte de 1852, ils auraient droit à quatre-vingt mille piastres au lieu des cinquante mille piastres portées dans le bill. Il a été adopté dans un esprit de conciliation et comme un compromis Un membre de l'autre chambre m'a informé que ceux qui y étaient opposés n'étaient point entièrement opposés au paiement, mais pensaient que leurs paroisses devaient être remboursées de la moitié de leurs dépenses. On nous a dit qu'il n'y avait pas de preuves que ces levées permettent de mettre en valeur des terres marécageuses. Il n'y a peut-être pas de preuves écrites ou officielles du fait, mais tout le monde sait que des milliers d'acres ont été par là rendus utilisables et que sans ces levées ils seraient aujourd'hui inondés et impropres à la culture. On a dit aussi qu'il n'y a pas de preuves que ces levées aient même été construites. S'il en était ainsi ce bill n'aurait point d'application, les commissaires manqueraient à leurs devoirs s'ils recevaient ou prétendaient recevoir un travail qui n'a point été fait. Le Sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans dit qu'il est contraire au système des remboursements d'ouvrages déjà faits et qu'il faut réserver nos moyens pour ce qui reste encore à faire. Je ne pense pas que ce principe puisse être approuvé. Lorsqu'un travail a été exécuté en conséquence d'un acte de la Législature, nous devons en payer le prix. Voilà la loi que nous avons sous les yeux Si on raisonnait sur les principes d'équité aucune réclamation ne serait mieux fondée.

L'amendement de Mr King est déposé sur le bureau et le bill est adopté.

Banques et opérations de Banques.

Mr Clifton,

Le comité des Banques présente un rapport sur le bill pour amender la loi des banques libres et aussi un rapport de la minorité du même comité.

Mr McMurdo,

Les raisons qui me portent à soutenir ce bill sont simples. D'après la loi qui existe aujourd'hui, les sécurités dont on peut faire usage pour se livrer à des opérations de banque sont limitées aux bons des Etats Unis, de l'Etat de la Louisiane et de la dette consolidée de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Le montant déjà absorbé, s'élève à $1 500,000. Le montant des bons à émettre pour les compagnies de rail roads et qui augmentera la dette de la ville se montera à $30,000. On ne peut pas dans mon opinion comprendre les bons des Etats-Unis parce qu'ils ne peuvent pas en réalité être considérés comme pouvant servir de base. D'après le rapport des commissaires de la dette consolidée de la Nouvelle-Orléans les bons de la ville s'élevaient à 6 millions de piastres. Ils sont réduits de cent quatre-vingt mille piastres chaque année par l'excédant de la somme prélevée annuellement pour prélever l'intérêt de l'année. Et par l'acte de consolidation il continuera à en être ainsi jusqu'à ce que la dette soit éteinte. La probabilité est qu'en conséquence de cette manière de procéder les huit cent mille piastres de bons émis à quarante ans, seront éteints en vingt-cinq ans ou pour mieux dire ils auront fait retour à la ville. La conséquence de la loi est évidente, Par suite de la réduction du capital l'intérêt à payer diminuera graduellement jusqu'a extinction finale de l'un et de l'autre, mais alors nous n'aurons plus de base pour notre circulation. —Les bons de l'Etat a émettre pour travaux d'améliorations intérieures s'élèvent à environ trente millions, et c'est là la seule valeur où la circulation peut prendre sa source. Par suite de la loi des banques libres, il sera requis dans peu de mois pour trente millions de bons. Qu'est devenu le reste ? Qu'on examine les marchés monétaires du monde, on trouvera que l'émission de pres de dix millions de bons n'a donné lieu à aucun mécontentement ni aucun malaise parce qu'ils ont été expédiés en dehors et sont employés dans les autres pays comme placement, surtout à Amsterdam, Londres et New-York. C'est là une sécurité de tout repos et la mesure proposée ne donne lieu à aucune plainte de la part de ceux qui sont détenteurs de bons originaires et je n'examine pas même s'ils auraient le droit de se plaindre. Je tiens a la main une lettre d'un habitant distingué de la Nouvelle-Orléans, traitant précisément sur ce sujet Il dit qu'il ne résulterait aucune injustice pour les porteurs des bons de la dette consolidée en faisant de ces nouveaux bons une base d'emission.—Quand les bons consolidés ont été vendus il est devenu un des acquéreurs et pense qu'il n'a aucun droit de se plaindre. On aurait peut-être quelque motif de le faire si la mesure devait affecter la valeur des bons aujourd'hui en existence. Je lisais il y a quelques jours dans le Bulletin le compte rendu de ventes récentes de bons créées en vertu de l'acte de consolidation. La ville a acheté pour $125,000 de bons avec l'excédant des sommes reçues par la caisse d'amortissement Comme je l'ai déjà dit le prélèvement annuel d'une certaine somme permettant de réduire le capital et l'intérêt le résultat sera que le montant total de la dette sera éteint dans vingt-huit ans et qu'alors aucune des series de bons ne sera plus en existence. En 1852 ces bons ont commandé une prime sur le marché de New York et sans la perturbation que les affaires ont subie en Europe cette prime s'éleverait aujourd'hui à cinq pour cent. Lorsque les affaires reprendront leur cours régulier, leur valeur haussera. A la dernière vente qui en a été opérée la cote la plus basse était à quatre-vingt seize et la plus élevée au pair. On les a plus à un taux moyen de 96¼ et certainement si ces bons n'avaient point été considérés comme une valeur de tout repos, ils auraient obtenus beaucoup moins à l'époque où l'argent commandait 18 0|0 par an. A mesure que l'abondance du capital augmentera, la valeur de ces bons s'accroîtera encore. L'addition propose est d'une valeur actuelle peu importante et n'augmentera pas la base d'émission dans une proportion notable. Elle sera cependant bientôt nécessaire pour les opérations des banques libres. Il n'y a pas à craindre que cette base devienne trop étendue et si nous avions vingt millons, il n'y aurait pas à redouter de dépréciation qui pourrait résulter de l'accroissement de ce montant. Si nous voulons donner des encouragements à notre système d'améliorations interieures nous devons placer les bons qui doivent être émis a propos de ces améliorations dans la meilleure condition, surtout en considérant que celle-ci ne peut point affecter la base adoptée. Si nous donnons à ces bons un marché plus étendu en en faisant une base de circulation, leur valeur s'accroîtera nécessairement, en conséquence de leur demande plus active, et plus alors on pourra en attendre de profits pour les améliorations intérieures.

Mr Wickliffe,

En 1853 quand on discutait la loi relative à l'établissement d'un système de banques libres, quelques uns d'entre nous, quoique j'ai le regret de le dire, le nombre en était très restreint, s'opposèrent à la mesure. Je faisais partie de cette minorité qui vota contre le bill sur les motifs que les bons de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans devaient servir de base à la circulation. Je ne pensais pas qu'ils présentaient de suffisantes garanties et je croyais par conséquent que leur adoption comme base de circulation devait déprécier la valeur des émissions, et en faire une cause de crise. J'ai insisté sur cette opinion alors, mais le Sénat la rejeta et vota en faveur de la proposition par une majorité bien tranchée. Je me suis alors appuyé sur le motif que bien que la proposition faite alors consistât à faire des bons consolidés la seule base des opérations de banques, on venait à la session suivante de faire surgir une proposition pour adopter les bons de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orleans et les appliquer au même but Mr King pendant la discussion du projet en a pris occasion pour dire que les bons de la ville étaient les valeurs les mieux garanties dans le monde et qu'ils valaient beaucoup mieux que les bons de l'Etat.

Mr King,

J ai dit que sous l'empire de cet acte on ne pouvait émettre davantage de bons.

Mr Wickliffe,

Ce qui était allégué en 1853 pendant la discussion de la loi sur les banques libres se vérifie aujourd'hui. On n'est pas satisfait d'avoir la cé ces bills de rail roads avec une précipitation presque inconvenante, d'avoir obtenu des bills qui autorieut la ville de la Nouvelle Orléans à émettre trente cinq mille piastres de bons additionnels, on veut en faire aujourd'hui la base des opérations de banques. Si je ne puis les prévenir j'enrégisterai au moins mon vote opposé à la mesure. Mon consentement ne sera jamais donné à l'emploi de ces bons pour pareille usage. J'ai voté contre les bons consolidés en 1853 et cependant ils présentaient quelques garanties.—Je ne voterai pas pour ceux qui n'en présentent aucune—Quelle est la dette de la ville. Elle est immense et supérieure peut-être à ce qu'elle pourra jamais payer Lorsque l'année dernière nous proposâmes de faire du sol et des nègres une base pour les opérations de banques, la délégation de la ville vota contre cette proposition en s'appuyant sur le motif qu'il n'y avait pas là de sécurité. Permettez-moi de demander, monsieur le président, quelle est celle que présentent les bons de la ville? N'est ce point la taxe? La taxe n'est-elle point prélevée sur le sol et sur les nègres? Et en définitive la taxe n'est elle pas la même que celle qu'a rejetée la délégation de la ville en déclarant qu'elle ne présentait pas de sécurité. Je sais que mes efforts d'opposition seront sans résultat, je sais que la détermination est prise d'adopter ce bill en dépit de toutes les objections qui pourront être faites, mais quant à moi j'enrégistrerai mod vote contre.

Mr Kenner.

Il n'y a rien d'étonnant à ce que le Sénateur s'oppose à ce bill Son opposition aux bons consolidés de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans faisait prévoir cette manière d'agir mais qu'il me soit permis d'appeler l'attention du Sénat sur des faits.—Le Sénateur fait remarquer que son collègue de la Nouvelle-Orléans (Mr King), a cité les bons de cette ville comme étant les meilleures et les plus surs qu'on pût trouver Il n'a point discuté cette allégation ni même essayé de la combattre. Pour ma part je considère que cette assertion est prouvée et maintenant monsieur le président si nous avons un système de banques libres, nous devons pour être conséquents adopter comme base d'opération les bons que nous considérons les plus surs. Le Sénateur de West Féliciana n'a point essayé de contredire cette vérité et je pense pouvoir la démontrer sans difficulté. La ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans doit entre sept et 8 millions, elle possède un fonds d'amortissement qui s'accroît chaque année du surplus prélevé par voie de taxation sur la somme nécessaire pour payer annuellement l'intérêt courant. Le montant que la ville doit encaisser chaque année est de six cent mille piastres, sur lesquelles cent vingt cinq mille piastres sont appliquées à l'extinction de la dette. Le principal et l'intérêt sont de la sorte réduits annuellement, et dans vingt-cinq ans cette ville ne devra pas une piastre. La semaine dernière il a été fait un appel pour cent vingt cinq mille piastres de bons, et c'est avec grande difficulté qu'on a pu les obtenir. Les revenus d'une ville dont le capital foncier s'élève à cent millions et sert de gage à huit millions, peut-il exister une sécurité meilleure? Le Sénateur a voté contre les bons de la ville l'année dernière ; pour être conséquent avec lui-même il doit voter de même aujourd'hui. Je crois qu'il y a de bonnes raisons pour étendre la base adoptée et si je ne pensais pas ainsi, je voterais contre le bill. Tout ce qui peut tendre à augmenter la sureté de la base doit être adopté Si nous adoptons cette loi, nous augmenterons la valeur de la base déjà déterminée. Nous augmenterons en même temps de cinquante millions, probablement la valeur de la propriété, et nous accroîtrons en même temps celle de la base sur laquelle tout le système est fondé Si nous désirons augmenter la valeur de cette base nous devons donc adopter ce bill. Cette base est bonne déjà. Mais nous devons désirer augmenter la valeur qui sert de garantie hypothécaire à la dette. Le Sénateur a dit une chose qu'il est impossible de laisser passer sous silence. Il a dit que bien que nous ayons pris comme base les bons de la Nouvelle-Orléans qui reposent sur la propriété foncière de la ville, nous avons refusé d'accepter au même titre les terres et les nègres de la campagne en donnant pour motif que c'était des terres et des nègres. Le Sénateur n'a pas donné la raison véritable. Nous n'avons pas refusé de les accepter parce que c'était de la terre et des nègres, mais parceque on ne pourrait facilement les convertir en espèces, tandis que les bons de la ville peuvent avec la plus grande facilité subir cette conversion. Je demande au Sénateur de la Pointe-Coupée si ce n'était pas là la grande objection.

Mr Wickliffe,

Le Sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans a dit qu'il doutait que la dette de cette ville s'élevât à sept millions. Le montant véritable est de sept millions, sept cent mille piastres ; ajoutons-y trois millions, cinq cent mille piastres, et nous aurons la légère bagatelle de onze millions deux cents mille piastres Quel est l'intérêt sur cette somme? C'est aujourd'hui un peu plus de six millions, six cent mille piastres. Le Sénateur nous dit que ces bons seront éteints en 25 ans et qu'à cette époque la ville de la Nouvelle-Orleans ne devra plus une piastre. La somme que la ville est obligée de demander chaque année à la taxe s'élève à six cent mille piastres. A ce taux combien de temps faudra-t-il pour éteindre la dette? Des renseignements pris auprès de l'auditeur des comptes publics établissent que le montant des bons de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, consacrés aux opérations de banques, s'élève à neuf cent vingt-un mille piastres. Qu'a t-on fait du reste? qu'est devenu la différence? Ces bons sont-ils choses si précieuses qu'on ne puisse se les procurer pour les besoins des banques? Personne ne le prétendra—ils sont sur le marché et on peut se les procurer à volonté Un accroissement est-il nécessaire lorsqu'il y a tant de bons sur le marché? Je suis opposé à cette augmentation de la dette de la ville dans le but d'en faire une base de circulation. Cela doit finalement conduire à la banqueroute et à la ruine Je ne vois pas de raison pour abandonner aujourd'hui la position contraire que j'ai prise en 1853 Je considère la loi faite et passée alors comme un fléau pour la communauté, comme une énormité. La proposition de rendre les bons de rail-roads une base de circulation, est une énormité plus grande encore Nous devons, monsieur le président, nous instruire à l'histoire du passé et écouter les leçons de l'expérience. Nous dira-t-on que cette mesure est nécessaire pour le succès de la loi des banques libres? S'il en est ainsi où sont les bons consolidés? Que sont ils devenus? Qui désire faire de ces trois millions cinq cent mile piastres additionneles une base pour les opérations de banques? le peuple le veut-il? non, certainement, monsieur le président. Ceux qui le désirent sont des spéculateurs qui, afin de mettre à exécution leur projet, se ruent sur l'Etat et sur la ville afin d'obtenir assistance de l'un d'eux on de tous deux à la fois.

Mr Clifton,

Je n'ai pas le désir de fournir une course dans l'arène oratoire même dans le cas particulier d'un si grave sujet en discussion. Ce n'est donc point un discours que j'essaierai de faire et je me conten-terai d'une ou deux remarques d'une nature purement pratique. Le Sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans et celui de l'Ascension nous ont dit que les bons de la ville constitueraient la meilleure sécurité qu'il était possible de rencontrer, et le Sénateur d'Ascension nous a défié de contredire cette proposition. Je crois, monsieur le président, qu'pareille allégation est insoutenable et je pense que les faits donneront raison à ma prétention, d'a peler l'attention du Sénat sur un article de l'Abeille qui traite de la vente récente d'un certain nombre de ces bons. Un avis a été d'abord publié pour faire appel aux commissionnaires. On peut voir les taux auxquels ces bons ont été vendus et la valeur qu'ils ont dans l'opinion publique. Le rapport des procédures du Conseil des Aldermen auquel je me suis référé s'exprime ainsi:

Conseil des Aldermen.

Le Conseil s'est réuni hier soir en assemblée spéciale. Communication est donnée d'un message du maire informant le Conseil du résultat de l'affaire McDonogh devant la Cour Suprême des Etats-Unis. Il recommande de faire une allocation convenable pour les avocats de la part de la ville de la Nouvelle Orléans.

Les pétitions des compagnies de pompiers Numéros 14 et 10 sont référées au comité des incendies,

Des propositions pour la vente des bons de la ville sont ensuite ouvertes et il en est donné lecture Les offres faites se tiennent entre 96¼ 0|0 et le pair Quelques-unes sont redigées en termes trop obscures pour être facilement comprises. Après une discussion animée la résolution suivante est présentée et référée au comité de finances.

Résolu, Que les offres pour la vente des bons consolidés de la ville reçues par suite de l'avis publié dans la direction du conseil de ville jusqu'à concurrence de cent vingt mille piastres sont acceptées comme suit:

Peschier et Forstall	$47.000	à	96 50
H. W. Pulfrey	10,000	à	97 00
Do	10,000	à	97 50
Do	6.000	à	98 00
Charles Laffitte	1,000	à	97 50
Thomas Layton	43,000	à	98 00
F H. Thayer	3.000	à	98 00

Il est bien entendu que les offres précédentes comprennent tous les intérêts devenus exigibles depuis le premier janvier 1854.

Ces bons non seulement sont vendus à quelques pour cent au-dessous du pair, mais ils comprennent une accumulation de deux mois d'intérêts. Comment en presence d'un pareil fait, ose-t-on dire que ce sont les meilleures sécurités possibles?

Mr King,

Cette discussion a pris une direction qui s'écarte entièrement du sujet principal qui nous occupe Nous ne discutons pas et nous ne devons pas discuter sur la convenance des banques libres. C'est une question réglée, c'est un fait accompli Il n'est pas question non plus de l'extension du système ou de la création d'une seule banque additionnelle, Il y a assez de bons sur le marché pour les besoins d'un beaucoup plus grand nombre que celles qui sont établies. Le Sénat ne doit pas craindre qu'aucune augmentation puisse être nuisible. Ces bons doivent être garantis de la même maniere que ceux de la dette consolidée. Les bons de la Nouvelle-Orléans sont les seuls dans le monde dont la garantie repose sur une taxe imposée lorsqu'ils sont emis, lorsqu'ils sont émis, taxes obligatoires par une loi sur laquelle la ville ne peut avoir jamais aucune action. Il y a beaucoup de bons qui reposent seulement sur la force d'une obligation morale. Ceux-là peuvent être répudiés si ceux qui les ont émis manquent de probité, mais il n'en est point ainsi des bons de la Nouvelle-Orléans. L'obligation morale de la ville est tout aussi bonne que celle de l'Etat ou des Etats-Unis. Mais il y a en outre cette obligation légale qui oblige à imposer une taxe pour le paiement de l'intérêt et pour l'extinction du capital. Le Sénateur d'Ascension a eu raison de dire que ces bons constituaient les meilleures valeurs qu'on pût trouver. Il y a là à la fois pour la ville une obligation morale et légale de payer Je n'en dirai pas d'avantage des bons eux-mêmes. Nous parlerons maintenant de l'objet que le bill se propose. Il n'a pas pour but d'étendre la base ou de créer des facilités additionnelles pour des opérations de Banques. Son objet est d'aider à compléter nos entreprises de railroads en plaçant les bons émis en leur faveur sur un pied d'égalitéaveclesautres. Ce ne sont pas seulement les intérêts de la ville, mais bien ceux du pays tout entier qui réclament l'adoption de ce bill. Si nous refusons à ces bons une position d'égalité avec les autres, nous les décréditerons et ils seront certainement moins bien reçus par les capitalistes. Les entreprises de railroads souffriront de cette position d'inégalité, s'opposant à ce que les compagnies puissent réaliser leur valeur entière sur le marché. Le but, je l'ai déjà dit, n'est point d'étendre le système des Banques libres ; ce n'est point non plus de conférer une faveur spéciale à la Nouvelle Orléans, excepté dans l'étendue de l'intérêt qu'elle a aux succès des railroads. Nous avons récemment adopté une loi pour venir au secours du peuple en lui permettant d'émettre des bons au lieu de payer directement la souscription de la ville. Nous ne devons pas aujourd'hui discréditer ces bons et diminuer ainsi l'étendue du secours accordé en refusant de les placer sur un pied d'égalité avec les autres. En agissant ainsi nous déprécierions la valeur de ces bons, nous imposerions un déficit pécunier à la ville et nous mettrions en péril le succès de ces grandes entreprises que nous désirons voir rapidement achevées.

Mr Moore,

Ces bons valent encore mieux que ceux de la dette consolidée, car indépendamment des mêmes sécurités qui les garantissent, ils reposent encore sur des actions de railroads.

Mr Trudeau,

Les observations du sénateur de la Nouvelle Orléans, Mr King, méritent mon entière approbation. Je pense qu'il n'a rien laissé à dire en faveur du sujet et je me considérerais comme obligé d'adopter ses vues quant cela ne serait que pour être conséquent avec moi-même. Si nous adoptons des lois, pour des entreprises de railroads, nous devons voter pour celles qui sont nécessaires pour les exécuter. Le sénateur de Ouest Feliciana était opposé à ces chemins de fer, il s'oppose encore au bill présenté, je ne vois rien que de logique à cela, car le but de ce bill est clairement une facilité à donner à la construction des chemins de fer. Si nous ne plaçons pas ces bons sur un pied de parité avec les autres, ils commanderont un prix moins élevé et les compagnies auront à supporter un escompte de peut-être vingt cinq pour cent lequel précisément en proportion de son chiffre augmentera le prix de revient de ces voies de communications. Comme sécurités appliquées aux opérations de Banques, les bons de la ville de la Nouvelle Orléans peuvent marcher de pair avec tous ceux qui existent dans le monde.

Mr Clifton,

Le sénateur dit que ces bons seront dépréciés, s'ils ne reçoivent pas l'assistance qu'ils peuvent trouver dans la loi sur les banques libres, et que cette dépréciation pourra aller jusqu'a vingt cinq pour cent. S'il en est ainsi, et je ne prétends pas dire le contraire, il serait injuste envers le peuple de l'Etat de faire de ces bons une base pour les opérations de Banques. Notre objet doit être de rehausser la circulation en faisant usage comme base uniquement les meilleures sécurités et nous ne devons pas chercher à augmenter la valeur de certaines d'entr'elles pour les employer comme base. Je suis d'avis et j'ai la satisfaction de voir que cette opinion est partagée par les sénateurs mêmes qui me sont opposés. Je suis d'avis, dis-je, que ces bons tomberaient de vingt cinq pour cent au-dessous du pair s'ils n'étaient pas artificiellement soutenus par l'opération de la loi sur les Banques libres. Que doit-on penser de notre législation quand on voit que la base de notre circulation est formée en grande partie de sécurités qui, si elles n'étaient pas une base, ne commanderaient pas vingt cinq pour cent au-dessus du pair. Ce qu'il nous faut, monsieur le Président, c'est une bonne circulation, une circulation solide et non une circulation bâtie de sable prête à glisser entre nos doigts sous la moindre pression.

Mr Boatner,

Je suis un des rares sénateurs qui seront rangés du côté du membre de Ouest Feliciana dans son opposition à la loi sur les Banques libres. Je crois en conséquence pouvoir réclamer quelques instans l'indulgence du Sénat pour indiquer mes vues relativement au sujet qui nous occupe. A la dernière session de la Législature, un cri retentissant a circulé d'un bout à l'autre de l'Etat pour demander des railroads. On n'entendait que railroads ! railroads! Les Présidents de ces compagnies encombraient nos lieux d'assemblée en réclamant des chartes et l'aide de l'Etat. Lois sur lois ont été adoptées avec un brûlant empressement, sans débat, sans examen. On nous a d'abord demandé de souscrire pour un cinquième des actions de capital, nous l'avons fait. J'ai suivi le torrent et j'ai voté pour ces bills. Mais lorsque la loi des Banques libres s'est présentée, une autre question s'est élevée et j'ai voté contre elle. Plus récemment nous avons adopté un bill ayant pour but ostensible de venir au secours du peuple de la Nouvelle-Orléans en permettant à la ville de substituer des bons à la taxe directe. Je regrette que mon absence m'ait empêché d'enregistrer mon vote contraire à la mesure. Mais je le demande, quand cette loi a été adoptée a-t-on parlé de Banques, a-t-on parlé de faire de ces bons la base des opérations de ces établissements. On a eu soin de ne pas dire un mot à ce sujet car cela aurait pu entraîner l'écroulement de tout l'édifice. Après examen je trouve que la vente de ces bons n'est sujet à aucune restriction, les compagnies peuvent les réaliser au taux qui leur conviendra à 75 et même à 50 pour cent. On propose aujourd'hui d'en faire une partie de la base d'une autre circulation; bien entendu qu'une large proportion des bons de la ville n'ait point été encore employée à des opérations de Banque; on nous dit cependant qu'en augmentant cet excédant les bons acquerront plus de force. Je dois dire que pour ma part je ne comprends rien à ce raisonnement. Je crois que le seul but de la mesure proposée est d'aider à la réalisation d'un projet de spéculation chimérique et de donner du crédit à des idées sans valeur. Je préfère voir les choses rester comme elles sont. Pour moi les arguments donnés par le Sénateur de la Pointe Coupée (Mr Clifton) ont un grand poids, il peut se faire que l'argent comptant manque, qu'une crise soit imminente et que la dépréciation des bons de la ville soit son avant-coureur.

Mr Trudeau,

Le Sénateur de la Pointe Coupée semble avoir pris avantage de ce que j'ai dit relativement à la différence des valeurs des bons de la ville et de ceux de l'Etat. J'ai dit que la cause de cette différence venait de ce que ces derniers serviraient de base pour les opérations de Banque, et qu'il n'en est pas de même des premiers, et qu'en en faisant une base pour les opérations de Banque ils vaudraient tout autant que ceux de l'Etat.

Mr Lacey,

Ces bons sont-ils garantis par une taxe sur la propriété foncière et sur les propriétés de la ville ?

Mr Kenner,

Sans nul doute, ces bons sont les mieux garantis qu'on puisse rencontrer dans le monde.

Mr Lacey,

S'il en est ainsi, je vote pour le bill.

Le bill est adopté à sa seconde lecture.

Mr Boatner,

Je fais la motion d'imprimer le rapport de la minorité du comité.

Mr Kenner,

Si j'avais cru qu'on eut le projet de faire imprimer ce rapport et de le répandre dans la communauté, j'aurais répondu à quelques-unes des expressions qu'il renferme, et auxquelles j'objecte d'une façon toute spéciale, particulièrement l'allégation que la mesure est une tentative pour donner la vie à des spéculations imaginaires.

VENTE DE LA FERME MODELE.

Le bill pour la Ferme Modèle est pris en considération.

Mr Ryan demande l'ajournement.

Je demande l'ajournement parce que mon désir est de prendre la parole sur ce bill et que l'heure est trop avancée pour que je veuille retenir le Sénat aujourd'hui. J'ai étudié la question au double point de vue des faits et de la loi, et je désire les exposer au Sénat

Mr Boatner,

Ce bill est devant le Sénat depuis le commencement de la session, sa prise en considération a été retardée jusqu'à ce jour et de nouveaux délais sont tout à fait inutiles.

Mr Ryan,

Je retire ma motion d'ajournement, et je laisse le Sénateur de Caldwell ouvrir les débats.

Mr Boatner,

En 1838 la Législature incorpora une compagnie sous le nom de Compagnie Agricole de la Louisiane. Cette compagnie fit choix d'un certain Thompson pour faire choix de machines à Cincinnati et pour lesquelles il était autorisé à payer $2,500. Thompson acheta les machines, elles furent embarquées, apportées sur les lieux, et mises en opération sur la Ferme Modèle à St-Jacques. Peu après l'expérience fut abandonnée, les vendeurs des marchines présentèrent des réclamations qui furent repoussées sur le motif que Thompson avait excédé ses pouvoirs comme agent. Jugement par défaut fut obtenu à la Cour des Etats-Unis où un procès avait été intenté. La compagnie fut ensuite dissoute par la Législature, les propriétés furent vendues, les dettes payées et la balance fut versée dans le trésor public. Ce montant ainsi versé s'éleva à $20,000, mais la réclamation de C W. Caffin & Cie., qui avaient vendu les machines à Thompson n'a jamais été satis-

faite, bien que le sujet soit revenu plusieurs fois devant les Chambres. Des témoignages ont été pris devant un comité, et le rapport a été favorable, mais n'a point été adopté par les deux Chambres à cause de l'époque avancée de la session à laquelle il a été pris en considération. Je suis disposé à entendre maintenant ce que le Sénateur peut avoir à dire contre son adoption.

Mr Ryan,

J'ai apporté à ce bill plus qu'une attention ordinaire, et je suis prêt à démontrer qu'en justice pas plus qu'en équité et légalement pas plus que moralement, l'Etat de la Louisiane n'est tenu à payer une piastre sur cette réclamation. J'affirme ce que je dois sur les documents que je possède, et si je ne réussis pas à prouver ce que j'avance, mon assertion sera sans valeur. Il est vrai qu'il existe un rapport favorable d'un comité; mais il repose sur le témoignage ex parté donné par des parties intéressées. Un rapport est connu, une décision rendue par un grand jury, le Sénat est le jury qui doit rendre un arrêt définitif. Ce rapport ne rend pas compte des faits tels qu'ils se sont passés. Il dit que Thompson fut autorisé à aller à Cincinnati pour faire des achats, et qu'il était revêtu des pouvoirs nécessaires, je nie le fait. Il n'avait aucune autorité. Le rapport dit encore qu'un procès fut intenté pour le recouvrement de cette réclamation. J'ai été par événement à même d'examiner cette affaire, et les faits que j'ai appris me mettent à même d'en donner sérieusement l'historique. En 1833 un acte de l'assemblée générale incorpora une compagnie pour l'établissement d'une Ferme Modèle. L'Etat de la Louisiane n'a jamais été souscripteur à cette association, mais pour l'encourager l'Etat a transféré certaines actions de la Banque de l'Etat, en se réservant le droit de dissoudre la compagnie s'il le croyait nécessaire pour garantir ces avances. La vente de ces actions a rapporté $48,000.

Cela fut donné à la compagnie et des commissaires furent désignés pour en prendre charge. La compagnie envoya Thompson à Cincinnati avec des lettres de crédit s'élevant à $2,000. Il s'y rendit, montra ses lettres de crédit et acheta les machines aux réclamants. Il dépassa de fait ses pouvoirs ainsi que cela fut établi par la Direction: l'essai ne dura pas longtemps. En 1841 la compagnie fut dissoute par la Législature et ses propriétés furent vendues au prix de $21,000. Par l'acte de 18.3 l'Etat devait recevoir ce qu'il avait déboursé, et les $21,000 furent encaissées en restitution de $48,000 sorties du trésor. L'Etat a donc clairement réalisé par l'opération une perte nette de $27,000. En 1339 poursuite fut intentée par devant la Cour de Commerce de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Un jour fut fixé pour entendre l'affaire, la compagnie étant comparue et avait enrégistré sa réponse, et demanda un jour pour l'audition de la cause. Quel fut le résultat? La compagnie disait que la réclamation n'était pas fondée, un jour fut fixé pour entendre la cause, mais l'avocat des demandeurs au lieu de venir en cour discuter ses droits, discontinua le procès. Cela se passait en 1839 lorsque la compagnie existait encore et pouvait être poursuivie. Après sa dissolution les mêmes parties commencèrent un procès devant la Cour des Etats-Unis. Le gouverneur Roman répondit en excipant à l'action sur le motif que la compagnie n'existait plus. Il ne fut pas fait d'autre réponse, ni aucune autre defense. Le jugement rendu fut une nullité et ne put être exécuté. Trois procès distincts furent alors intentés à des individus. On voit donc que les demandeurs après avoir reconnu qu'ils ne pouvaient soutenir, ont discontinué leur procès, pour en recommencer ensuite de nouveaux contre des défendeurs qui n'existaient pas. Je suppose que ces faits ne sont pas contredits par le Sénateur. Il serait inutile de le nier, la preuve s'en trouve enrégistrée. Je me suis moi-même procuré des copies des témoignages dans l'affaire et je les lirai pour l'information du Sénat. (Mr Ryan donne lecture d'un document qu'il tient à la main.) Après avoir intenté un procès, on le discontinua; cette conduite autorise le soupçon, pour ne rien dire de plus. Le 23 mai 1841, un autre procès recommence alors qu'il n'y avait plus de compagnie, et que personne ne pouvait recevoir de citation. Je vais lire la déposition assermentée du gouverneur Roman et d'autres personnes qu'on reconnaîtra sans doute comme hautement respectables. (Mr Ryan lit le témoignage du gouverneur Roman.)

RAPPORTS DES COMITES.

Mr Lacey, au nom du comité sur les édifices publics, présente le rapport suivant:

A l'Honorable W. W. Farmer, Lieutenant-Gouverneur et Président du Sénat.

Le comité des édifices publics auquel a été renvoyée la résolution conjointe du Sénat et de la Chambre des Représentans, a l'honneur de rapporter à votre honorable corps, qu'ils ont autorisé le comité de la Chambre à employer un ouvrier capable, James McVea, de Baton-Rouge, à l'effet de fournir un état du coût, avec les devis des travaux nécessaires à faire au Capital; et après un examen minutieux de l'édifice et après s'être consulté avec Mr McVea, le comité a l'honneur de rapporter que la somme de $4,500 est indispensable pour payer les dits travaux conformément aux devis et aux spécifications ainsi qu'il est rapporté à la Chambre des Représentans.

Le tout vous est respectueusement soumis,

[Signé] GEO. S. LACEY, Président.

Mr Moore, au nom du comité des améliorations à l'intérieur, auquel a été référé un bill intitulé:

Acte pour autoriser le bureau des terres marécageuses à recevoir et à adopter comme partie du système général des terres, les levées qui pourraient être construites par les paroisses de Carroll, Madison et Catahoula, d'après les dispositions de l'acte intitulé:

Acte pour former un district de levée des paroisses de Carroll, Madison et Catahoula, et pour les garantir de l'inondation, approuvé le 18 mars 1852, et pour allouer la somme de $50,000 au fonds général des terres marécageuses à l'effet d'en payer le coût, fait un rapport en faveur de ce bill.

Sur motion de Mr Moore, ce bill est pris en considération section par section.

Mr Macmurdo, au nom du Comité des Banques et des Affaires de Banques, auquel avait été renvoyé un bill intitulé:

Acte supplémentaire à un acte intitulé:

Acte pour établir un système général de banques libres dans l'Etat de la Louisiane, fait un rapport en faveur du dit bill.

Mr Clifton, au nom du même comité, présente le rapport suivant sur le même sujet au nom de la minorité.

Les soussignés, membres du Comité des Banques auquel avait été référé le bill intitulé:

Acte supplementaire à l'acte intitulé:

Acte pour établir un système général de banques libres dans l'Etat de la Louisiane, n'étant pas d'accord avec la majorité du dit comité, présente le rapport suivant:

Digitized by Google

La base des opérations des banques libres étant maintenant assez forte pour satisfaire tout le commerce de la ville et de l'Etat, nous ne voyons pas la nécessité de l'augmenter. L'acte de consolidation de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, a autorisé l'émission de bons pour huit millions de piastres à peu près, à l'effet de payer la dette consolidée de la ville et des municipalités. Ces bons, ainsi que les bons des Etats-Unis et de l'Etat de la Louisiane, ont été acceptés, en vertu de la loi des banques libres, décrétée en 1853, comme base des opérations de ces banques. En vertu de cette loi, et jusqu'à présent, les bons de la ville qui ont été déposés dans le Bureau de l'Auditeur, s'élèvent a $1,229,000, et ceux de l'Etat qui y ont été déposés, s'élèvent à $281,000. Sur ces garanties, l'Auditeur a émis des billets de banque pour $1,510,000 ; de sorte qu'il existe une balance de $6,800,000 de bons de la ville consolidée, qu'on peut encore se procurer pour servir de base à la circulation de toute autre banque qu'on voudrait établir ; cette somme qui égale presque le montant de la circulation de toutes les banques libres et autres incorporées dans la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans ne sera probablement jamais nécessaire pour les besoins futurs des banques faisant des affaires en vertu de cette loi. Où donc est la nécessité d'augmenter cette base qui est déjà si forte? Ce bill cache un but qui n'est pas celui d'améliorer ou d'amender la loi des banques libres, mais de faire usage de cette loi, en y greffant ces bons à l'effet de les rendre plus vendables. Est-il juste, est-il prudent de changer indirectement une circulation établie en vertu d'un système de banque que nous essayons, à l'effet de maintenir la valeur des bons émis pour faire réussir un système ou un autre ? Et qui nous assure qu'on ne continuera pas à émettre des bons pour un montant illimité ? La ville a le droit d'émettre en tout temps des bons lorsque ses citoyens et ses conseils municipaux le jugent convenable ; et si l'on n'arrête pas cet état de choses, nos législatures seront constamment appelées à accepter de nouveaux bons comme garantie de nouvelles émissions de billets de banque.

Une personne distinguée de la Nouvelle-Orléans, qui a des rapports avec les banques et les chemins de fer, dans une lettre que nous sommes autorisés à publier, dit :

" Si l'on passe cet acte supplémentaire, je n'hésite pas à dire que ces banques établies en vertu de la loi des banques libres et les compagnies de chemins de fer pourront entr'elles faire un arrangement équitable par lequel on placerait de suite un million et demi ou deux millions de piastres de bons, dont elles—les banques—ont besoin pour servir de base à leur circulation ; cette somme serait payée mensuellement, par sommes égales, assez faibles pour chacune d'elles, et qui, réunies, suffiraient presque à tous les besoins immédiats des chemins ; ainsi, on veut déjà, en vertu de ce bill augmenter la circulation des banques de l'Etat, en greffant continuellement le crédit sur le crédit. Les bons qui ne sont pas par eux-mêmes qu'un crédit, doivent être achetés à crédit, et être immédiatement déposés dans le Bureau de l'Auditeur comme garanties des émissions nouvelles de billets de banque, avant même que ces bons soient payés.

Dans un pareil état de choses, donner une extension extraordinaire à la circulation serait non seulement, induire nos citoyens à contracter des dettes, à commettre des extravagances, qui les rendraient vicieux, pervertiraient leur moral et mettraient en danger leur fortune ; mais serait en même temps, soumettre l'industrie de l'Etat à une réaction qui suit toujours les spéculations folles et extravagantes.

Le tout vous est respectueusement soumis.

(Signé) C. W. CLIFTON,
" R. C. WICKLIFFE,

Mr Clifton, au nom du comité des Banques et des Affaires de Banque, présente le rapport suivant, et, sur sa motion, le Sénat ordonne l'impression de 500 exemplaires du dit rapport.

Le comité réuni des deux Chambres sur les Banques et Affaires de Banque, a rempli les devoirs qui lui étaient imposés, en examinant minutieusement toutes les affaires des banques de la Nouvelle-Orléans et vous soumet maintenant le résultat de son examen.

De toutes les banques qui aient été incorporées, la Banque des Citoyens est la seule qui ne soit pas sortie des limites qui sont tracées dans la seconde section de l'acte de 1842, " pour remettre en vigueur les chartes des Banques de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans. En vertu des saines dispositions de cette loi, la circulation de la Louisiane a toujours servi de modèle à l'Union, comme offrant un moyen sûr pour l'échange des valeurs, non interrompu par ces fluctuations qui caractérisent les opérations commerciales, conduites par une circulation d'argent qui n'offre pas toujours toutes les garanties désirables. Bien que le système qui a été adopté par la Législature de 1842, ait paru d'abord comme une restriction trop grande à l'égard des banques, cependant l'expérience, quelques années après, a prouvé d'une manière positive que la mesure était sage et utile, puisque le peuple avait une circulation sûre convertie en argent. C'est donc avec regret que nous avons vu franchir ces limites et établir un précédent si dangereux pour les intérêts les plus chers de l'Etat.

Votre comité s'étant informé de la cause qui avait induit les banques à augmenter leur circulation, les officiers de ces banques répondirent, [et leurs réponses et les questions qui leur ont été posées se trouvent à la suite de ce rapport] qu'on pouvait l'attribuer principalement à la situation embarrassante du commerce, dont les opérations étaient arrêtées par la baisse des eaux dans les rivières ; les produits de l'intérieur n'ayant pu être transportés à temps jusqu'au marché, pour faire face au paiements ; et aussi à cause du montant énorme d'espèces qui a été retiré des anciennes banques pour faire face aux exigences des nouvelles banques crées en vertu de la loi des banques libres. Bien que le comité respecte l'opinion de ces messieurs, il croit qu'on doit plutôt l'attribuer au refus de ces banques de supporter la perte qui serait résultée de l'importation d'une grande quantité d'espèces pour faire face aux exigences du commerce, et qui, en même temps, les auraient maintenus dans les limites établies par la loi de 1842. Ces banques pouvaient facilement se procurer le montant en espèces nécessaire, pour arriver à ce but. Des traites sur l'Angleterre et sur les autres Etats de l'Union, qui ont été offertes en grand nombre et vendues à un taux raisonnable, durant le mois de décembre et ont été achetées en grande partie par les banques. Si les banques avaient exigé du numéraire en retour de ces traites, cela ne leur aurait pas coûté plus de un pour cent y compris le fret, l'assurance et la différence de l'intérêt, [perte bien faible comparée aux intérêts de l'Etat,] et les auraient maintenues dans les limites de la loi, en même temps que le commerce de la ville aurait obtenu toutes les facilités nécessaires, Au lieu d'opérer ainsi, les banques ont vendu des primes très élevées. Quelquefois, lorsque le change était très bas, à cause des grandes demandes d'argent, les banques ont escompté le papier de ceux qui faisaient habituellement des affaires avec elles, à condition que le produit serait payable en traite sur New-York, à un escompte énorme comparé au taux de la place, forçant ainsi l'emprunteur de vendre sa traite à perte, afin de réaliser la somme nécessaire pour faire face à ses affaires. De pareilles opérations faites par des institutions créées par la Législature qui a défini dans leurs charte d'incorporation, le taux des escomptes ne sauraient être trop blamées. Dans l'appendice de ce rapport on trouvera les réponses des banques aux interrogatoires du comité sur ce sujet.

Il paraît que les banques ont récemment demandé de leur expédier $825,000 d'espèces ; et depuis l'investigation de ce comité, la banque a fait savoir qu'elle avait reçu $400,000 en espèces. Une autre lettre de la Banque de la Louisiane, en date du 20 février, informe le comité que cette banque a en caisse $142,000. Nous voyons avec plaisir que ces banques ont l'intention de se renfermer le plus tôt possible dans les limites de la loi.

Comme toute théorie ne peut être jugée que par la pratique, votre comité a voulu se procurer toutes les informations concernant les opérations de la loi concernant les banques libres, à l'effet de juger si les opérations de ces banques ont donné les résultats promis. Pour arriver à ce but, le comité a interrogé les officiers de ces banques et a obtenu des informations de plusieurs négociants les plus respectables de la ville. D'après ces informations et d'après ce que votre comité a vu par lui-même, il peut dire hardiment que ces banques jusqu'à présent, ont réalisé tous les avantages qu'on avait le droit d'attendre de ce système.

1o. Comme établissant une circulation saine et sûre, à l'abri de tout danger.

2o. Comme donnant au commerce, en proportion du capital employé, autant de facilités qu'ils pouvaient, sans affecter en aucune manière, la base de leurs circulations.

3o. Comme réalisant assez de profits pour inviter les capitalistes à y investir leurs capitaux. Et enfin comme un système établissant une concurrence pour tout le monde, libre de tout monopole qu'exercent les banques incorporées avec un privilège exclusif.

Votre comité recommande à votre honorable corps d'exempter la Banque Consolidée du contrôle du Bureau de Circulation. Cette institution qui, en vertu de la loi, est en liquidation, ne peut émettre de circulation, et les intérêts de l'Etat étant parfaitement protégés par le Bureau des Commissaires nommés par l'Exécutif, le Comité ne croit pas qu'il soit nécessaire pour le public, ni juste de forcer les nouveaux actionnaires de contribuer pour le maintien d'un bureau, dont les fonctions ne sont applicables qu'aux banques en opération.

Le tout vous est respectueusement soumis.

Message à la Chambre.

Le secrétaire adjoint est chargé d'informer la Chambre que le Sénat a donné son cours aux bills intitulés :

Acte pour autoriser le Bureau des Commissaires des terres marécageuses à recevoir et approuver comme partie du système général des levées, les levées qui ont été construites par les paroisses de Carroll, Madison et Catahoula, en vertu de l'acte intitulé :

Acte pour former un district de levée comprenant les paroisses de Carroll, de Madison et de Catahoula, à l'effet de protéger lesdites paroisses de l'inondation, approuvé le 18 mars 1853, et pour allouer la somme de $50,000 du fonds général des terres marécageuses pour payer lesdits travaux ; et à l'acte pour augmenter la rétribution des jurés de la paroisse Terrebonne.

Le secrétaire adjoint est chargé d'aller demander le concours de la Chambre aux bills suivants :

Acte pour autoriser Mme Veuve Melina Cardonna, à adopter Agathe Graw et Esperanza Graw.

Acte pour autoriser la nomination de Charles M. Sheppers, comme tuteur de ses frères et sœurs mineurs.

Acte pour amender la deuxième section d'un acte intitulé :

Acte pour régler l'époque des sessions des Cours de District, [excepté dans la paroisse d'Orléans.)

Acte pour émanciper le mineur John Fisher, de la paroisse de Bossier.

LUNDI, 13 mars 1854.

LOI SUR LES TERRES MARECAGEUSES.

Le bill suivant est pris en considération.

pour amender l'acte intitulé "Acte pour améliorer et dessécher les terres marécageuses et inondées de l'Etat de la Louisiane, &c," approuvé le 30 avril 1853 et pour allouer la somme de trois cents mille piastres pour mettre cet acte à exécution.

Section 1. Il est décrété par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentants de l'Etat de la Louisiane, réunis en assemblée générale que la première section d'un acte intitulé Acte pour améliorer et dessécher les terres marcaégeuses et inondées qui ont été données à l'Etat de la Louisiane en vertu d'un acte du Congrès intitulé "Acte pour aider l'Etat de la Louisiane à dessécher les terres marécageuses qui s'y trouvent" approuvé le 30 avril 1853 est amendé de manière à se lire comme suit: Que l'Etat sera divisé en quatre districts de levées et de desséchement.

Section 2. Il est de plus décrété, &c, Que la seconde section du même acte est amendée de façon à se lire comme suit: Que toute la partie de l'Etat au Sud du trente neuvième degré de latitude Nord et à l'Ouest du fleuve Mississippi (à l'exception des paroisses des Rapides et des Avoyelles, constituera le second district. Les paroisses des Avoyelles, des Rapides, de Natchitoches, Bienville, Claiborne, Bossier, Caddo, De Soto, Sabine et Union constitueront le troisième district, et les paroisses de Concordia, Tensas, Madison, Carroll, Morehouse, Union, Ouachita, Jackson, Caldwell. Franklin et Catahoula constitueront le quatrième district.

Section 3. Il est de plus décrété, &c., Que la troisième section de l'acte ci-dessus est amendée de façon à se lire comme suit: Le gouverneur nommera un commissaire pour chaque district, lequel commissaire devra être résident du district pour lequel il sera nommé. Les quatre commissaires formeront les commissaires des terres marécageuses et seront désignés sous ce titre. Ils resteront en fonctions pendant deux ans à partir du 30 avril 1853 et jusqu'a ce que leurs successeurs soient qualifies, pourvu que ces commissaires ou un d'entre eux puissent être destitués par le gouverneur, quand il le jugera convenable.

Section 4. Il est de plus décrété, &c., Que le gouverneur aura le pouvoir de remplir toutes les vacances qui pourront subvenir dans le corps des commissaires par suite de mort, démission ou autrement.

Section 5. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que chacun de ces commissaires avant d'entrer en fonctions signera un bon en faveur de l'Etat de la Louisiane pour la somme de $100,000 avec deux cautions, lequel bon sera soumis à l'approbation du gouverneur de l'Etat et portera pour condition de fidèle accomplissement des devoirs imposés aux commissaires, et le secrétaire d'Etat lui administera le serment d'office prescrit par la Constitution de l'Etat.

Section 6. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que ledit corps des commissaires se réunira à la ville de Baton-Rouge le premier lundi de mai prochain et tous les trois mois ensuite et plus souvent s'il le juge convenable.

Section 7. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que les dits commissaires sont autorisés à faire tous les règlemens nécessaires pour leur organisation, choisiront un de leurs membres comme président nommeront un secrétaire qui tiendra un journal de leurs actes; et qu'ils fixeront la compensation au dit secretaire pourvu qu'elle ne dépasse pas $500 par an.

Section 8. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir des dits commissaires à leur première réunion et chaque deux ans ensuite de nommer un ingénieur compétent pour chacun des districts. Cet ingénieur restera en fonctions pendant deux ans à partir du 30 avril 1853 mais pourra être destitué par la majorité des commissaires.

Section 9. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que chacun des dits ingénieurs recevra comme compensation de ses services deux mille cinq cents piastres par an payables par trimestre.

Section 10. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir des dits ingénieurs de déterminer dans leurs district srespectifs l'emplacement, l'étendue et la dimension des levées des canaux d'égouts nécessaires pour dessécher et améliorer les terres marécageuses et inondées de l'Etat. Aucune partie de cet acte ne pourra être interprétée de manière à autoriser les dits commissaires à employer les fonds des terres marécageuses à la réparation ou à la réconstruction des levées établies sur le bord des rivières ou des bayous de l'Etat, l'esprit véritable de cet acte est de compléter l'effet partiel résultant du système des levées établies le long des cours d'eau principaux et d'aider par suite à la mise en valeur et au desséchement des terres marécageuses. Toutes les fois cependant qu'une levée éboulera ou sera détruite par l'action du courant, et toutes les fois que dans l'opinion de trois propriétaires voisins ou d'une majorité d'entr'eux, cette levée devra être renouvelée ou réparée par les commissaires des terres marécageuses, alors le propriétaire de la dite levée aura le droit de notifier le commissaire du district des terres marécageuses dont il relève et cet officier devra envoyer son ingénieur pour adjuger la dite levée et la faire construire d'après les dispositions de cet acte; pourvu toutefois que la moitié des frais de la dite levée soit collectée sur le propriétaire ou sur la paroisse avant que le commissaire ou l'ingénieur aient adjugé le contrat pour le travail; pourvu aussi que lorsqu'une paroisse est tenue a la construction de certaines levées la dite paroisse soit obligée de payer la moitié du prix dont il est question dans cette section; pourvu aussi que lorsque le propriétaire de la terre dont la levée devra être faite élévera quelque objection au sujet de la collation de la dite levée, elle soit déterminée par le dit ingénieur conjointement avec trois propriétaires pris parmi les plus proches voisins de l'interressé et choisis l'un par le propriétaire, l'autre par l'ingénieur et le troisième par les deux déja désignés.

Section 11. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir de chacun des dits ingénieurs de diviser son district en autant d'arrondissemens, de levées et de districts de desséchement que les circonstances pourront l'exiger et de présenter un rapport détaillé à ce sujet aux commissaires à telles époques qu'ils pourront désigner.

Section 12. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que toutes levées construites ou réparées d'après les dispositions de cet acte, et pendant le temps où ces réparations en constructions auront lieu resteront sous le contrôle exclusif des autorités de paroisse à l'exception cependant des levées que les commissaires pourront recommander comme devant être entretenues et maintenues sur le fonds des terres marécageuses et adoptées comme telles par la Législature sur la récommandation de la majorité des commissaires des terres marécageuses.

Section 13. Et il est de plus décrété, &c, Qu'il sera du devoir de chaque commissaire dans son district aussitôt après la détermination des arrondissements de levées et des sections de dessèchement d'adjuger la construction ou la réparation de ces levées ou égouts au plus bas enchérisseur après trente jours d'avis donnés dans un journal publié dans la paroisse où le travail doit être exécuté. S'il n'y a pas de journal publié dans l'endroit les avis devront être affichés dans trois lieux publics, de la dite paroisse et l'un d'eux devra l'être à la maison de Cour. Le dit travail devra être adjugé à tant par yarde cube. Bien entendu que le commissaire pourra rejeter toute offre par lui considérée comme extravagante, comme aussi lorsque les parties seront incompétentes ou les sécurités très insuffisantes. Bien entendu aussi que les commissaires n'accepteront dans aucun cas un prix plus élevé que celui fixé précédemment par le corps des commissaires et supérieurs à dix cents par yarde cube pour toute levée jusqu'à quatre pieds de haut et un cent additionnel pour chaque pied supplémentaire.

Section 14. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir de chacun des dits commissaires de réquérir de tout contracteur des ouvrages que cet acte a en vue un bon avec sécurité suffisante portant pour condition le fidele accomplissement du travail proposé. Le dit bon devra être pour une somme égale à la valeur supposée des services à rendre ou suffisante pour assurer l'exécution du travail. Il devra être fait payable aux commissaires, pourra être recouvré devant toute Cour compétente de l'Etat, et son montant une fois recouvré constituera une partie du fonds des terres marécageuses. Il sera aussi du devoir des commissaires de faire dresser aussitôt que possible dans leur district respectif des plans exacts en forme de townships indiquant par des couleurs spéciales les terres marécageuses ou appartenant à l'Etat, afin de mettre la Législature en possession de toutes les informations nécessaires relativement au domaine des terres marécageuses et afin de la mettre à même de juger de la fidelité des officiers employés à la création a la construction des levées qui y sont autorisées, bien entendu que les commissaires ne pourront en aucun cas demander au bureau des terres publiques des duplicatas des cartes de townships maintenant en possession du bureau des terres de l'Etat.

Section 15. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir des dits commissaires d'exiger que touts contrats pour construction ou réparation de levées soient complétés le premier lundi de décembre de chaque année.

Section 16. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que les inspecteurs des routes et levées sont par les présentes autorisés dans les différentes paroisses, à réquérir pour travailler aux levées qui y sont comprises en cas de crevasses existantes ou probables tous les esclaves mâles entre quinze ans et soixante ou le nombre qui pourra en être jugé nécessaire parmi ceux appartenant à des maîtres résidant du côté du fleuve ou du bayou où le danger se fait sentir et à une distance de sept milles de ce point, —bien entendu que cette disposition ne s'applique point aux personnes habitant les terres hautes, c'est-à-dire les terres à l'abri de l'inondation. Et toutes les fois qu'un propriétaire d'esclaves, son agent ou son économe refusera de fournir les esclaves demandés par l'ingénieur ou l'inspecteur, le dit propriétaire devra payer cinq piastres par jour pour chaque esclave non envoyé sur cette réquisition; lequel montant sera dû aux dits commissaires, sera recouvrable en leur nom devant toute Cour compétente sera versé au trésor de l'Etat et constituera une partie du fonds des terres marécageuses. Toutes fois qu'un esclave sera fourni sur la réquisition dont cette section fait mention le propriétaire du dit esclave aura droit à demander et recevoir comme compensation de ses services une piastre et cinquante cents par jour pour chaque esclave, laquelle devra être prise sur le fonds des terres marécageuses; à l'exception cependant du propriétaire de la terre sur lequel la crevasse existe ou menace, lequel ne sera point considéré comme ayant droit à la compensation allouée par cette section. Pourvu en outre que dans tous les cas où les esclaves seront ainsi mis en réquisition l'inspecteur s'adressera à tous les propriétaires d'esclaves à la distance mentionnée et fera contribuer chacun d'eux en proportion du nombre total d'esclaves ci-dessus indiqués qu'ils possèdent, le dit propriétaire devant fournir les instrumens et les provisions nécessaires. Bien entendu que la dite compensation ne sera accordée que pour des travaux accomplis d'après les dispositions de cet acte. Bien entendu aussi que si dans l'opinion du dit inspecteur les esclaves mis en réquisition comme il est dit ci-dessus seront insuffisans pour fournir le travail nécessaire suivant l'exigence du cas, le dit inspecteur est autorisé à employer tels travailleurs additionnels qu'il jugera nécessaires; les travailleurs seront rénumérés sur le fonds des terres marécageuses et le paiement sera fait par les commissaires sur la présentation des pièces nécessaires pour l'inspecteur.

Section 17. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir des ingénieurs de faire exécuter aussitôt que possible la construction et réparation de toutes levées et égouts dans leurs districts respectifs, suivant qu'elles seront ordonnées par le corps des commissaires, de dresser le compte de chacune d'elles à mesure qu'elles seront achevées, de déterminer à qui le prix en est dû en donnant les détails du compte et de donner un certificat du tout aux commissaires.

Section 18. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que le prix de tout ouvrage fait, et que toutes les dépenses encourues par suite de cet acte seront payées par les commissaires sur toutes sommes existant dans le trésor de l'Etat et provenant de la vente des terres marécageuses. Bien entendu que les fonds provenant de la vente des terres marécageuses et inondées seront répartis par l'Auditeur des Comptes Publics entre les différents districts dans la proportion suivante savoir:

Au premier district, 9|32;
Au second district, 11|32,
Au troisième district, 8|32.

Section 19. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que toute dépense qui sera faite en vertu de cet acte sera payee par l'Auditeur sur le mandat des commissaires, mais qu'aucun mandat ne sera payé s'il n'est signé par la majorité d'entr'eux.

Section 20. Et il est de plus décrété, &c. Que chacun des dits commissaires recevra pour compensation de ses services la somme de quinze cents piastres par an.

Section 21. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir de chacun des dits commissaires de contrôler les actes des ingénieurs dans chaque district et d'examiner le travail fait ou à faire dans leurs districts respectifs suivant les dispositions de cet acte.

Section 22. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que les commissaires devront le premier janvier de chaque année faire au gouverneur de l'Etat un rapport de tous leurs actes officiels et recommander l'adoption des mesures nécessaires suivant eux pour protéger les terres basses contre l'inondation et pour leur desséchement et leur mise en valeur.

Digitized by Google

Et le gouverneur devra transmettre ce rapport accompagnant son message à l'assemblée générale à chaque session.

Section 23. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que toutes les dettes contractées et tous les salaires dûs pour services rendus en exécution de cet acte, seront payés sur la vente des terres marécageuses, et qu'aucune dette contractée d'après les dispositions de cet acte ne sera jamais à la charge d'aucun autre fonds du trésor de l'Etat que de celui résultant de la vente des terres marécageuses.

Section 24. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'aucun des dits commissaires ou des ingénieurs ou des autres agents qu'ils pourront désigner ne devant d'aucune façon avoir aucun espèce d'intérêt dans les contrats faits en conséquence de cet acte, sous peine de destitution et de confiscation de ce qui pourra leur être dû.

Section 25. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il sera du devoir des commissaires à leurs diverses réunions. d'ordonner que les travaux les plus importants parmi ceux que cet acte a en vue, soient exécutés de préférence à d'autres de moindre importance, et chacun des commissaires en cas de grande nécessité publique ou de danger d'inondation sur une partie de son district sera et est par les présentes autorisé à employer sur la recommandation de l'ingénieur de son district les moyens nécessaires pour détourner le danger et pour protéger et garantir les terres basses.

Section 26. Et il est de plus décrété,&c, Que le gouverneur est autorisé par les présentes à suspendre la vente de toute portion de terre marécageuse et inondée sur laquelle les commissaires des terres marécageuses auront projeté de faire des améliorations, et cela toutes les fois qu'il le jugera nécessaire à l'intérêt public.

Section 27. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'afin de mettre cet acte à exécution la somme de trois cents mille piastres est par les présentes appropriée sur les fonds qui ont été ou pourront être versés au trésor public sur la vente des terres marécageuses et inondées, laquelle somme sera déboursée sur un mandat signé de la majorité des commissaires des terres marécageuses et approuvé par l'Auditeur des comptes publics. Bien entendu qu'aucun des commissaires des dites terres marécageuses ne puisse contracter pour le payement de travaux dans son district ou tirer des mandats pour une somme plus forte que le montant auquel ce district aura droit en conséquence de la répartition du fonds des terres marécageuses ordonnée par cet acte. La première section est mise en discussion.

Mr Mooro,

Je proposerai un amendement. On me dit que le bill ne pourra passer à cette session s'il est amendé. Je ne le pense pas. Nous ne devons pas adopter ce qui est défectueux uniquement parce que l'autre Chambre l'a adopté. Le système proposé par le bill en discussion devant le Sénat ne serait pas mieux que celui qui existe, c'est simplement une reproduction de celui qui a été reconnu inefficatif au point de ne pouvoir opérer. Suivant le bill en discussion il y aurait quatre commissaires et quatre ingénieurs; il n'y a pas de nécessité à ces quatre ingénieurs se reunissant ici, à Baton Rouge. La conséquence de mon amendement s'il est adopté produira à l'Etat une économie annuelle de $10,000. Cette somme importante pourra être employée de manière à être un bienfait pour l'Etat, mais ne peut produire aucun effet utile si elle est gaspillée en payement de salaires extravagants. Ne pouvons-nous pas avoir des ingénieurs sans officiers interposés entre eux et le gouverneur. Je propose d'amender le bill en retranchant le mot Commissaires. Un amendement présenté au comité y a été reçu avec faveur. On a proposé de donner au peuple l'élection des commissaires je suis en faveur de cette mesure et j'ai reçu des instructions de faire amender le bill dans ce sens. Je vais essayer maintenant de montrer en quoi le bill de la Chambre ressemble à celui-ci et en quoi il en diffère. La première différence avec la dernière ou plutôt la loi actuelle est la nomination de quatre commissaires au lieu de trois. La troisième section renferme un proviso qui donne au gouverneur le droit de destitution, la dernière loi ne le contient pas. La quatrième section est la même, la 6me est la même, la huitième déroge quelque peu en limitant à deux ans la durée des fonctions de l'ingénieur. Il en est de même de la section 9 qui réduit de $3,000 à 2.500 par an le salaire de ces officiers, la dixième est la même à l'exception de la disposition finale qui est peut-être salutaire, la 11me est la même que celle de la loi actuelle; la 12me contient une disposition très sage, c'est celle qui donne aux autorités paroissiales le contrôle des levées quand elles sont achevées; la 13me est la même jusqu'à la seizième ligne excepté que le mot ingénieurs est employé au lieu de celui de commissaires. Par la dernière loi ces devoirs étaient imposés aux commissaires. Cette section contient une disposition qui peut être bonne mais elle contient aussi une clause qui empêchera de construire aucune levée sous l'empire de cette loi. On ne peut le faire à dix cents, le plus bas prix possible est quinze cents. La 14me section diffère, elle ordonne aux commissaires de faire des plans indiquant les terres marécageuses. Quelle nécessité y a-t-il à en agir ainsi en présence des plans du bureau des terres qui l'établissent Que les commissaires s'adressent à lui pour les avoir. Pourquoi gaspiiler l'argent de cette manière ? La 15me est la même à une légère différence près. La 16me ne varie que par la disposition finale. La 17me est la même à l'exception de deux ou trois mots. Elle dit que l'ingénieur veillera aux levées recommandées par le commissaire. C'est une très bonne mesure. On a eu raison de changer la 18me. La 19me section est la même que la 21me de la loi actuelle. La 21me est la même que la 22me; la 23me que la 24me, la 24me que la 25me; la 25me que la 26me et la 26e qui est d'une grande utilité a été ajoutée. Je voterai avec grand plaisir pour cette section. $300,000 sont allouées à la fin du bill, on aurait aussi bien pu les ajouter au bill des allocations générales La plus petite somme au moyen de laquelle le bill peut être mis en exécution augmentera nos dépenses de $8,000. Les commissaires ont certains privilèges de paiement pour des dépenses de voyage, &c. Par les rapports déjà soumis à la Législature $2,000 ont été dépensées cette année en frais de voyage. Si des commissaires ont le pouvoir de porter en compte leurs frais de visites pour chaque monticule et chaque trou, la dépense sera énorme. Le moyen convenable est de déterminer une somme fixe, juste et raisonnable. Dans mon bill j'alloue $200. Je n'ai point le dessein de parler beaucoup à ce sujet car j'ai déjà exprimé mes vues dans une occasion précédente. Notre loi actuelle est à peu près aussi mauvaise qu'elle peut l'être. Il ne faut pas tant d'argent à chaque personne pour ses dépenses de voyages et cependant nous leur permettons de prendre autant qu'il leur plait. Pour ma part je ne voterai jamais pour le bill tel qu'il est—je le considère comme une monstuosité, tout aussi mauvais que la loi présente qui t'est autant qu'on le peut imaginer. Chaque ingénieur et chaque commissaire donne à la loi la construction qu'il juge convenable. Il en pourra résulter confusion, ce qui est ridicule pour ne pas dire injurieux. Je serai la motion de retrancher les trois premières fections du bill et de les remplacer par la première section du mien—Sur cette motion je demanderai l'appel nominal.

Mr King,

Il serait parfaitement inutile d'expliquer mes vues sur le sujet qui nous occupe car chaque Sénateur doit aujourd'hui les connaitre. Je désire cependant dire quelques mots de plus sur un sujet assez important pour autoriser une discussion approfondie. L'amendement du Sénateur de St Martin aurait certainement pour effet d'éviter beaucoup de dépenses et il en résulterait par conséquent, que nous obéissions aux exigences de l'économie. Je dois dire que le bill adopté l'année dernière a fait son apparition devant le Sénat à la dernière heure de la session. Le dire général était qu'il n'y avait point le temps de rien faire de mieux ou de l'améliorer et il a été adopté à la course d'une façon indécente. On nous répète encore aujourd'hui que si nous n'adoptons pas ce bill il sera trop tard pour rien faire Je ne soumettrai pas ma manière de voir à de pareilles menaces. Je ne consentirai pas à abandonner ma conviction et à accepter ce que je crois mauvais parce qu'un Sénateur juge à propos de me dire qu'il est trop tard pour le faire. Je ne crois pas que ce bil doive du tout être adopté. Ce n'est point une amélioration sur le système actuel que chacun reconnait être complétement insuffisant. Le Sénateur de St Martin nous a montré qu'il contient une disposition qui empêchera qu'aucune levée puisse être construite par l'Etat. Ce bill propose dix cents par yarde pour construire des levées quand la grande levée coute vingt cents le pied—C'est là une objection fatale au projet sans parler du principe défectueux sur lequel il repose—Faudra-t-il donc adopter ce bill parce qu'on nous dit que l'autre Chambre n'en acceptera pas d'autre. Il se présente aussi une objection à la section qui traite des plans, arpentage, &c., mais je vais la lire. La disposition finale dit "pourvu que rien dans " le bill ne soit interprété de manière à autoriser " les commissaires à obtenir du bureau général " des terres des duplicatas des cartes de town- " ships maintenant en possession du bureau des " terres de l'Etat." On voit ici que non seulement les commissaires ont à faire une chose inutile mais qu'il leur faut procéder à des arpentages originaux sans avoir recours à ceux qui existent déja. Tous les Sénateurs savent qu'un travail de ce genre doit couter beaucoup d'argent. Et on nous dit cependant qu'il nous faut adopter ce bill tel qu'il est parce que la Chambre basse n'aura pas le temps de prendre en considération les amendemens. Si nous adoptons ce bill nous dépenserons notre argent sans aucun résultat. Nos terres marécageuses ne seront pas desséchées et nos levées ne seront pas construites. L'honorable Sénateur de St. Martin (Mr Moore) a convenablement caractérisé ce bill en l'appelant une monstruosité. Je ne voterai pas pour un bill pareil sous la pression des menaces qu'on a employées pour nous forcer à l'accepter, sans examiner s'il est convenable ou non. Il vaut beaucoup mieux pour nous exercer notre propre jugement sans égard à celui de la Chambre.

Mr Palfrey,

Je conserve aujourd'hui la position que j'ai prise l'année dernière sur cette question, j'objecte au bill en entier et je ne soutiendrai aucun bill qui ne satisfasse pas aux exigences de la Constitution. Ce qui s'est passé ces derniers jours rend plus nécessaire que jamais de nous conformer à notre pacte fondamental. Je répète que je ne voterai jamais pour aucun bill qui soit contraire aux articles 130 et 131 de la Constitution. Je voterai avec plaisir pour un bill ayant pour but l'objet qui nous occupe mais l'observation des clauses constitutionnelles est pour moi condition indispensable.

Mr de Russy,

Je suis prêt à reconnaître que quelques unes des sections de ce bill pourrait être utilement amendées mais les objections qu'on peut leur adresser ne sont pas assez importantes de leur nature pour en faire un mauvais bill. Il faut l'adopter maintenant car nous n'avons pas le temps de l'amender de manière qu'il puisse être renvoyé à l'autre Chambre et passer par les formalités nécessaires avant l'ajournement. Il vaudrait autant présenter un bil nouveau. Moins de quatre jours nous séparent de la cloture de la session et nous n'avons pas le temps de l'amender. Une nouvelle subdivision du territoire prendrait plus de temps que nous n'en avons à lui consacrer.

Mr Moore,

Ma subdivision est la même que celle présentée dans ce bill.

Mr de Russy,

A quoi cela sert-il alors.

Mr Moore,

Nous ne voulons que des ingénieurs et non pas deux corps d'officiers.

Mr de Russy,

Il est trop tard pour insister sur de pareilles objections, On a fait objection aussi au prix accordé pour la construction des levées. Je le croyais moi même trop bas, mais il a été fixé par les commissaires et ils doivent savoir à quel prix ils doivent faire faire l'ouvrage. On nous a dit que la grande levée coûte 20 cents le pied mais c'est là le prix maximun dépensé pour construire des levées de quatre pieds de haut et un cent par pied cube. La levée dont parle le Sénateur a huit ou dix pieds de haut. Il n'est donc point étonnant qu'elle coûte vingt cents. Le moyen dont j'ai parlé est plus convenable pour estimer la dépense. Les commissaires pensent qu'ils peuvent les faire faire aux prix stipulés dans le bill—Une autre objection est faite relativement aux plans de ces terres—La section se lit ainsi: Que sont ces plans? Les arpenteurs dans leurs courses passent devant chaque arbre marqué et connaissent chacun d'eux dans un township. Ils les reportent tous sur leur carnet de note pour lui servir ensuite car par une des sections du bill, le gouverneur est autorisé à recevoir de la vente des terres quand il le croit convenable. Comment peut il le faire s'il n'a aucun document pour se diriger. Le bill ne demande pas que des relevés exacts soient faits ainsi que les Sénateurs semblent le croire. Ces objections bien que peu importantes sont cependant suffisantes pour tuer le bill si on insiste. Je demanderai combien de temps il faut à la Chambre pour faire une nouvelle division, il y a là beaucoup de mécontents qui ne voudraient pas consentir à en faire un autre même pour sauver le bill. J'admets aussi qu'une clause est nécessaire pour le mettre en force, mais il est aisé de l'ajouter, Je répète que les objections qui ont été faites ne nous autorisent pas à courir le risque de perdre le bill. Je fais la motion de déposer sur la table l'amendement du Sénateur de St-Martin.

Mr Palfrey,

Je fais la motion de déposer sur le bureau le bill et l'amendement.

Digitized by Google

Les amendements sont déposés sur le bureau.

Mr Palfrey,

Je fais maintenant la motion de déposer le bill sur le bureau.

Mr Hodge,

Je désirerais entendre un partisan du bill nous dire quel avantage il offre sur le système actuel.

Mr Wickliffe,

Il crée quatre district et divise le fonds en quatre parties.

Mr Hodge,

Cela ne fera qu'ajouter un suçoir de plus aux trois qui agissent déjà sur le trésor public.

Mr de Russy,

Je vais donner au Sénateur les informations qu'il demande. Le troisième district est trop grand, un commissaire ne peut le surveiller, et par ce motif on a cru nécessaire de diminuer l'étendue du 3me district et de le diviser en deux.

La motion de déposer le bill sur le bureau est perdue.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je demande l'adoption de la première section et la question préalable.

Le secrétaire fait l'appel, arrivé au nom de Mr Trudeau, celui-ci dit:

Je vote non, parce que ce bill n'est point conforme aux dispositions de la Constitution.

Mr Hodge présente certains amendements.

Mr Wickliffe,

Voici les motifs qui me font voter contre les amendements. Ce bill est un compromis de la Chambre et c'est avec grande difficulté qu'un bill a été voté par elle. Un changement quel qu'il soit nous empêchera d'arriver à un entendu avec la Chambre.

Mr Hodge,

Je demande à dire quelques mots à ce sujet. Par la section 18 il est procédé à une distribution de fonds. Cette distribution consacre une grande injustice pour les paroisses du 3me district. Je fais la motion de retrancher les Avoyelles et De Soto afin de diminuer le district d'autant, et d'augmenter en proportion le suivant, pour établir à peu près l'égalité entre eux. Le bill est loin de faire une distribution équitable. Le 2me district reçoit près de la moitié du fonds. La division du fonds est hors de toute proportion avec l'ouvrage à faire. Quelqu'un prétendra-t-il que le 2me district renferme autant de terres non améliorées et non protégée par des levées que le 3me? Ce dernier renferme tout le cours de la rivière Rouge dans les limites de l'Etat. Les deux rives ont besoin de recevoir des levées. C'est 900 milles à peu près à construire sur la rivière Rouge. La distribution des fonds n'est pas en rapport avec l'étendue de terres marécageuses de chaque district. Personne ne dira qu'il y a autant de terres marécageuses dans le 2me district que dans le 3me. Dans ce district il y a peu de terres entrées, et en conséquence il y en a d'autant plus d'impropres à la culture. Les fonds ne doivent pas être distribués au bénéfice des planteurs mais bien pour améliorer et dessécher les terres marécageuses appartenant à l'Etat. Le devoir de l'Etat est d'améliorer le terres publiques inondées. Telle a été l'usage. Quel sera l'effet du bill? C'est purement un système favorisant des individus, et comme tel je le dénonce. $50,000 sont allouées pour avantager les planteurs et non pour protéger par des levées et dessécher des terres marécageuses et inondées. C'est souverainement injuste. Je dois comme Sénateur du 3me district persister dans mon opposition au bill. Il est trop injuste envers la section que je représente. Je dois insister sur une distribution équitable. Le bill accorde la moindre somme au district le plus étendu. C'est manifestement injuste. Dans notre district est la rivière Rouge et a vaste étendue de terres inondées, sans compter beaucoup d'autres terres qu'il faut entourer de levées et dessécher. Et cependant nous ne recevons pas plus que le district où est située la Nouvelle-Orléans. Personne ne prétendra cependant qu'il y a autant à faire dans ce district que dans le nôtre. On donne à la rivière Rouge ce qu'on veut, et non ce qui lui revient. Dans le second district presque toutes les terres basses sont protégées et nécessairement il a besoin de moins d'argent. Et cependant ce district reçoit autant que le 3me. Le 2me district qui profite du bill le soutiendra sans doute. Il en sera de même de la Nouvelle-Orléans dont le district reçoit 7|32, bien qu'il renferme si peu de terres non protégées par des levées C'est plus, certainement, que cette ville n'a droit à prétendre, et sans doute elle soutiendra le bill. Quant à nous, habitants de la rivière Rouge, nous devons recevoir ce que l'on veut bien nous donner. J'ai été contre le bill de l'année dernière à cause de semblable injustice dans la distribution. Le 3me district renferme deux fois autant de terres marécageuses et inondées que le 2d et reçoit à peu près la même allocation, 7|32 pour le 2d et 7|32 pour le 3me. Je dis aux Sénateurs qui soutiennent ce bill que le seul motif qui les porte à le soutenir est le désir de voir leurs habitations protégées. Je désire les voir à l'abri de l'inondation, mais ce n'est pas là l'objet de la donation, faite par le Congrès.

Mr de Russy,

En ma qualité de résident du troisième district je dois certainement m'y intéresser tout autant que le Sénateur de Caddo et cependant je ne me joindrai pas à son opposition à ce bill; la division du fonds n'est pas proportionnée à la surface actuelle des districts, mais à l'ouvrage qu'il est nécessaire de faire et qui dépend en grande partie de la hauteur des levées à construire. Je crois que la répartition est aussi équitable qu'elle peut l'être. Le Sénateur dit que les terres faisant face au Mississippi dans le second district sont bien protégées. A-t-il pris les terres de derrière en considération? Je ne pense pas qu'il l'ait fait. Je répète que la division du fonds n'est pas basée sur l'étendue du sol, mais sur la hauteur des levées à construire. Si le Sénateur veut prendre en considération la hauteur de l'eau dans les deux districts pendant les inondations, il trouvera qu'elle a été beaucoup moins grande sur la rivière Rouge et que conséquemment les levées à y construire doivent être beaucoup moins élevées. J'ai profondément réfléchi à ce sujet l'année dernière. Le bill de l'année dernière répartissait le fonds comme suit: au 1er district 3|8, au 2e 2|8, au 3me 3|8. Le bill actuel donne au premier 11|32, au second 7|32, au troisième 8|32 et au quatrième 6|32. On voit donc que nous du troisième district nous gagnons réellement ce qu'il avait avant lorsqu'il était composé du troisième et du quatrième. Nous recevons actuellement 14|32 au lieu de 11|32 l'année dernière. Nous gagnons donc au lieu de perdre. Si nous n'adoptons pas le bill nous resterons comme nous sommes. L'objection du Sénateur n'est certainement pas fondée.

Mr Hodge,

Le troisième et le quatrième district s réunis ont 14|32 mais nous constituons maintenant le troisième.

Mr de Russy,

Le Senateur objecte donc à une division qui nous donne plus que nous n'avions. Je me suis

Digitized by Google

fréquemment entretenu avec les membres du comité relativement à la distribution de ce fonds et je dois dire que comme partie intéressée je suis satisfait. Je soutiens par conséquent la proposition faite pour déposer la motion sur le bureau.

Mr Hodge,

Le Sénateur connait-il ce qui s'est passé dans la Chambre à propos de ce bill ?

Mr de Russy,

Oui.

Mr Hodge,

Le Sénateur sait-il que le premier et second districts ont donné au troisième juste ce qu'il leur a convenu ?

Mr de Russy,

Je n'en sais rien, mais il me parait peu probable qu'il en soit ainsi lorsque les deux districts qui composaient l'ancien troisième district reçoivent 14,32 au lieu de 11,32 qu'ils avaient l'année dernière

Mr Hodge,

Mais le troisième district ne reçoit pas autant. Je n'ai entendu jusqu'à présent aucun argument qui me prouve que la Nouvelle-Orléans ait droit à 7,32 et le troisième district seulement 8,32— Je ne vois pas pourquoi la Nouvelle-Orléans serait préférée à la rivière Rouge. Ce bill est injuste envers le district de la rivière Rouge et je suis étonné de le voir soutenir par un Sénateur qui représente cette portion de l'Etat.

Mr de Russy,

Le premier district ne reçoit que 7,32 ce qui est est moins que le quart de ce qu'il recevait l'année dernière—L'ancien troisième reçoit 14,32.

Mr Hodge,

Où vont les 6,10 qui restent ? Non à la rivière Rouge mais à l'autre district maintenant nommé le quatrième.

Mr de Russy,

J'ai montré que la rivière Rouge est bénéficiée de ,35

Mr Hodge,

Je ne vois pas comment.

Mr de Russy,

Je l'ai déja expliqué. Si le Sénateur désire le trouver qu'il veuille bien calculer et il reconnaitra que j'ai raison. Il est vrai que le nouveau troisième district ne reçoit pas tout ce qui est enlevé du premier et du second, mais il reçoit en proportion plus que l'année dernière en tenant compte des mêmes paroisses. Si nous changeons cette division nous n'aurons pas le temps d'en faire une nouvelle.

Mr Hodge,

Par l'ancienne loi le troisième district aurait reçu 12,32. Ce district contient plus de terres marécageuses que deux des autres pris ensemble.

Mr de Russy,

Il n'en est point ainsi.

Mr Hodge,

Je serai bien aise que le Sénateur voulut indiquer le rapport.

Mr de Russy,

Je suis redevable à une personne bien renseignée sur ce sujet d'un tableau des étendues comparatide terres marécageuses dans chaque district. Il vient de me le faire parvenir. Le premier district contient quatre cent mille acres.

Mr Hodge,

Je demande au Sénateur s'ils sont composés en entier de terres marécageuses et inondées ?

Mr de Russy,

Oui, et ce compte rendu vient du Bureau qui est au rez-de-chaussée.

Mr Evans,

Sont-ce des terres publiques ou appartiennent-elles à des particuliers ?

Mr de Russy,

Je n'en sais rien maintenant mais la quantité de terres marécageuses s'élève à 400,000 acres dans le premier district, à 5,000,000 dans le second à 1,700,000 dans le troisième, à 2,400,000 dans le quatrième et je répéterai encore que les dépenses de levées sont basées sur leur élévation.

Mr Hodge,

Le Sénateur ne sait-il pas qu'il y a autant de terres inondées en Louisiane sur la rivière Rouge que sur le Mississippi En 1849 il n'y avait pas un pouce de terre à sec sur tout le parcours de la rivière.

Mr de Russy,

1849 a été une année extraordinaire et je n'ai jamais vu un pareille inondation sur la rivière Rouge. Mais pour établir une juste comparaison, il faut prendre les deux sections dans la même position. Il faut considérer le montant relatif des dommages qui seraient éprouvés de part et d'autre si elles votaient également sans protection. La grande inondation de 1849 ne peut se comparer en fait de dommages à celle qui aurait eu lieu sur le Mississippi si on y avait été sans protégé.

La première section est adoptée.

Mr Palfrey,

Je demanderai au Sénat la permission de changer mon vote sur la première section du bill. Mon attention a été détournée au moment du vote, et j'ai peut-être agi légèrement. Je n'ai pas d'objection à la premiere section, et je désire plutôt paraître sur le journal du Sénat avoir voté pour que contre.

La seconde section est prise en considération.

Mr King,

Je désire offrir un amendement qui changera, s'il est adopté, tout le caractère du bill. Je propose de faire élire les commissaires par le peuple. J'ai déjà exprimé des vues favorables à ce principe. J'appartiens à cette classe d'hommes politiques qui pensent que le peuple est capable de prendre soin de lui-même et d'élire ses propres officiers. J'ai beaucoup entendu parler du pouvoir d'un seul homme et sur les dangers qui nous menaceraient si nous adoptions le système du bill soumis au Sénat. De terribles tableaux ont été faits des résultats horribles qui en seraient la conséquence. On a même prétendu que le peuple ne serait pas capable d'elire cette classe d'officiers Mais actuellement, sous un autre système, nous voyons le fonds des terres marécageuses tomber en ruines. Si le peuple avait à se mêler des élections de ces officiers, je pense qu'ils deviendraient plus vigilants.

Mr Lacoste,

Lorsque le peuple a élu un Gouverneur, il ne l'a pas fait avec le désir de lui enlever tout pouvoir. Je demande en conséquence que la motion soit déposée sur le bureau.

Mr Moore,

J'ai déjà fait part de mes vues à ce sujet. Je suis aussi en faveur d'une élection par le peuple. Ce n'est pas seulement une doctrine démocratique, mais une bonne doctrine whig qui, je l'ai déjà dit, est le véritable parti démocratique. En preuve de cette assertion, je puis citer la Constitution elle-même qui veut ces fonctions électives J'ai confiance dans le peuple, je crois qu'il choisira des officiers au moins aussi bons, s'ils ne sont pas meilleurs que ceux que le gouverneur pourra nommer. Si nous confions au peuple la nomination, le fonds ne sera pas gaspillé comme il l'a déjà été.

Mr Wickliffe,

Un vieux proverbe dit que le temps change tout Tempora mu antur est mutemur in i lis.

Il est heureux que l'art de l'impression ait été inventé pour nous permettre de découvrir et d'exposer des contradictions qui pourraient autrement échapper à nos souvenirs ou à nos regards. Comme un exemple de cette vérité, nous n'avons qu'à invoquer les débats officiels du Sénat de la Louisiane pendant l'année 1853. Ils montrent que le Sénateur distingué qui professe maintenant un tel amour pour ce cher peuple, une telle confiance dans son jugement et dans sa capacité pour élire avec certitude les meilleurs officiers, était animé alors de sentiments bien différents. Je vais lire l'extrait d'un discours prononcé par le Sénateur à la dernière session. (Ici Mr Wickliffe donne lecture d'un extrait des débats de 1853.)

Mr le Président, si un bureau composé de quatre membres ne pouvait être alors élu par ce cher peuple, objet d'un amour sans limites de la part du Sénateur, un bureau de même nature n'est-il point impraticable aujourd'hui? Le Sénateur expliquera-t-il cette contradiction et mettra-t-il d'accord ses inconséquences? Dira-t-il que le principe est changé parce que nous avons aboli les articles de la Constitution qui établissaient un bureau des travaux publics? Ne sait-il pas que plusieurs entre nous ont voté contre, l'année dernière, dans le but d'organiser un système pour nos terres marécageuses? Ne sait-il pas que le Sénat est déterminé à donner son concours à tout ce que pourra faire l'autre Chambre?

(Ici Mr Wickliffe lit un autre extrait).

Voilà ce que le Sénateur a dit sur ce sujet. A quoi est dû ce changement prodigieux? Le Gouverneur est un ingénieur pratique supérieur dans sa profession. N'est-il pas capable de choisir cette classe d'officiers aussi bien que le peuple? Je crois qu'oui, et je ne pense pas que le peuple ait le moindre désir de s'en occuper. Il est parfaitement désireux de confier ce soin au gouverneur envers lequel il a déjà exprimé sa confiance.

Mr King,

Il est facile de produire des charges d'inconséquence, quoique toujours il ne soit pas facile de les prouver. Le Sénateur d'Ouest Féliciana qui vient de parler, a essayé de me convaincre d'inconséquence dans la conduite que j'ai suivie au sujet de nos améliorations intérieures. Je puis répondre à cette accusation par une dénégation formelle. Il n'y a point, par conséquent, de nécessité à donner les explications que le Sénateur a si hautement demandées. Il est vrai de dire que j'étais opposé au Bureau des travaux publics, et que je suis opposé à tout Bureau formé dans ce but. Je l'ai dit quarante fois et je le répète encore. Mais mon objection porte-t-elle sur le Bureau lui-même et non sur le mode de nomination de ses membres? Je ne désire point enlever au peuple son droit d'élire ses propres officiers; les hommes ne peuvent enlever un droit qui vient de Dieu. Mais si je puis aisément repousser l'accusation d'inconséquence que le Sénateur a portée contre moi, je ne pense pas qu'il puisse aussi facilement m'échapper à la conviction sur une pareille accusation que je porte. Le Sénateur a fréquemment insisté sur tous les tons devant le Sénat les périls du pouvoir d'un seul homme, ses résultats dangereux et son antagonisme avec nos institutions, et maintenant le Sénateur favorise, soutient même un but qui accroît le patronage déjà étendu de l'Exécutif en mettant entre ses mains la nomination d'un nombre d'officiers importants. Que le Sénateur explique ce changement, qu'il mette d'accord ses inconséquences. Celle ci, Mr. le Président, est réelle et non point imaginaire; c'est un cas où les batteries qu'un homme a pointées peuvent avec succès être retournées contre lui-même.

La Constitution ne donne pas ce pouvoir au Gouverneur; la Convention n'y a point songé. Quand mon bill donnait à l'Ingénieur le pouvoir de nommer ses aides, on a beaucoup dit à propos de la puissance d'un seul homme et du danger d'en confier autant aux mains d'une seule personne. Et maintenant, le Sénateur qui paraissait en proie à une si profonde inquiétude à l'idée de confier ce pouvoir à un seul homme, désire donner la nomination de tous les officiers au Gouverneur. Que le Sénateur explique donc cette contradiction. Quant à moi, je suis parfaitement satisfait que tout ce que prouvent les records sur mon compte dans tout ce que j'ai dit sur cette question, c'est qu'il n'existe rien que je voudrais n'avoir pas prononcé. Je crois qu'il y a beaucoup de personnes qui seraient bien aises d'avoir été d'accord avec moi et d'avoir adopté mes suggestions. Mes votes sont devant le Sénat et présentent, je crois, un compte-rendu aussi clair que celui d'aucun de ses membres.

Mr Wickliffe,

L'inconséquence a très peu à faire avec la question qui nous occupe. J'ai sciemment dit que les temps changent et les hommes avec. Je demanderai sérieusement au Sénateur comment il a voté sur la proposition du Représentant de Caddo pour rentrer les commissaires électifs? Par les débats imprimés il paraît avoir dit que le système ne serait pas rendu par la ineffectif en raison de l'élection par le peuple qui choisirait des hommes de différentes parties animés de préjugés différens et de différentes affections pour des localités. Le Sénateur dit maintenant qu'il est étrange que je me sois opposé à ce bill d'abomination qu'il a présenté, à ce bill qui plaçait tout le fonds des terres marécageuses sous le contrôle d'un seul homme. Le gouverneur pour lequel le Sénateur paraît concevoir tant d'humeur n'a pas un pouvoir semblable. Je ne puis pas plus admettre le pouvoir d'un seul homme que ce cri démagogique d'amour pour le cher peuple que proièrent souvent des Sénateurs qui devraient avoir plus de respect pour l'intelligence de leurs auditeurs.

Mr King,

Le Sénat jugera de quel côté est l'inconséquence. Je n'ai aucune objection à lui soumettre la question. Le Sénateur a essayé de lui prouver en contradiction en citant des passages de mes discours publiés mais il n'a pu réussir attendu qu'il n'y a point de contradictions à trouver. Je regrette que le Sénat ait été troublé par une discussion personnelle de ce genre et qui n'aurait jamais eu lieu de mon consentement; mes actes passés n'ont rien à faire avec la question qui occupe le Sénat qui doit être discutée sur ses propres mérites. Ce qu'a pu faire un Sénateur autrefois ne peut affecter aucune question. Les omissions ou les actes dont un membre de ce corps a pu se rendre coupable ne doivent point être portés devant lui. Ce ne sont pas là des sujets légitimes de discussion et bien moins encore des arguments de bon aloi.

Mr Lacey,

Je désire enrégistrer les raisons qui me font voter contre l'amendement.

Mr Ryan,

Je vote contre le pouvoir donné au gouverneur quelqu'en puisse être la conséquence.

Mr Renner,

Je désire savoir si la détermination de la majorité du Sénat est de permettre l'adoption d'aucun

Digitized by Google

amendement sous le prétexte de la brièveté du temps. S'il en est ainsi je m'occuperai d'autres affaires et je quitterai cette salle. Ce bill est de la plus grande importance, de lui dépend en grande partie la prospérité de l'Etat mais c'est une expérience. Dira-t-on que nous n'avons pas le tems de l'amender ou de l'améliorer? Ce n'est point ainsi que le Sénat de la Louisiane doit légiférer. Nous devons considérer le bill d'après ses propres mérites et sans nous occuper de l'opinion que nous pouvons supposer exister dans la Chambre. Les intérêts dont ce bill dispose sont trop importants pour que nous les réglions d'une façon tellement sommaire qu'il nous soit interdit de l'amender et à peine de le discuter. J'invite le Sénat à ne pas se laisser influencer par un pareil motif.

Mr de Russy,

Les observations du Sénateur méritent un mot en reponse—Il n'est point fait à ce bill d'objections importantes. On l'a discuté et les objections qui sont faites sont tellement futiles qu'elles ne justifient pas la chance que l'on pourrait courir de perdre le bill. On a répondu à toutes et, je crois, à la satisfaction du Sénat. Si une objection principale était présentée je voterai certainement pour amender le bill. La section qui prête le plus à la discussion, celle qui se rapporte aux plans des terres a déjà été discutée. On a objecté qu'il faudrait faire des arpentages dispendieux,—j'ai montré que tel n'était pas le cas. Les arpenteurs doivent faire seulement des plans en minutes. Le bill autorise le gouvernement a retirer des terres du marché lorsqu'il le juge convenable. Ce sont des terres améliorées et a cet effet le gouvernement doit avoir quelques documents pour agir. Chaque ingénieur reconnait les points de repère.

Il y en a des centaines et il peut à leur aide marquer et placer pour l'avenir les points pour les levées et les autres travaux. Une autre raison pour l'adoption du bill est que si ce n'est pas fait aujourd'hui cela ne pourra pas être fait l'année prochaine. Ce bill a été soigneusement étudié. La disposition la plus importante est celle qui a trait a la disposition des fonds—elle a été justement faite et ne peut donner lieu à des plaintes de la part d'aucune section. La Législature est annuelle et si un changement devient nécessaire il sera facile à réaliser. Si nous amendons le bill en substituant la distribution des fonds suivant les divisions géographiques il ne reviendra pas jusqu'à nous. La Chambre ne consentira pas à changer l'ordre par elle adopté—Je crois corrects les calculs du Sénateur de St. Martin—J'ai eu lui une confiance implicite et je suis prêt a soumettre mon jugement au sien—J'ai la confiance que toutes les objections à ce bill peuvent être repoussées par des explications,—j'espère qu'il sera adopté par le Sénat, c'est une bonne loi qui doit être mise en force.

Mr Defreese—L'amendement que j'offre est un substitut à la section qui est sous considération—J'approuve complétement ce qui a été dit par le Sénateur de l'Ascension. Je considérerai comme le plus bel acte de ma vie d'avoir suivi son exemple en pareille circonstance.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je fais la motion d'amender en insérant que toutes personnes employées à construire des levées seront élues par le peuple.—(Cet amendement est ensuite retiré.)

Mr Martel,

La seule raison qui me fait voter pour ce bill est que je le crois utile, capable de faciliter nos améliorations intérieures et convenable aux intérêts de mes constituans.

L'amendement est rejeté.

Les section 2, 3, 4 et 5 sont adoptées.

La section 6 est prise en considération.

Mr Defreese,

Je crois qu'une objection peut être faite à cette section et je ne pense pas qu'on puisse faire un devoir impératif de ces réunions aux époques fixées.

La section est adoptée.

La section 7, 8 et 9 sont adoptées.

Le Sénat prend la 10me section.

Mr Kenner,

Cette section semble dire que le propriétaire ne pourrait pas construire une levée s'il le désirait à moins de payer la moitié en argent. C'est là le sens évident. Je fais la motion d'ajouter les mots suivans: (Mr Kenner donne lecture des mots qu'il désire insérer.) Mon objet est simple. Nous faisons supporter la moitié des frais aux propriétaires, c'est juste—chaque propriétaire qui cultive la terre désirera payer la contribution en travail.

Mr de Russy,

Je ne vois pas de nécessité à cela, supposons qu'une crevasse survienne à quelque distance de l'endroit où se fait le travail. Le Sénateur dit que l'habitant aura le droit de payer en fournissant des travailleurs au lieu de le faire en argent.

Mr Kenner,

Ce n'est pas ce que j'ai dit.

Mr Wickliffe,

La section est meilleure telle qu'elle est que comme on propose de l'amender. Cela aurait pour effet d'empêcher les habitants venant dans l'Etat non seulement de construire leurs levées mais encore d'employer leurs esclaves. Il doit y avoir quelque obstacle à cela. Un grand nombre d'habitant, si ce n'est tous, feraient construire ces levées par l'Etat en lui faisant payer l'argent comptant et en fournissant la main-d'œuvre.

Mr Rivers,

Le Sénateur ne saisit pas bien l'objet de l'amendement. Le paiement n'aura pas l'effet d'être un obstacle. L'effet réel sera d'empêcher le propriétaire de négliger ses levées. L'amendement permettrait au propriétaire de façade de faire son propre travail en fournissant son atelier, le bill l'empêche.

Mr King,

L'amendement n'obvierait pas à toute la difficulté; l'effet de la section est de placer toutes les levées sur le fleuve sous le contrôle de l'Etat—La simple lecture de la section suffira pour convaincre de ce fait le Sénateur (ici Mr King donne lecture de la section 10). On voit qu'il est obligatoire pour les officiers de l'Etat de construire les levées. Il y a dans la paroisse de Carroll une petite levée nommée levée du Diamond Island. Toute nouvelle levée rentre dans les dispositions de la loi—Les voisins seront nécessairement intéressés à avoir les levées dans son voisinage plus solidement construites. Dans mon bill, cette partie du sujet était soigneusement considérée et complétement prévue. Je n'ai pas confié ce soin important à des raisons et à des parties intéressées mais à des officiers assermentés de l'Etat. On en voit la nécessité En certains lieux les levées sont construites par les paroisses et quelque fois par une contribution sur la corporation. Suivant ces lieux les modes différent. Ce bill n'établit pas de compensation pour l'Etat s'il construit des levées à des particuliers. Je ne voudrais pas cela car nous construirons des levées pour le bénéfice des individus avec l'argent de l'Etat. (Ici Mr King donne lecture d'un extrait du bill des améliorations intérieures.) Le Sénat peut juger de l'importance de cette section. Il e compare avec celle du bill qui est devant lui. Examinons aussi une autre section de mon bill. (Ici Mr King lit cette section du bill des améliorations intérieures relative aux terres abandonnées à l'Etat.) C'est là une disposition qui a été omise dans le bill. Par une autre provision de mon bill les contrats pour ouvrages ne peuvent pas dépasser une certaine somme—C'est afin de permettre aux habitans d'en prendre partie. Ces exemples montrent au Sénat combien cette espèce de législation est impolitique. Il y a une section de mon bill qui, j'en suis sûr, sera reconnu par tout le monde beaucoup plus effective que le bill que nous discutons et cependant je ne puis le faire adopter parce que la majorité a décidé d'enlever ce bill à la hâte sans amendement sur le motif qu'il est trop tard.

Digitized by Google

Mr Moore,

Je désire offrir un amendement.

Cet amendement est rejetée.

L'amendement de Mr Kenner est adopté.

Les sections 11 et 12 sont adoptées.

La section 13 est prise en considération.

Mr Rivers,

Je fais la motion de retrancher tout ce qui se trouve après le mot commissaires. (Adoptée.)

Mr Moore,

J'ai un autre amendement à offrir. L'expérience a prouvé que le système par contrats est le pire de tous à adopter. Le gouvernement général y a renoncé et n'y reviendra jamais. Il nous faut des propositions cachetées, toutes les parties peuvent ainsi offrir dans les limites où elles peuvent agir.

Mr McKay,

Le proviso de la section ne satisfait-il point aux objections du Sénateur?

Mr Moore,

Non, monsieur.

Mr de Rusey,

Il n'y pas là d'objection, je pense que la section pourvoie au meilleur mode à suivre pour adjuger le travail.

Mr King,

Je donne notice que je ferai la motion de reconsidérer le vote de la 10me section.

Mr Rivers,

Le Sénateur veut-il tuer ce bill? Il voit que le Sénat est en faveur de l'adopter tel qu'il est. Je lui demande amicalement si son objet est d'enterrer une mesure qui a la faveur du Sénat;

Mr King,

Je répète que je ferai la motion de reconsider le vote et si le Sénateur désire discuter avec moi sur cette section je suis prêt à fournir mon nom au journal du Sénat.

Le Sénat prend la section 14.

Mr Moore,

Le comité a recommandé de retrancher tout ce qui suit le mot fonds dans cette section. J'approuve cette recommandation. On peut trouver ces plans au Bureau des terres et il est inutile de faire de nouvelles dépenses. Je demande par conséquent de retrancher tout ce qui suit le mot fonds jusqu'à la fin de la section.

L'amendement est adopté ainsi que la section.

La section 15 est adoptée.

La section 16 est prise en considération.

Mr Trudeau,

Je demande à retrancher tout le proviso qui établit que le bill ne s'appliquera pas aux propriétaires des terres hautes. Je ne vois pas pourquoi les propriétaires des terres basses supporteraient toutes ces dépenses.

Mr De Rusey,

Il y a une grande différence entre les deux. Il n'y a rien surtout à faire pour les terres hautes, et je ne vois pas pourquoi un résidant de terres hautes aurait à contribuer au bénéfice de ceux qui ont préféré s'établir sur les terres basses.

La section est adoptée.

La section 18 est adoptée.

La 19me section est prise en considération.

Mr King offre un amendement.

Mr De Rusey,

Je crois que ce changement produirait des délais et je ne crains pas de déficit pour cette année. Il vaut mieux attendre à la Législature prochaine pour adopter les moyens d'y faire face s'il existe.

L'amendement est déposé sur le Bureau.

La section est adoptée et aussi les sections 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 et 25.

La section 26 est devant le Sénat.

Mr Moore,

Je crois de mon devoir comme membre du Sénat, toutes les fois que je crois pouvoir rendre un bill meilleur, de proposer les amendemens que je peux considérer comme nécesssaires et utiles. Ce bill doit être changé en divers points considérés, par exemple, le compte rendu des énormes sommes dépensées pour frais de voyage pour la plupart non justifiés par les pièces à l'appui. Pour juger jusqu'à quel point cela était vraiment nécessaire, considérez que le commissaire du Troisième District pour une distance double à parcourir n'a pas dépensé plus de la moitié de la somme employée par le commissaire du Second et plus du quart de celle déboursée par le commissaire du premier district. Je demande que les commissaires reçoivent pour leurs dépenses de voyages une somme fixe qui ne pourra être dépassée dans aucun cas. D'après le rapport, $179 de fournitures de bureau ont été dépensées, et je ne crains pas de dire que si nous cherchons dans le bureau, nous n'en trouverons pas pour $5.

Mr De Rusey,

La seule manière de régler cela serait d'accorder un millage.—Je désire que tout soit fait aussi bon marché que possible; mais nous ne pouvons pas obliger les commissaires à se contenter d'une somme précise. Le Commissaire de mon District est j'en suis sûr économe, et il ne dépensera pas un cent sans nécessité absolue. Je vote pour une échelle de millage.

L'amendement est déposé sur le bureau.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je désire placer les commissaires des terres marécageuses dans une position convenable devant le public.—Le Sénateur faisait partie du comité chargé d'examiner les dépenses contingentes des commissaires. Je désire savoir s'il a trouvé quelque chose de blâmable.

Mr Moore,

Beaucoup de ces comptes n'étaient pas accompagnés de pièces à l'appui. Nécessairement je ne puis rien en dire Tout cela peut être correct, mais il m'est impossible d'en témoigner.

Mr Wickliffe,

Ont-ils trop dépensé?

Mr. Moore,

Les dépenses contingentes s'élèvent au-delà de deux mille piastres. Je crois que c'est trop.

Mr King,

En tant que la question peut m'être adressée, je dirai que la plupart des frais ne sont fondés ni légalement, ni raisonnablement.

Mr. De Rusey,

Il y a beaucoup de dépenses nécessaires pour lesquelles on n'a pu prendre de reçus, telles que transports de bagage, traversée des rivières, &c.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Moore,

Je n'accuse pas les commissaires de fraudes ou de dépenses exagérées, je dis seulement que dans beaucoup de cas il n'y avait pas de pièces à l'appui.

Sur motion, l'amendement est rejeté.

Le bill est adopté.

NEBRASKA.

Mr. Kenner soumet les résolutions suivantes:

Il est résolu par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentants de l'Etat de la Louisiane, réunis en Assemblée Générale; que le peuple de l'Etat de la Louisiane a toujours envisagé la question de l'esclavage comme étant de la plus haute importance, et considéré l'adoption des mesures de 1850, connues sous le nom de Bill de Compromis, comme mettant un terme à l'agitation soulevée par ce sujet.

Resolu, que dans l'opinion des membres de la Législature de la Louisiane, ces mesures avaient été prises pour produire un effet plus durable et plus permanent que la simple conciliation dans les difficultés survenues alors dans la récente acquisition du territoire mexicain; et qu'alors certains grands principes furent établis; qu'ils ont fourni non seulement un remède aux maux qui existaient, mais qui, dans l'avenir, pouvaient prévenir une nouvelle agitation, en retirant au Congrès la question d'esclavage, et en confiant sa décision à ceux qui y sont seuls intéressés et qui seuls en subissent les conséquences.

Il est par conséquent de plus résolu, que le bill du territoire de Nebraska, qui est maintenant devant le Congrès, en tant qu'il doit assurer de garantir le principe de non intervention, de même que l'institution de l'esclavage, nous ait donné notre approbation, et nous invitons nos sénateurs et représentans au Congrès à le maintenir.

Sur motion, ces résolutions sont référées au Comité des Relations Fédérales.

SOURDS-MUETS.

Mr Munday présente les résolutions suivantes qui sont lues et adoptées:

Attendu qu'en vertu de divers actes du Congrès, les institutions pour les sourds-muets des Etats de la Nouvelle Angleterre et du Kentucky, ont reçu comme dotations une grande étendue de terres publiques, à l'effet d'instruire les infortunés de cette classe, et

Attendu que le gouvernement a toujours accordé des terres publiques aux institutions créées pour l'éducation publique, et que les malheureux aveugles et les sourds-muets d'une majorité des Etats n'ont jamais participé aux avantages provenant de ces donations; et,

Attendu que l'Etat de la Louisiane, en vertu d'un acte approuvé le 18 mars 1852, a autorisé, sous certaines conditions raisonnables, l'admission dans son institution des sourds-muets et des aveugles venant des Etats voisins, ce qui rend cette institution intéressante pour toute la portion sud-ouest de l'Union—portion qui, par sa position géographique, ne peut jouir des avantages qui resultent des donations faites jusqu'à présent en faveur des sourds-muets; et,

Attendu que le Congrès fait des donations successives de ces terres pour divers objets à l'exclusion de ces infortunés muets et aveugles qui, si nous attendons encore, ne pourront jamais peut-être jouir des bienfaits du gouvernement, qui sont distribués si largement pour l'éducation de ceux qui jouissent de toutes leurs facultés;

Attendu qu'une institution pour les sourds-muets et les aveugles dans cet Etat coûte nécessairement plus que dans les autres Etats du Nord et de l'Est:

En conséquence, il est résolu par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentans de l'Etat de la Louisiane, réunis en Assemblée Générale; Que nos Sénateurs et Représentans au Congrès sont invités à faire tous leurs efforts pour faire passer un acte pour accorder à l'Etat de la Louisiane quatre townships de terre pour l'éducation des sourds-muets, et trois townships pour l'éducation des aveugles.

Résolu, Que la Louisiane ne demandant rien pour les malheureux qui se trouvent dans ses limites, qu'elle ne soit prête à accorder aux autres, invite ses Sénateurs et Représentans au Congrès à soutenir toutes les propositions justes et équitables qui seront faites pour des donations semblables en faveur des autres Etats pour un but si louable.

Mr King, au nom du comité des améliorations à l'intérieur, présente les rapports suivans:

A l'Hon. W W Farmer, Président du Sénat.

Le Comité des Améliorations à l'Intérieur, des Terres Marécageuses et des Levées, auquel avait été renvoyé le bill intitulé

Acte pour amender et décréter de nouveau l'acte intitulé acte pour améliorer et drainer les terres marécageuses et submergées de l'Etat de la Louisiane, &c, approuvé le 30 avril 1853, allouant la somme de trois cent mille piastres à l'effet de mettre à exécution les dispositions de cet acte;

A l'honneur de rapporter ce qui suit:

Le Comité adopte les amendemens suivans:

A la dix-septième ligne de la treizième section, d'insérer le mot "à" immédiatement après le mot "accepter"; et à la 19me ligne de la même section, d'effacer les mots "plus grand", et d'insérer les mots "plus haut"; et d'effacer après le mot "Commissaire", tout le reste de la section, à d'effacer tout ce qui suit le mot "fonds".

Le comité rapporte de plus que ses membres sont divisés dans leurs opinions sur les mérites du bill.

Le Comité Spécial composé de Sénateurs de la Nouvelle-Orléans, rapporte unanimement contre le bill intitulé:

Acte pour amender l'acte pour consolider la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, et pour pourvoir au gouvernement et à l'administration de ses affaires, approuvé le 23 février 1852.

Signé, W. W. KING, Président.

Mr Munday, au nom du comité réuni des Institutions Charitables et Publiques, soumet le rapport suivant:

RAPPORT

Du Comité des deux Chambres sur les Institutions Charitables et Publiques.

Le Comité des deux Chambres sur les Institutions Charitables et publiques, après avoir mis tout le zèle possible dans l'accomplissement des devoirs qui lui étaient imposés, vous présente maintenant son rapport.

La terrible épidémie qui a régné l'année dernière, a beaucoup contribué à augmenter les charges de plusieurs des institutions charitables subventionnées par l'Etat; on ne saurait trop louer ces institutions pour les efforts extraordinaires qu'elles ont faits pour secourir les malheureux. Leurs portes étaient ouvertes pour tous. Etat répandu leurs dons charitables non seulement sur les malheureux qui étaient atteints de la fièvre mais aussi elles ont adopté les infortunés enfants de ceux qui y ont succombé ; sentiment qui, Dieu merci, est inhérent à notre population ; et la Législature manquerait à un devoir sacré si elle ne le partageait pas. Aussi, convaincus que nous sommes des bons sentiments de la Législature envers ces institutions, nous lui recommandons d'accorder des subventions spéciales à quelques unes de celles que nous avons visitées. Et si votre Comité n'avait pas connaissance de la situation embarrassante du Trésor de l'Etat, il réclamerait en faveur de quelques unes de ces institutions des subventions beaucoup plus fortes que celles qu'il recommande de leur accorder aujourd'hui, connaissant leurs besoins et sachant combien elles le méritent.

La première de ces institutions que nous avons visitée, est l'Asile des Orphelins dans le 4me district de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Il s'y trouve maintenant cent dix-huit orphelins âgés de trois à treize ans. Elle est administrée par un Bureau de Directeurs, un Surintendant et une femme de charge ; les deux derniers s'occupent non seulement de l'administration générale de l'institution, mais aussi d'instruire les élèves. Le digne Président de la direction, Lucius C. Duncan, a fourni au comité un aperçu de la situation financière de l'institution, qui fait voir qu'elle a reçu en tout $13,739 97, laquelle somme, moins $4,025 97, a été dépensée. Le revenu fixe provenant de loyers, s'élevait l'année dernière à $1,348 32. Les enfants paraissent jouir d'une bonne santé. Douze de ces enfants ont été mis en apprentissage l'année dernière. La nourriture est abondante et saine ; mais nous avons suggéré aux Directeurs de faire des réparations pour améliorer l'édifice. Le dortoir est trop exposé au froid durant l'hiver.

La seconde que nous avons visitée, est l'Asile des Orphelines rue du Camp, sous la surveillance de Sœur Régis et de sept autres sœurs de la même religion. Cette institution fait la gloire de la religion chrétienne. Ces anges terrestres qui veillent constamment et silencieusement au bien-être moral et physique de ces malheureux petits orphelins, font plus que tous ces zélateurs dérégiés qui croient mieux servir Dieu en propageant les préjugés de leur secte, oubliant qu'ils sont que la charité émane du cœur, et qu'elle n'existe que dans les actions, et non en paroles.

Cette institution (l'Asile des Orphelines de la Nouvelle-Orléans) a admis depuis le mois de juin, cent vingt-huit orphelines, la plupart de l'âge le plus tendre. Le nombre total admis jusqu'aujourd'hui est de trois cent soixante. Nous ne pouvons que répéter ce que les comités des Législatures précédentes ont rapporté, que cet établissement ne pourrait être mieux administré en tout et partout. Cet asile n'a pas de subvention fixe, il dépend entièrement des allocations annuelles de la Législature et des legs et donations particulières. Cependant le bien qu'il fait ne saurait être calculé. On construit dans ce moment un édifice qui fera partie de l'asile et où les filles qui auront l'âge convenable pourront apprendre un état qui les mettra à même de gagner leur vie.

Nous avons visité ensuite l'Asile des Orphelines de Poydras, situé rue Julie, à la Nouvelle-Orléans. Cette institution a été libéralement dotée par Mr Julien Poydras. Elle est administrée par une Société de Bienfaisance des Dames de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Le nombre des orphelines qui y sont maintenant est de cent vingt-quatre. Le comité, pas plus que ceux qui ont été nommés précédemment, n'a pu obtenir un état de la situation financière de cette institution ; et il recommande à la Législature de n'accorder à l'avenir aucune allocation en faveur de ces institutions qui ne fourniront pas un état de leurs affaires financières.

Nous avons visité l'Asile des Orphelins de Ste-Marie, situé dans le 3me district de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Cet asile est sous le contrôle d'un Bureau de Directeurs, et est administré par six personnes d'une société religieuse, connue sous le nom de "Frères Chrétiens", qui se sont dévoués à l'éducation de la jeunesse ; et aussi par quelques dames religieuses qui surveillent les affaires domestiques.

Le nombre des enfants qui se trouvent dans cet asile est de 226, âgés de quatre mois à quatorze ans, parmi lesquels 62 ont été admis cette année. Quelques uns apprennent un état dans l'asile. On y construit maintenant une aile où ces enfants apprendront divers métiers. Votre comité approuve en entier l'administration de cet institution.

Votre comité a visité l'Asile des Orphelins, situé dans le 4me district de la Nouvelle Orléans. Cette institution a été créée sous les auspices de quelques dames charitables de la Nouvelle-Orléans, pour les enfants que l'épidémie de l'année dernière a rendus orphelins —Mme. Ross en est la Présidente. Le nombre d'enfants des deux sexes qui s'y trouvent, est de 67 ; leur âge varie. Tous ceux qui ont atteint l'âge convenable vont aux écoles publiques. On ne saurait trop louer celles qui ont établi cette institution, qui, selon nous, mérite d'être subventionnée par l'Etat.

Le comité a visité l'Asile Ste. Anne, pour les veuves et les orphelins dans l'indigence. Il recommande de lui allouer la même somme qui lui a été allouée l'année dernière.

Il a visité aussi l'Institution pour les Orphelins de Couleur Libres, située dans le 3me district de la Nouvelle Orléans. Votre comité ayant examiné avec soin cet établissement et la manière dont il est conduit, recommande de lui allouer la même somme que l'année dernière.

Votre comité recommande aussi de renouveler la donation faite par l'Etat, l'année dernière, en faveur de l'Association Charitable des Pompiers de la Nouvelle-Orléans, et aussi de renouveler celle faite l'année dernière en faveur de l'Asile des Veuves dans l'Indigence (les Dames de la Providence). Cette Institution qui est établie sous de pareils auspices, mérite sous tous les rapports, sa part dans les bienfaits de l'Etat envers les institutions charitables.

Votre comité a visité l'Hôpital de Charité de la Nouvelle Orléans. L'Etat est représenté dans cette institution. Les affaires de l'institution sont sous la direction et le contrôle de Sœur Régina, une des Sœurs de Charité. La situation financière de l'institution a déjà été soumise à la Législature. On sait généralement que pour ce qui concerne les médecins et les chirurgiens de l'établissement, les soins qu'on y donne aux malades, la propreté qui y règne, l'arrangement général et l'économie de l'intérieur de l'institution, elle n'est surpassée par aucune autre institution de cette nature, dans ce pays et peut-être même dans tout autre pays. La taxe imposée sur les émigrants étrangers, en vertu de la loi passée par la dernière Législature, en faveur de l'institution, et ce qu'elle reçoit d'autres sources, suffisent presque à ses dépenses courantes de l'année ; mais l'édifice principal, en grande partie, est tellement délabré, que si on ne le répare pas de suite, la vie de ceux qui s'y trouvent sera en danger, et les réparations qu'il faudra y faire plus tard coûteront une somme énorme. En conséquence, le comité recommande d'allouer une somme de $20,000 à l'hôpital pour y faire les travaux nécessaires, et une autre somme de $15,000 pour ses autres dépenses.

Quelques membres du comité ont visité l'Asile et l'Hôpital de St. Vincent, à Donaldsonville; leur rapport sur cette institution est des plus favorables. L'hôpital est pour les malades indigens, et l'asile pour élever et instruire les orphelins; les deux sont sous la surveillance de la Sœur Marie Austin et de sept autres dames de charité, et sont sous le contrôle d'une Direction. Le comité recommande de faire une allocation de $1,000 en faveur de l'hôpital et une autre de $1,000 en faveur de l'asile.

Conformément aux instructions données au comité, il a visité l'Asile des Aliénés, à Jackson—le réceptacle de la classe la plus affligée de la création, car qu'est-ce que l'homme sans raison?—il n'a pas même l'instinct de la brute. Cette institution est immédiatement sous le contrôle de l'Etat, et son existence dépend entièrement de l'Etat, qui pourvoit noblement à tous ses besoins. Le bon état des édifices, la propreté des malheureux qui s'y trouvent, et toute l'économie et l'administration de l'institution, font voir que la direction a bien dépensé les fonds placés à sa disposition, ainsi qu'on peut le voir dans son rapport pour l'année, déjà présenté à la Législature. Il est absolument nécessaire de construire une autre aile, et pour que cela soit fait, et pour subvenir aux dépenses inévitables de l'année courante, votre comité recommande d'allouer une somme de vingt mille piastres pour le premier objet, et celle de $15,000 pour le dernier. Votre comité croit devoir ajouter ici que le nombre de malades qui se trouvent maintenant dans l'institution est de 133.

Votre comité a visité l'Asile pour les Sourds-Muets, situé dans ce voisinage. Cette institution est encore une de celles qui n'existent que par les bienfaits de l'Etat, ce qui fait voir combien il veille avec sollicitude au bien-être de ses enfants les plus affligés. Le rapport des Directeurs de cette institution a déjà été présenté à la Législature, est garant de l'exactitude de son contenu. Les élèves des deux sexes maintenant dans cette institution, sont au nombre de 22. Les progrès de ces enfans dans les classes élémentaires pour la langue anglaise, sont des plus satisfaisans et font la louange du principal de l'institution, Mr Brown.

On construit dans ce moment un édifice plus convenable pour cette institution; cet édifice une fois achevé, permettra à l'institution de recevoir les aveugles. Le coût sera de $25,000. Le comité recommande d'allouer cette somme, plus $6,000 pour les dépenses courantes de l'année.

Enfin, votre comité a visité l'Asile de Bâton-Rouge. Bien qu'il n'y ait que 24 pensionnaires, l'édifice n'est pas encore assez vaste pour qu'elles s'y trouvent commodément. Les dames charitables qui en ont la direction, demandent une somme de $3,000, qui doit servir non seulement à payer les premières dépenses, mais leur permettre d'agrandir l'édifice de manière à le rendre plus convenable.

Votre comité, après avoir donné brièvement un aperçu de la condition des diverses institutions qu'il a cru de son devoir de visiter, termine ici son rapport en vous soumettant la résolution suivante:

Résolu que le Comité de Finance soit requis d'insérer dans la liste des allocations générales pour cette année, les suivantes:

A l'Asile des Orphelins, 4me district, Nouvelle Orléans	$ 3,000
Asile des Orphelines, Sœur Régis	6,000

LUNDI, 13 Mars 1854.

SEANCE DU SOIR.

SALAIRE DES RECORDERS A LA NOUVELLE ORLEANS.

On prend en considération le bill pour augmenter le salaire des Recorders de la Nouvelle-Orléans.

Mr. McMurdo,

La délégation de la ville a rapporté contre ce bill parce que l'acte de consolidation donne au Conseil, le droit de fixer le salaire de leurs officiers, sous la seule condition que ces salaires n'excéderont pas $3000 Il vaut beaucoup mieux, par conséquent, pour eux, de s'adresser aux Conseils. Si ceux ci pensent que les Recorders doivent recevoir davantage, ils le donneront. Ce serait une mesure pour ainsi dire tyrannique, que d'intervenir dans une affaire de cette nature. Je fais la motion de déposer le bill sur le bureau.

Mr. Lacey,

Si ce bill avait pris sa source dans le Sénat et était combattu par la délégation de la ville toute entière composée de membres qui sont censés connaître les faits et les désirs de leurs constituants, je me joindrais à eux, sans hesitation, à l'opposition qu'ils font à ce bill ou plutôt j'hésiterai à le soutenir; mais il vient de la Chambre et je dois présumer dès lors, qu'il a été soumis là, à l'examen et à l'approbation de la délégation de la ville. Cette circonstance me fait considerer la mesure sous un aspect différent. Je ne vois pas comment cette mesure peut être considérée comme locale. La question est celle ci : Forcerons nous ces officiers à se contenter de $1500 comme compensation des devoirs pénibles qu'ils ont à remplir ? Les partisans du bill sont prêts à compromettre à $2000

Digitized by Google

Mr McCay,

Les Recorders sont en relations avec les Aldermen, et ceux ci sont au courant de la nature de leurs devoirs et de la valeur de leurs services. C'est à eux par conséquent, que la question doit être laissée, et l'argument qui consiste à dire que ce bill doit être adopté par nous, parce qu'il a été adopté par la Chambre, est sans poids pour moi. Lorsque ce bill est venu devant le Sénat, il a été référé à la délégation de la ville, sous l'impression qu'elle était mieux instruite du sujet. Le Comité a rapporté défavorablement, le Sénat doit adopter leur conclusion.

Mr Lacoste,

Il est inutile d'élire des sénateurs s'ils sont obligés d'approuver des rapports. Je ne le fais jamais lorsque je ne les considère pas comme corrects.

Mr. Trudeau,

Comment le sénateur considérerait-il la Législature entreprenant de régler le salaire d'officiers employés par le Juri de Police de la paroisse.

Mr. Rivers,

Je renouvelle la motion de déposer le bill sur le bure

Le bill est déposé sur le bureau.

VENTE DU COLLEGE FRANKLIN.

Le bill pour la vente du College Franklin, est pris en considération.

Mr. Martel,

Ce bill ne sera pas adopté sans m'avoir au moins pour adversaire. Il est préparé au profit de certains spéculateurs. Ce sont les seules personnes qui désirent la vente du Collége et je peux clairement le démontrer. Ce Collége qu'on essaye maintenant de détruire et d'enlever à la juridiction de son créateur, a été fondé en 1831—$5000 furent a louées pour l'acquisition de matériaux. En 1832, $1500 furent allouées encore pour les constructions, et en 1835, autres $1500; et enfin, en 1838, autres $25.000 furent accordées. A cette époque, les constructions se poursuivaient. En 1842, autre appropriation encore de $10,000 se montant ensemble à $75,000 pour bâtisses. D'après l'acte d'incorporation, soixante-et-dix et quelques directeurs furent choisis dans toutes les parties de l'Etat, et cependant l'institution n'a jamais été mise complètement en opération. En 1847, lors de l'établissement du système des écoles libres, une taxe fut imposée dans la paroisse de St. Landry, taxe qui a été prélevée par les mêmes personnes qui viennent ici pour obtenir que ce collége soit enlevé à la juridiction des écoles libres J'étais alors membre du Comité des Ecoles, et je donnai notice que je présenterais une résolution pour employer les bâtisses à l'usage d'un collége libre Cette annonce excita de grandes alarmes parmi les adversaires de l'éducation publique. Ils désiraient voir vendre les constructions dans un but de speculation, et c'est aujourd'hui leur objet. Mais si on les vend aujourd'hui, elles ne rapporteront pas au-delà de $5000 Quand le railroad sera complété, les constructions et le sol vaudront un demi million. Ce Collége est situé sur la limite de la corporation des Opélousas, où les propriétés auront une grande valeur et presque sur la ligne du railroad. On n'a jamais entretenu le public de cette question avant qu'on ait proposé d'adopter l'édifice à l'usage d'un collége libre. Je m'oppose à ce bill par la simple raison, que ceux qui veulent le faire vendre aujourd'ui, sont précisément les mêmes hommes qui ont manœuvré pour l'empêcher d'entrer en operation Ceux qui ont à répondre du succès de l'entreprise, veulent en tirer parti aujourd'hui et le faire tourner à leur profit. Je m'oppose et je continuerai à m'opposer à ce bill. Il limite à $60,000. le prix minimum de la vente. Qu'est-ce que $60,000? Qu'est cette somme en comparaison de celles qui ont été prodiguées pour cet établissement par l'Etat? La construction de l'édifice a duré depuis 1831 jusqu'en 1846, et $70 000 ont été dépensées. Quand le moment est venu de le couvertir en collége, ces hommes, les ennemis de l'éducation, veulent le faire vendre sur le champ au prix d'un immense sacrifice, et ces hommes ont eu à toute époque, les moyens d'élever leurs enfants, viennent aujourd'hui demander la vente de ce collége ; c'est outrageux ! Aujourd'hui surtout, qu'un railroad sera construit, sera probablement en opération dans deux ans, et ajoutera immensément à la valeur de la propriété.

La compagnie n'espère rien moins qu'obtenir ces constructions pour un dépôt ? Personne autre ne peut l'acheter, les vendre est littéralement couper le col à l'éducation. La propriété appartient au système des écoles publiques, qui a ce titre, un droit acquis. L'éducation de la jeunesse de mon district dépend en grande partie de cet établissement. Il est à désirer qu'on en fasse un collége comme on l'avait projeté, ou qu'au moins on conserve cette propriété jusqu'à l'époque où elle vaudra un million de piastres qu'on pourra appliquer à des objets d'éducation Aujourd'hui, ou la vendra et elle ne rapportera presque rien. Dans deux ans, elle vaudra un demi million de piastres Aucun motif personnel ne me dirige dans mes opinions, mais je respecte la cause de l'éducation, et veux la défendre contre ses ennemis Je n'ai point de mauvais vouloir pour mes adversaires, mais j'ai autant de foi dans le système d'education publique que dans le suffrage universel. Si on s'empare de cette propriété on ruine notre système d'éducation. Cette propriété était destinée à profiter à 14 paroisses, et je demande en grâce qu'on hésite, avant de la sacrifier au profit d'intérêts privés. Les personnes qui veulent l'acquérir si la vente a lieu aujourd'hui. Quelle concurrence peut se présenter! Il n'y aura pas d'autre acheteur que la Compagnie de Railroad? Je suis en faveur des railroads; mais ne suis pas d'avis de sacrifier notre système d'éducation à aucune de ces entreprises. L'institution est là depuis 1832 ; elle peut, je crois, y rester deux ou trois ans de plus, ou au moins jusqu'à ce qu'on puisse réaliser un prix qui approche de sa valeur.

Mr. Dupré,

Je reprendrai le sénateur quand il dit que c'est une école publique. Je ne pense pas qu'il en soit ainsi.

Mr. Martel,

En 1846, la Législature a établi le système des écoles publiques. En 1849, j'ai été élu directeur des écoles de ma paroisse Une taxe établie au profit de l'éducation a été contestée par ces mêmes sénateurs. Ils ont poussé la vigueur et l'énergie de leur opposition au point de porter la discussion devant les tribunaux et même à la Cour Suprême.

Mr. Ryan,

L'établissement a-t-il servi de collége pendant ces deux dernières années?

Mr. Martel,

Il n'a jamais été complété pour cet objet. Depuis deux ans, c'est une école.

Mr Ryan,

Mon désir n'est pas d'intervenir dans des questions locales, mais j'ai entendu le sénateur exprimer des sentiments que les faits ne semblent pas justifier. Il me dit que ce bill était présenté dans le but de sacrifier la propriété, et de bénéficier a des personnes intéressées dans le railroad. Je crois que cette opinion du sénateur est erronnée. J'ai moi-même, en 1852, rapporté un bill pour la vente de cette propriété, parce qu'elle tombait en ruine, et non pour les motifs que le sénateur suppose. On a pensé qu'il serait convenable de la vendre et d'en verser le produit au trésor. A cette époque, il n'y avait pas encore d'apparence de railroad aux Opélousas. Par conséquent, quels que puissent être les mérites du bill, les motifs imaginés par le sénateur ne sont pas corrects. Le bill a été proposé sous la ferme conviction que la vente de la propriété était avantageuse à l'Etat. Il n'y avait pas alors d'apparence d'un rail-road aux Opélousas, et par conséquent, toute l'accusation du sénateur est imaginaire. L'objet n'a point été de donner de l'argent ou d'autres avantages à des spéculateurs sur des railroads ou sur aucun autre objet. On a essayé d'élever là un Collège et on a échoué. Cette opération a fait perdre beaucoup d'argent à l'Etat, et la meilleure chose à faire est de vendre la propriété. Je serais le dernier à porter préjudice à l'éducation. C'est ce qui soutient le caractère de la République et donne de la dignité a ses citoyens. Mais quand j'entends un sénateur qui ne connait rien a l'histoire de ce bill, accuser ses partisans de motifs blamables, je ne puis rester à ma place et l'écouter en silence. Les représentants de la paroisse à laquelle appartient le sénateur ont toujours soutenu la proposition. La bâtisse se détériore rapidement, et bientôt ne sera plus bonne à rien. Il n'y aura bientôt plus une brique sur l'autre. Le sénateur dit que cette propriété appartient au système des ecoles et qu'une école y est tenue. Il semble confondre le système des écoles avec les maisons d'écoles. La bâtisse va bientôt tomber en ruines. Les matériaux de l'édifice ne sont pas de durée. Ils ne ressemblent pas aux roc qui durent autant que le monde. Ce n'est pas le granit du Nord, durant autant que les montagnes d'où il est extrait. Ces materiaux sont périssables. Quand une bâtisse de ce genre n'est point habitée elle devient le séjour des vautours et des chauve-souris. Je me suis laissé dire que ces constructions ont servi d'écuries. Si dans un an ou peut les vendre un demi million, elles doivent certainement rapporter plus de $6,000 aujourd'hui. Je pense que si elles peuvent rapporter une pareille somme dans un temps aussi court, le public ne laissera pas échapper l'occasion. Je repète, que le sénateur est dans l'erreur quant aux motifs par lui assignés aux partisans de la mesure. Le Comité Judiciaire de la Chambre l'a approuvé avant l'adoption du bill du railroad. La majorité du Sénat ne fera rien, j'en suis sûr, qui soit indigne de ce corps. Je suis certain qu'aucun sénateur ne se laisse guider autrement que par des motifs honorables, et qu'il n'en est point qui n'apprécie ses devoirs autrement qu'au point de vue de la justice et de la droiture.

Je suis certain, par conséquent, que des appels tels que ceux faits par le sénateur ne seront pas écoutés. On peut les adresser pour des questions purement politiques, mais quand nous agissons uniquement comme un sénateur, nous devons nous élever au-dessus d'eux.

Mr. Wickliffe,

Cet établissement coûte $100,000 à l'Etat; il serait absurde de le sacrifier aujourd'hui pour $6,000. Si le rail road est construit, il augmentera la valeur la propriété, alors on pourra l'offrir sur le marché et le vendre. Je demande que les prix minimum soit fixé à $60,000.

Mr. Moore,

Le sénateur de St. Landry, Mr. Martel, a eu raison de dire que le Collége de Franklin date de 1832, et qu'on y tient une école, mais il a négligé, d'ajouter que cette école est une école privée. On m'a dit qu'on s'en sert comme école de grammaire. La vente de cette propriété ne portera aucun tort à la cause de l'éducation. Il lui profitera au contraire, car le prix qu'elle rapportera doit aller au fonds des écoles. L'édifice est construit en effet de matériaux périssables et tombera bientôt en poussière. Je suis fâché que cette vente contrarie les projets du sénateur de faire donner cet édifice à sa paroisse pour en faire une école centrale. La valeur doit en être versée au trésor au profit de l'éducation dans l'Etat. C'est un rêve de croire que cela vaudra jamais $55,000, ou même $60,000. La terre a été donnée à l'Etat sans condition, que des bâtisses y seraient élevées. Je n'en donnerais pas $20,000 avec l'idée de la vendre au railroad. Je lui donne le prix d'un lot de terre destiné à un dépôt et qui vaut plus que cette propriété. Les motifs du sénateur sont louables. Il désire l'édifice pour une école centrale ; mais ce n'est pas là l'objet auquel il doit être employé. La valeur placée dans le trésor public sera bien plus profitable a l'éducation publique.

Mr. Martel,

Un mot ou deux de reponse au sénateur des Rapides, (Mr Ryan) seront à leur place. Le sénateur croit savoir que certains faits sont la vérité. Je suis sûr que ce que j'ai dit est l'état des faits existants. Je dis au Sénat que nous aurions une ecole tenue dans cet édifice, et que soixante-quinze écoliers la frequenteraient. Je sais ce que je dis. Le tiers de la terre est dans les limites de la corporation des Opélousas, et le railroad le traverse, elle vaut autant aujourd'hui que lorsque l'édifice a été élevé ; et cependant à cette époque la main-d'œuvre était bon marché, et elle est chère aujourd'hui.

Mr. Ryan,

Le sénateur prête-t-il dire qu'il existe là un collége aujourd'hui.

Mr. Martel,

Je dis qu'il s'y tient une école qui remplit les conditions de la loi, bien qu'elle ne soit pas sous le contrôle immediat de l'Etat. C'est une bonne et florissante école qui contient soixante-quinze élèves. La bâtisse est aussi bonne à présent que lorsqu'on l'a élevée. Ne vaut-il pas mieux conserver cette propriété telle qu'elle est que de la sacrifier a un intérêt privé. Ce bill a été proposé par les mêmes personnes qui ont toujours été contraires à l'éducation dans ma paroisse. Elles sont dans l'habitude d'envoyer leurs enfans faire leur éducation au Nord au lieu d'encourager les écoles dans le pays. Je le répète encore, j'ai connaissance de ce que je dis; je crois que ceux qui sont les instigateurs de cette mesure sont précisément les personnes que j'ai vu citer depuis la justice de paix jusqu'a la Cour Suprême, pour les forcer à payer leurs taxes d'écoles. Je leur ai tenu tête autre part, je suis prêt a leur tenir tête ici. Je serais très etonné si le Senat pense qu'un collége créé pour servir a l'éducation, doit être vendu pour aider a des speculations privées. Il vaut $10,000 aujourd'hui, s'il les valait quand il a été construit. Afin de montrer l'accroissement qu'a subie la valeur des propriétés aux Opélousas, il suffit de dire que des lots de terre vendus il y a deux ans pour $15, sont aujourd'hui estimés à $500. Cette propriété divisée en lots en vaudrait aujourd'hui $50,000. Lorsque personne n'en faisait usage, les législatures précédentes l'ont épargné, et aujourd'hui qu'il y a un espoir fondé d'y voir un collége florissant, verrons-nous triompher ces hommes qui disent que les écoles libres sont un fléau pour la société et qui ont tenu les écoles fermées parce qu'ils ne voulaient pas payer de taxe? Me répondront-ils sur cette question? Je supplie le Sénat de ne pas consentir à la vente de cette propriété, et j'espère qu'on comprendra l'importance de la conserver pour l'objet auquel elle était destiné. Je répète que je ne suis pas animé de motifs personnels—ce n'est pas moi qui ai commencé le combat; il l'a été il y a longtemps. L'école qui s'y trouve a été colloquée dans cette construction parce quon ne pouvait s'en procurer d'autres. Le bill qu'on vous présente peut vous faire penser qu'il s'agit d'un édifice de peu d'importance ; mais c'est là une grave erreur, et si quelques difficultés ne s'étaient point élevées au sujet du surintendant de paroisse, cette école contiendrait maintenant cent cinquante élèves. Les bâtisses sont aujourd'hui en assez bonne condition ; les galeries ont besoin de quelques réparations: mais voilà tout. Comme situation pour un collége, il n'y en a pas de meilleure. On ne peut mettre en question sa salubrité. L'année dernière une épidémie désastreuse ravageait les plus belles portions de l'Etat, et notre village ne présentait pas un seul cas de maladie, il est resté parfaitement sain pendant tout le temps. La présence du railroad en fera la meilleure situation pour un collége dans tout l'Etat, car la route passe précisément entre les deux bâtisses et certainement il ne peut pas passer autre part. Je dis tout cela parce que je ne veux pas fournir à personne l'excuse de dire qu'on a été pris par surprise.

Mr. Wickliffe,

On a dit que la propriété serait probablement employée pour un dépôt du railroad. Je retire mon amendement de $60,000, et j'y substitue $80,000 comme prix minimum.

Mr. McCay,

Je demande la lecture du bill et j'admets que ces détails échappent à ma mémoire.

Le secrétaire donne lecture du bill.

Mr. Ryan,

Je n'avais pas l'intention de présenter aucune remarque à ce sujet, mais comme le sénateur de St. Landry attribue à de vils motifs.....

Mr. Wickliffe,

Suis-je à l'ordre si je propose de déposer le bill sur le bureau? Si le sénateur désire procéder à une explication personnelle, je retirerai ma motion pour un moment.

Mr. Ryan,

Si j'ai la parole je continuerai à m'en servir sur mes propres convictions.

Le Président,

Le sénateur des Rapides n'est pas à l'ordre.

Mr. Kenner,

C'est la même motion que celle que j'ai faite pour le bill du shérif, et cependant la discussion a duré deux jours.

Mr. Ryan,

J'en appellerai de la décision du fauteuil.

Mr. King,

J'appellerai l'attention du Président sur ce fait que lorsque le sénateur d'Ascension, Mr. Kenner, fit une motion pour déposer indéfiniment le bill du shérif sur le bureau, le fauteuil a décidé qu'on pouvait discuter.

Mr. Ryan,

Je désirerais seulement presenter des explications personnelles, et je ne pense pas que rien de ce que je puis dire puisse blesser aucun sénateur, spécialement lorsque je viens en collision avec le sénateur de St. Landry, dont les profondes connaissances et la logique inflexible me terrasseraient en un moment. Je sais certainent le caillou qui doit être mis en pièces par le torrent de son éloquence. Je n'ai jamais pensé non plus pouvoir attirer l'attention du brillant sénateur de Ouest Félicians; mais revenons à la question qui nous occupe—ce collége a été fondé par l'Etat. En 1852, une proposition a été faite de le vendre; il est tenu comme école privée par un homme qui peut le faire parce qu'il n'a pas de loyer à payer. Il y a là une école mais non point telle que la loi la contemplait. Le sénateur dit qu'il a suivi certaines personnes depuis le magistrat jusqu'à la Cour Suprême pour les forcer à payer leurs taxes. Cela importe peu à la question; le seul point à résoudre est celui-ci. Cette institution appartient-elle à l'Etat, et a-t-elle été employée au but proposé? En réalité qu'elle est l'école qui s'y tient? Un individu s'y loge par spéculation et attendu que cela ne lui coûte rien, il y établit une école. Ce n'est pas l'objet pour lequel cette entreprise a été conçue. Si la propriété appartient à l'Etat; si elle n'a pas été appliquée à sa destination ; si elle se détériore et si elle se compose de matériaux périssables, ce qui empêche nécessairement qu'elle soit d'aussi bonne condition que lorsqu'elle a été construite, il faut certainement la vendre. Et cependant le sénateur nous dit qu'elle est aussi bonne que neuve, ce qu'il faut probablement expliquer par la salubrité du climat. Qui a jamais entendu dire qu'ici une construction de cette sorte ait été aussi bonne vingt-cinq ans après la construction que lorsqu'elle a été construite? Comment se fait-il qu'on s'en soit servi comme une écurie? Comment une bâtisse destinée à la réception de la jeunesse peut-elle valoir autant après qu'elle a été abandonnée aux animaux des champs ? après qu'elle a servi de résidence aux vautours et aux chauve-souris? On ne peut l'expliquer qu'en la supposant invulnérable à des attaques de ce genre, tout autant que le village à la maladie. Je connais les motifs des personnes qui ont présenté ce bill, et je sais qu'il a pris naissance à une époque où ces motifs ne pouvaient être incriminés, alors le railroad passait pour un projet chimérique. Aujourd'hui, cependant, je me trouve seul pour venger la réputation, le but et les motifs de ceux qui ont présenté un rapport en faveur du projet. Je voterai pour le bill parce que j'ai originalement présenté un rapport favorable et parce que je le crois utile.

Mr. Dupré,

Je demanderai à mon collègue, qui a refusé le paiement de la taxe?

Mr. Martel,

Je n'attaque ici les motifs d'aucun sénateur. Je ne m'occupe que des personnes qui ont amené ce bill devant le Sénat.

MARDI, 14 mars 1854.

Quarantaine.

Mr Trudeau demande la prise en considération du bill suivant:

ACTE

Pour établir une quarantaine pour la protection de l'Etat.

Section 1ère. Il est décrété par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentans de l'Etat de la Louisiane réunis en assemblée générale, Qu'il sera établi une quarantaine sur le fleuve Mississippi, à un point qui ne sera pas en ligne droite à moins de vingt milles de cette ville; et aussi une autre aux rigolets; que les comités conjointes de santé sont par les présentes autorisés à choisir les lieux convenables pour cette quarantaine, à recevoir la terre nécessaire au nom de l'Etat, et à tirer sur le trésorier de l'Etat pour le montant nécessaire et sur les fonds appropriés par cet acte, pourvu, bien entendu, que le consentement du gouverneur soit donné à la dite vente.

Section 2. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Qu'il y aura un bureau de santé composé du maire de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, de trois membres de chacun des conseils nommés tous les ans au scrutin par le Conseil Commun des médecins résidents de chaque station de quarantaine et de deux médecins choisis par le Conseil Commun de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Que le gouverneur de l'Etat, en vertu de ses fonctions; sera président du dit bureau, et le maire, vice-président, et qu'en l'absence du gouverneur, le maire agira comme président du dit bureau.

Section 3. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que le Bureau de Santé se réunira une fois par mois, du premier novembre au premier juin, et une fois par semaine, du 1er juin au 1er novembre, et aussi souvent qu'il le jugera convenable.

Section 4. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que le tiers des membres du dit bureau formera un quorum pourvu toutefois qu'aucun contrat ne puisse être adopté sans le consentement de la majorité du bureau.

Section 5. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que les médecins résidants des quarantaines recevront un salaire annuel de $2,500 chacun, seront nommés par le bureau de santé et pourront être destitués pour toute négligence à remplir leur devoir. Ils devront demander $5, à titre de frais du capitaine de tout bâtiment inspecté ou soumis à la quarantaine, faire un rapport hebdomadaire de ces collections et remettre l'argent collecté au trésorier du bureau de santé, et les montants ainsi perçus formeront un fonds à l'usage de la quarantaine. Et il sera du devoir des deux médecins résidants de rester aux lieux de leurs quarantaines respectives, de prendre soin des malades et de remplir les autres devoirs que le bureau de santé pourra exiger d'eux.

Section 6. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que le maire de la Nouvelle-Orléans pourra, sur l'avis du Bureau de Santé, lancer la proclamation déclarant lieu infecté tout endroit où on aura lieu de penser qu'il existe une contagion pestilentielle ou une maladie épidémique et de déterminer le nombre de jours de quarantaine auquel on sera soumis. Après qu'une telle proclamation aura été lancée, tout navire arrivant dans le port de la Nouvelle-Orléans ou aux Rigolets, d'un de ces lieux infectés, sera soumis à la quarantaine et sera ensemble avec les officiers, l'équipage, les passagers et le chargement soumis aux réglements adoptés par le Bureau de Santé.

Tout capitaine de bâtiment sujet à la quarantaine ou à la visite arrivant dans le port de la Nouvelle-Orléans ou aux Rigolets qui refusera ou négligera soit

1o. De s'y soumettre et de jeter l'ancre aux lieux assignés pour quarantaines à l'époque de son arrivée.

2o. De soumettre son bâtiment, le chargement et les passagers à l'examen du médecin, et de fournir tous les renseignements nécessaires pour mettre cet officier à même de déterminer à quelle durée de quarantaine ils doivent être soumis.

Section 7. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que toute personne qui violera les dispositions de cet acte en refusant ou négligeant d'obéir ou de satisfaire à tout ordre, prohibition ou réglement adopté par le Bureau de Santé dans l'exercice des pouvoirs qui lui sont conférés par les présentes, sera punie d'amende et d'emprisonnement à la discrétion de la Cour devant laquelle le délinquant sera jugé.

Il sera du devoir de tout capitaine de towboat remorquant un batiment sujet à la quarantaine ou à la visite, d'abandonner le dit bâtiment au lieu de quarantaine et d'informer le capitaine des pénalités qu'il encourrait en ne point se conformer aux dispositions de cet acte.

Section 8. Et il est de plus décrété, &c. Que le Bureau de Santé aura le pouvoir d'employer des médecins additionnels aux quarantaines, d'employer des gardes malades et des aides pour soigner les malades et telles autres personnes qui seraient nécessaires pour mettre à exécution efficacement les réglemens de quarantaine, de fixer leur compensation, de déterminer quels bâtimens seront soumis à la quarantaine et le mode suivant lequel celle-ci sera exécutée; de faire tous les réglemens légaux nécessaires pour rendre un bon système de quarantaine effectif et de faire exécuter ces reglemens au moyen d'amendes qui ne pourront pas dépasser $500. D'établir des règles et des réglemens pour maintenir le bon ordre et la police dans les limites des lieux de quarantaine, d'imposer des peines pour leur violation, de contracter pour les bâtisses nécessaires aux divers lieux de quarantaine. De nommer un secrétaire qui agira comme trésorier à des appointemens qui n'excéderont pas $1000 et qui fournira un cautionnement de $10,000. Ce secrétaire devra tenir des minutes des réunions du bureau, et devra prendre soin de toutes les preuves à l'appui des dépenses faites par autorité du bureau. Il devra prescrire aux pilotes relativement aux batimens sujets à la quarantaine, il enlevera ou fera enlever toutes les substances qui seront reconnues nuisibles à la santé de la ville. Les commissaires des rues exécuteront les ordres du dit bureau quand ils ne seront pas en contradiction avec les ordonnances de la ville et les lois de l'Etat. Le Bureau adoptera et fera exécuter les ordonnances sanitaires pour la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans. Il définira les devoirs des divers officiers nommés d'après cet acte. Il adressera des warrants à tout constable ou officier de police de la dite ville pour appréhender et faire déguerpir toutes personne ou personnes qui ne pourront être obligées à exécuter les réglemens adoptés ou qui les auront violés, et lorsque cela sera nécessaire ils pourront aussi remettre leurs warrants au Shérif de la ville ou de la paroisse où le délinquant pourra se trouver, lesquels warrants seront exécutés par les officiers auxquels ils seront remis et qui auront les mêmes pouvoirs et seront soumis dans leur exécution aux mêmes devoirs que si ces ordres étaient lancés par aucune des Cours de l'Etat.

Section 9. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que tout capitaine de bâtiment de mer ou steam-ship violant les dispositions de ce bill ou les règles et réglemens établis ou à établir par le Bureau de Santé, sera considéré coupable du délit et condamné à une amende n'excédant pas $500, et à un emprisonnement n'excédant pas une année.

Section 10. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que le Gouverneur et le Trésorier de l'Etat émettront dix bons de $10,000 chacun portant 6 0/0 d'intérêts payables à vingt ans, lesquels bons resteront entre les mains de l'Auditeur des comptes publics pour être remis au tresorier du bureau sur une résolution de ce corps ; pourvu que pas plus d'un bon ne lui soit remis à la fois, et avant que ses comptes pour débours effectués n'aient été examinés et approuvés par l'Auditeur des comptes publics.

Section 11. Et il est de plus décrété, &c,, Que le Bureau de Santé créé par cet acte et ses successeurs sont incorporés avec droit de poursuivre et d'être poursuivis.

Mr Kittridge offre le bill suivant comme un substitut au précédent.

Pour pourvoir à la salubrité de l'Etat de la Louisiane.

Section 1ère. Il est decrété par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentans de l'Etat de la Louisiane réunis en assemblée générale, Que le Gouverneur de l'Etat, le maire de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans et deux médecins de cette ville désignés par le gouverneur de l'Etat composeront et formeront un corps appelé "Le Bureau de Santé de l'Etat de la Louisiane." Le dit bureau et ses successeurs est par les présentes érigés en corps constitué avec droit de poursuivre et d'être poursuivis pour tous les objets prévus par cet acte.

Section 2. Et il est de plus décrété, &c., Que le dit Bureau de Santé est par les présentes autorisé à acquérir et à disposer la coque et les cabines d'un steamboat convenable pour servir d'hôpital qui pourra placé et ancré à un point convenable à la Balize pour la réception de toute personne affectée de la fièvre de navire ou de la petite vérole qui pourra être trouvée à bord de tous bâtimens entrant dans le Mississippi ou qui pourront autrement s'y rencontrer.

Section 3. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que le dit Bureau de Santé est par les présentes autorisé à nommer un médecin résidant qu'il pourra destituer, qui recevra un salaire n'excedant pas $2000 par an, et qui résidera constamment dans le dit hôpital dont il prendra soin, et le dit médecin résidant ainsi nommé, aura le pouvoir de nommer deux étudiants en médecine pour l'aider, et un troisième en cas de besoin, à un salaire n'excedant pas $20 par mois, et pourra aussi employer telles gardes malades et à tels salaires que le Bureau de Santé jugera nécessaires et convenables.

Section 4. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que le dit Bureau de Santé est par ces présentes autorisé à etablir toutes les règles et tous les réglements qui peuvent être reconnus convenables pour rendre effectifs l'intention et l'objet des dispositions de cet acte, et il sera du devoir du dit médecin résidant, des assistans et de toute autre personne, d'obéir et se conformer à ses règles et reglemens sous les peines ci-après stipulés.

Section 5. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Qu'il sera du devoir dudit médecin résidant ou d'un de ses assistans, de se rendre avec un pilote en bord d'un towboat à bord de chaque navire entrant dans le Mississippi et venant de la mer, de l'examiner avec soin ainsi que le capitaine, l'équipage et les passagers et dans le cas où la fièvre de navire ou la petite vérole serait à bord, il ferait transporter à l'hôpital tous ceux qui en seraient atteints et prendrait d'eux les soins convenables, ferait nettoyer ces navires et tout autre quand on le jugerait nécessaire, et ferait nettoyer complètement et effectivement toutes les personnes du bord, leurs habits leurs literies et leurs bagages et permettrait ensuite que le bâtiment, le capitaine, l'équipage et les passagers en bonne santé puissent partir et continuer sans delai leur voyage.

Section 6, Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Qu'il sera du devoir du dit médecin résidant et de ses assistans, d'examiner avec soin le nombre de passagers qui pourront se trouver à bord de tout batiment examiné, et lorsque ce nombre dépassera celui que la loi autorise, d'en faire un rapport à l'avocat de district en la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans qui entamera des poursuites à ce sujet, et toutes amendes et confiscations collectives d'après les dispositions de cet acte, accroîtront au profit du dit Bureau de Santé.

Section 7. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Qu'il sera du devoir de tout pilote, commandant ou capitaine de tout towboat, d'informer le capitaine de tout navire abordé des dispositions de cet acte, des règles et réglements mis en vigueur en conséquence, et de plus d'aider et assister ledit médecin résidant ou son assistant, suivant le cas à faire les examens nécessaires en leur donnant passage à bord ou en amenant le bâtiment à inspecter à l'heure et au lieu convenables, et à toute négligence ou refus de se conformer aux dispositions de cet acte ou aux règles et réglemens qui en seront la conséquence, seront punis d'amende ou d'emprisonnement ou de tous deux à la fois, à la discretion de la Cour.

Section 8. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Qu'il sera du devoir de tout capitaine de bâtiment arrivant dans le Mississippi, en destination de la Nouvelle-Orléans, d'un port étranger ou autre, de se mettre et d'aider à l'inspection ou à l'examen demandé par le médecin résidant ou par un de ses assistans du bâtiment, des officiers, de l'équipage et des passagers. Et il sera de son devoir de tout à l'ordre de jeter l'ancre et de placer son bâtiment au point désigné, et d'y rester jusqu'à ce qu'il lui soit permis de partir. Il devra aussi fournir tous les renseignements demandés, relativement à la santé de toutes personnes à bord de son bâtiment, et à celle de son port de partance, et il devra se soumettre à tous règles et règlemens qui en seront la conséquence ; et tout capitaine qui refusera ou négligera d'y obéir et de s'y conformer sera traité comme coupable de délit et sur conviction, sera passible d'une amende n'excédant pas $2000 ou d'un emprisonnement d'un an ou plus, ou de tous deux à la fois à la discrétion de la cour. Et toute personne ou personnes qui violera les dispositions de cet acte ou les règles ou réglemens qui en seront la conséquence, sera traitée comme coupable de délit et passible d'amende ou d'emprisonnement ou de tous deux à la fois, à la discrétion de la cour.

Section 9. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que le médecin résidant recevra du Bureau de Santé le pouvoir de se procurer tous les approvisionnements nécessaires de linges, de litteries et de provisions dont le médecin résidant ou ses assistants pourront avoir besoin pour l'usage du dit hôpital ou des malades qui s'y trouvent. Et le dit médecin résidant tiendra un compte fidèle de tout, et le rendra tous les six mois et toutes les fois qu'il en sera requis au dit Bureau de Santé.

Section 10. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que dans le but de donner effet à cet acte, le dit Bureau de Santé est autorisé à tirer sur tous fonds du trésor non autrement appropriés une somme qui ne pourra dépasser $15,000 pour l'année 1854, et des sommes qui ne pourront excéder $10,000 pour chacune des années suivantes.

La première section du bill original est prise en considération.

Mr Kittridge offre la première section du substitut.

Mr Hodge fait la motion de déposer les deux bills sur le bureau.

Mr Trudeau,

On semble croire que le comité a été divisé d'opinion sur l'utilité d'une quarantaine, c'est une erreur. Le comité a été unanimement d'avis qu'il faut un système quelconque, quoiqu'il n'ait pu se décider en faveur d'aucun en particulier, conséquemment deux bills ont été rapportés. Les citoyens de la Nouvelle-Orléans sont en faveur d'une quarantaine, et ce serait traiter nos constituans avec trop peu de respect que de disposer de ces bills de cette façon sommaire. En outre, nous devons quelques égards au Comité qui a pris beaucoup de peines pour se procurer des renseignements nécessaires pour préparer ces bills. Il ne prétend point être arrivé à un résultat parfait ni avoir produit un résultat qui aurait pu être l'œuvre des quarante plus fortes têtes de l'Etat. Mais en tout cas c'est une base sur laquelle on peut construire. Maintenu en tutelle dans cette Législature, et si le Sénat ne veut rien faire pour elle, il doit au moins permettre qu'elle agisse pour son propre compte. En changeant ces deux premières sections du bill, ce serait simplement autoriser la Nouvelle-Orléans à établir le système pour elle-même.

Mr Kittridge,

Il y a devant le Sénat deux rapports et deux bills. Une portion du comité croit qu'une quarantaine préviendrait l'invasion des maladies épidémiques, l'autre croit tout le contraire. Les bills introduits traduisent cette double pensée. Je demande qu'on les lise tous deux.

Mr Evans,

On les a déjà lus. Je suis en faveur du dépôt de tous deux sur le bureau. Je considère que tout cela est parfaitement inutile et que leur discussion serait du temps perdu en pure perte. Nous n'avons rien à faire avec des choses de ce genre.

Les deux bills sont déposés sur le bureau.

Railroads hypothéquant leurs propriétés.

Le bill pour permettre aux railroads d'hypothéquer leurs propriétés est pris en considération.

Mr Moore,

Il est un principe général qu'on ne peut pas hypothéquer ce qui n'existe pas. Par la loi on peut hypothéquer sa propriété, mais on ne peut pas y comprendre ce qui n'existe pas encore. Je ne m'écarterai pas des principes généraux de la loi, et j'offrirai un amendement conforme à mes vues.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je suis opposé aux principes de ces bills. L'amendement du Sénateur de St. Martin ne tranche pas la difficulté. Je suis contraire au principe qui consiste à permettre à une Compagnie dans laquelle l'Etat est intéressé, d'hypothéquer ses propriétés.

Mr Kenner,

Je crois que je puis prouver au Sénateur que les Compagnies ont déjà ce pouvoir, et dans ce but, le lirai les pages 120 et 121 des actes de 1853 qui traitent de l'incorporation des compagnies de railroads de Jackson et des Opelousas, (ici Mr Kenner donne lecture de l'extrait dont il parle) La compagnie était sur le point d'agir en vertu de ces pouvoirs et d'emprunter de l'argent pour l'aider à compléter la route. Mais la question s'éleva de savoir ce qui constitue une propriété. L'avocat de la compagnie fut consulté et ensuite le juge Eustis Ils pensèrent que la Législature sans aucune doute avait eu l'intention d'inclure toutes espèces de propriétés, mais attendu que la loi déclare que les meubles ne peuvent être hypothéqués, et attendu que la Cour Suprême a décidé que les fers d un railroad sont des meubles, on a jugé plus convenable de demander à la législature une législation spéciale. On a cru qu'autrement des doutes pourraient s'élever dans l'esprit des prêteurs d'argent ou des capitalistes. On voit par les actes d'incorporation de ces deux compagnies que le droit d'hypothéquer leur est acquis. La seule question est de savoir si nous leur donnerons assistance en les mettant à même d'emprunter de l'argent à plus bas intérêt. Elles iront de l'avant et emprunteront, et nous devons leur donner le pouvoir de le faire au plus bas taux possible. Il est convenable d'en agir ainsi. Nous ne pouvons pas reprendre les droits que nous avons donnés. Je suis opposé à l'amendement du Sénateur de St. Martin, et nous pouvons aussi bien enlever la clause qui donne force à la loi. En amendant le bill de la sorte, nous rendrons son application tellement difficile pour les actionnaires qu'ils ne l'accepteront pas. L'adoption de ce bill faciliterait singulièrement l'accomplissement des chemins de fer. Chaque mille construit agrandira la sécurité, et les capitalistes n'auront aucune objection à l'accepter pour avancer leur acquit.

Mr King,

Je suis d'accord avec le Sénateur qui a parlé le dernier. Si le public consent à avancer de l'argent sur un chemin qui n'est pas construit, il n'y a pas de raison pour que nous l'en empêchions. Je crains seulement que les avances ne soient pas considérables. Une objection au bill est qu'il est général au lieu d'être spécial dans les termes. Il donne le droit aux directeurs de disposer de la propriété d'autrui. Mais ces compagnies ont, par leurs chartes, le droit d'en agir ainsi. Le mot propriété comprend toute espèce de propriété, Elles ne possèdent pas d'immeubles, excepté le chemin qu'elles parcourent, comme sécurité cela ne vaut pas grand chose. Nous ferons tout aussi bien de leur fournir les moyens d'emprunter à meilleur compte. Mais ce bill tel qu'il est, confère le droit à toutes les compagnies de railroads, tandis que nous devrions le limiter à celles qui en ont besoin.

Mr Moore,

Si nous adoptons le bill sous cette forme, n'autoriserons-nous pas ces compagnies à hypothéquer ce qui n'était pas compris par lacharte? Je désire ces propriétés, c'est-à-dire, les chemins et leurs dépendances, mais est-il convenable de les autoriser à hypothéquer ce qui n'existe pas? Ce serait contraire aux principes généraux de nos lois. C'est pour prévenir à cette violation que je me suis opposé à l'amendement.

L'amendement est rejeté.

Mr Hodge,

L'amendement aurait dû être adopté. J'ai beaucoup réfléchi à ce bill et je voterai contre. Il est vrai que ces compagnies doivent avoir un moyen de se procurer des fonds. Mais comment veut-on le faire? Devons-nous les autoriser à émettre des bons et à hypothéquer la route? L'Etat de la Louisiane y a un cinquième d'intérêt. Il fournit des bons pour cette proportion. En quelles mains passeront-ils? Pourquoi les remettre aux Directeurs qui les vendront où et comme il leur plaira. Les actionnaires doivent payer leur part, qui est à celle de l'Etat dans le rapport de 4 à 1. S'ils satisfont à la véritable intention et au sens de cet acte, où est la nécessité de ce bill? L'Etat souscrit pour un cinquième et fournit son crédit au chemin. Si les actionnaires violent les dispositions de la Constitution ou ne payent pas 4 contre 1, pourquoi leur fournir le crédit de l'Etat et adopter pour eux des bills de cette nature. Si nous les aidons à emprunter en ajoutant à leur crédit, et à obéir à la loi? Non certes. Quand nous souscrivons et payons 1|5, ils sont obligés de souscrire et payer 4|5, et s'ils le font, où est la nécessité de ce bill? Les Sénateurs pensent-ils hypothéquer la propriété de l'Etat pour donner force à ces liens? On dira qu'ils n'engagent pas au-delà du crédit de l'Etat, mais ils hypothèquent actuellement ses propriétés. Ils peuvent tout aussi bien engager le capital. Il voudrait mieux émettre tout à la fois des bons pour le montant total que de permettre d'hypothèquer l'intérêt de l'Etat. J'étais d'abord porté à voter contre le bill, mais après réflexion, je ne crois pas que cela soit raisonnable.

Mr Kenner,

Le Sénateur semble croire que nous demandons ce qui ne nous appartient pas encore. Nous avons déjà tout ce que nous demandons. Nous demandons seulement que la Législature donne un sens précis au mot propriété qui se trouve dans l'acte d'incorporation. Si cela porte tort au crédit de l'Etat, j'abandonne la partie. Je demande la question préalable.

Mr Hodge,

Je désire établir un fait. Les actes dont il est question ont été adoptés le 20 avril, et ceux par lesquels l'Etat est devenu souscripteur l'ont été le 28 avril. C'est donc là une proposition de permettre à ces compagnies d'hypothèquer les propriétés de l'Etat, droit qu'elles ne possédaient pas avant. Je suis opposé à l'octroi de ce pouvoir aux Directeurs.

Mr Moore,

Je veux donner les motifs qui me font voter contre le bill. Le mot que je propose de retrancher constitue un amendement à la charte. Nous ne pouvons hypothéquer ce qui n'existe pas. Je suis moi-même actionnaire d'une de ces compagnies, et je refuse de leur donner pareil pouvoir. Qu'elles construisent la route on pourra la saisir et la vendre, et l'Etat perdra son intérêt.

La première section est adoptée.

Mr Hodge,

Je demande à insérer un proviso qui interdira à la compagnie d'hypothéquer l'intérêt que l'Etat a dans ces chemins de fer.

Mr Kenner,

Ce proviso aurait à peu près le même effet que l'amendement du Sénateur de St-Martin. Ce serait de détruire le bill. Notre objet est d'hypothéquer les rails, les locomotives et les autres propriétés appartenant aux compagnies. Vous dites que l'intérêt de l'Etat ne doit point être compris dans cette mesure mais comment pourrez-vous l'isoler de celui des actionnaires? L'Etat possède 4 pouces 4|5 sur chaque pied, mais comment les séparerez-vous l'un de l'autre. Nous nous blâmons sur le fait que les compagnies ont déjà le droit d'hypothéquer leurs propriétés. Si l'amendement est adopté, cet acte ne sera point accepté par les actionnaires et il sera inutile. Nous voulons leur donner les moyens d'établir ces chemins et c'est là le moyen de le faire.

Mr Wickliffe,

Il y a une manière d'arranger cette affaire en stipulant que l'intérêt de l'Etat ne sera point affecté dans le cas où l'hypothèque serait exécutée comme elle le sera certainement au train dont vont les choses.

Mr MacMurdo,

L'Etat n'est qu'un associé et je ne vois pas pourquoi il serait mis à l'abri de ce bouclier que le Sénateur désire dresser devant lui. Il doit avoir le même intérêt et les mêmes privilèges que les autres associés et rien de plus. Il doit être soumis aux mêmes restrictions et aux mêmes charges que les autres intéressés.

Mr McCay,

Si l'Etat a déjà accordé ce droit, où est la nécessité de ce bill?

Mr Kenner,

Son but est de définir le sens du mot propriétés.

Mr McCay,

Les lois existantes l'expliquent suffisamment.

Mr Kenner,

Le sujet a été examiné par le juge Eustis qui croit qu'un acte spécial de cette nature prévendrait les difficultés et rendrait le sujet plus clair.

Mr Hodge,

Le Sénateur de la Nouvelle-Orléans (Mr MacMurdo) dit que l'Etat est un associé ordinaire mais l'Etat émet des bons qu'on négocie. Les autres associés que le Sénateur considère comme étant aussi bons que l'Etat ne peuvent le faire sans hypothéquer non seulement leurs propriétés mais encore celles de l'Etat. C'est là la différence. Je suis autant que qui que ce soit en faveur des rail roads. J'appartiens à un parti qui a toujours été favorable aux améliorations intérieures mais je ne puis pas consentir à aller aussi loin. L'Etat a littéralement souscrit, l'argent a été ou peut être fait sur ses bons, et je préférerai emprunter la somme additionnelle nécessaire et l'avancer à la compagnie plutôt que d'établir ce précédent. Il n'est pas nécessaire d'hypothéquer les chemins.

Digitized by Google

On peut les compléter sans avoir recours à ce moyen. Je crois pouvoir prédire comment toute cette affaire se terminera. La Louisiane avancera son million et demi. Les Directeurs hypothèqueront la route, dans quelques années les bons seront dûs, ils ne seront pas payés, les créanciers vendront le chemin et l'Etat perdra son intérêt et aussi au moins un million et demi sans retirer aucun profit de la transaction excepté celui qui pourra venir des capitalistes étrangers possédant ces chemins dans ses limites. Je suis en faveur des améliorations intérieures mais non au point de perdre de vue les intérêts de l'Etat. Je ne puis oublier les dures leçons de l'expérience. Je suis conservateur dans mes opinions et mon zèle pour les rail roads ne peut dégénérer en manie. Je suis opposé à ce que la Législature donne des moyens pour se garantir contre la pression extérieure. Dieu sait où cette sorte de législation nous conduira. Je suis opposé à toute mesure par laquelle l'Etat peut être compromis davantage et je désire voir ses intérêts complétement garantis.

Mr MacMurdo,

J'ai dit que l'Etat ne doit point être exempté des risques ordinaires et des obligations des autres associés. L'Etat ne doit point émettre ses bons qu'après paiement par les autres intéressés. La présomption est que ce paiement est effectué. Je ne crois pas que ces hypothèques aient aucun rapport avec le paiement des actions. On a probablement eu en vue le fait que le coût de construction excède le montant des actions et il est par conséquent nécessaire d'hypothéquer la propriété en comprenant l'intérêt de l'Etat aussi bien que celui des autres actionnaires.

Mr Martel,

Je désire dire quelques mots à ce sujet aussi bien pour mon collègue que pour moi-même. Dans la partie de l'Etat que j'habite nous avons souscrit au rail road plutôt par conviction de sa réussite et de son utilité intrinsèque qu'en vue de réaliser un dividende sur nos actions. Nous voulons encourager les améliorations intérieures et c'est pourquoi nous avons souscrit. Je considère ce bill au même point de vue. S'il peut aider les entreprises de rail roads, il faut l'adopter.

L'amendement est rejeté.

Le bill est adopté.

DEPLACEMENT DES DOCUMENS PUBLICS.

Le bill qui pourvoit au déplacement de certains documens publics maintenant dans le Quatrième District de la Nouvelle-Orléans est pris en considération.

Mr Trudeau offre un amendement pour limiter la dépense à $15,000.

Mr King,

Je suis autorisé par Mr Arnoux, conservateur des hypothèques de la paroisse Jefferson à dire que la dépense ne dépassera pas $15,000, et qu'il s'oblige à ne jamais demander au-delà de cette somme. Je prie le rapporteur d'enrégistrer mes paroles.

Mr McCay,

Je suis autorisé à dire la même chose.

Mr Trudeau,

Par suite des assurances données par les Sénateurs je retire mon amendement.

Le bill est adopté.

DETERMINATION DES LIMITES ENTRE LES PAROISSES DE CADDO ET DE SOTO.

Le bill pour déterminer la ligne frontière entre les paroisses de Caddo et de Soto est pris en considération.

Mr Hodge,

Je désire faire savoir que ce bill a été adopté par la Chambre et a l'approbation des membres de ces paroisses. Il affecte aussi les intérêts de la paroisse de Natchitoches qui à l'avenir fera partie de mon district. Je n'entends d'aucune manière être responsable de ce bill attendu que les Représentans des paroisses intéressées dans l'autre Chambre l'approuvent mais je ne me crois pas autorisé à le recombattre.

Le bill est adopté.

L'EXPEDITION RICKER.

Mr Hébert appelle la discussion sur le bill pourvoyant au paiement des dépenses encourues par le président du comité du Sénat en 1852.

Mr King,

On a prétendu que ce comité n'avait point autorité pour procéder comme il l'a fait. La résolution qui l'a désigné montre le contraire. La résolution dit que pendant le recès il aura pleins pouvoirs d'agir et de réunir des renseignemens. Que cela veut-il dire? Permettez-moi de lire un court extrait du rapport que le comité a présenté en 1853. (Mr King donne lecture d'un extrait du rapport.) Je sais que Mr Ricker a consulté un grand nombre des hommes les plus éminents de l'Etat et aucun n'a prétendu qu'il n'avait pas d'autorité. C'est une nouvelle idée qui s'est fait jour a la onzième heure mais qui a été répétée souvent et assez chaudement pour porter son propre poids avec elle. La somme allouée a été réduite à une maigre pitance, c'est-à-dire de $25,000 à 500. En la payant l'affaire sera réglée. Si nous ne le faisons pas, nous serons probablement importunés jusqu'à ce que nous payons la totalité.

Mr Wickliffe,

Le Sénateur dit qu'on n'a pensé qu'après coup à dénier à Mr Ricker l'autorité d'agir. Je sais que Mr Ricker a prié un Sénateur de l'accompagner et a dit à la même époque, qu'il n'avait pas d'autorité. Le Sénateur dit que la résolution l'autorisait. Je dis que non. Quelqu'un prétendra-t-il que cette résolution lui permettait d'employer des steamboats et de faire des dépenses de même nature. Avait-il le pouvoir de traverser l'Etat comme il l'a fait? Mr Butler membre du comité a dit lui-même qu'il ne pensait pas qu'il eût ce pouvoir et a refusé d'en faire partie. Un autre membre a dit qu'il pensait qu'il avait une sorte de pouvoirs implicites. Mr Waddill des Avoyelles ne s'est pas embarqué. Il y a ici des membres du comité qui ont pensé qu'ils n'avaient pas les pouvoirs réclamés pour eux. Le Sénateur pense-t-il sérieusement qu'ils fussent autorisés à employer des steamboats, à boire du Champagne et à satisfaire leurs caprices aux frais de l'Etat. Si le Sénat pense que par une interprétation la plus libérale des termes de la résolution, ce pouvoir était conféré qu'il vote pour le bill.

Mr McCay,

Si le Sénat a donné des pouvoirs de cette nature on doit payer sur le fonds contingent. Le Sénat n'avait pas le pouvoir d'engager à cet égard la responsabilité de l'assemblée générale.

Mr King,

Dans tous les cas le comité ne doit point perdre son argent par suite d'une erreur de l'Etat. On a continué de nommer des comités pour agir pendant le recès et de leur donner des pouvoirs de faire venir des personnes et des documens. Mr Ricker a dépensé $987 de sa poche. Les membres du comité ont eu à supporter de fortes dépenses. Messieurs Grand & Latourette sont restés pendant des semaines dans la Baie de Berwick et en d'autres lieux pour y faire des observations et y réunir des renseignemens. Ils ont produit une série de fort belles cartes, les plus belles de l'Etat et leur travail lui a bénéficié. Leurs cartes sont assez étendues pour couvrir le plancher de cette Chambre et ils ont de plus fait une série de rapports importans dont la seule copie est précieuse. Priverons-nous ces personnes de la juste compensation qu'elles méritent. Elles ont fait le travail Le Sénat a donné l'autorité et nous ne refuserons pas de les payer.

Mr Hodge,

Je fais la motion de déposer le bill sur le bureau.

Cette motion est perdue.

Mr Wickliffe.

Je demande que le montant soit pris sur le fonds des améliorations.

Mr King,

Je suis opposé à cela parce que ça serait embarrasser le fonds des améliorations. Je fais la motion de déposer l'amendement sur le bureau J'objecte en outre parce que ce fonds ne peut pas payer des travailleurs et les nègres ne le sont pas aujourd'hui. A quoi sert d'avoir recours à un fonds insuffisant Votez contre le bill ou demandez la somme à une source qui puisse la fournir.

Mr Boatner,

Le comité a consenti à une réclamation qui n'est point renfermée dans le bill—c'est celle du Dr Riddell pour $500.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je sais que Mr Riddell n'a jamais dépensé un sou pour cette expédition.

MERCREDI, 15 mars 1854.

Emancipation des Esclaves.

Mr Wickliffe appelle le bill sur les règles à suivre pour émanciper les esclaves dans l'Etat de la Louisiane.

Mr King,

Ce n'est point là une loi locale mais une loi générale. J'espère que les Sénateurs qui ont été d'accord avec moi au sujet de l'émancipation ne favoriseront pas une pareille législation. Il y a peu de temps, la Législature a passé à une grande unanimité une loi déterminant la politique permanente de la Louisiane qui devait dans un terme mis à l'émancipation des esclaves destinés à rester parmi nous. Nous nous sommes écartés de cette intention en faisant de la législation spéciale. Dans tous les cas semblables on produit le bon son de la cloche et on en appelle à nos sympathies tellement qu'il nous est difficile de refuser. On nous engage enfin à adopter une loi générale qui prend sa source dans l'habitude qu'on a de s'adresser à la Législature pour demander des actes spéciaux d'émancipation. Nous avons aussi passé une loi générale sur les pensions et la liste des réclamants s'est élevée de $15,000 à 60,000 Le résultat de ce bill sera le même si l'avocat de district est le seul juge. Nous en aurons dans un an plusieurs centaines au lieu de vingt ou trente. Cet officier n'a aucun intérêt dans le procès, il est payé qu'il y ait gain ou perte. La personne qui désirera une émancipation intriguera auprès de l'avocat de district précisément comme elle peut le faire ici. Il est facile de prévoir la conséquence de cette politique; elle tend à produire l'émancipation de tous les esclaves de l'Etat. Il vaudrait mieux permettre à chacun d'émanciper ses esclaves en leur permettant de résider dans l'Etat que d'adopter ce bill. Pour ma part je ferai tout ce qui me sera possible pour le faire échouer et je ne consentirai à aucune dispense des règles.

Mr Wickliffe,

Le Sénateur connait mal l'historique de la loi de 1852. Il prétend qu'elle a été adoptée avec une grande unanimité. La vérité est qu'elle a rencontré une grande opposition dans les deux Chambres. Sibérie a été retranché, et ce mot n'y a reparu qu'après l'enrôlement. Il dit que ce bill aura la tendance de faire émanciper tous les esclaves de l'Etat, que ce sera un moyen d'élection auprès des officiers qui se laisseront importuner ou corrompre par les offres des parties intéressées insinuant ainsi que les avocats de district de Jefferson se laisseront corrompre pour $20 Il m'est impossible de croire qu'il en soit ainsi de nos officiers Le Sénateur dit que sous l'empire de ce bill des centaines de nègres seront annuellement émancipés. Je ne pense pas qu'il y en ait autant que par l'action de la Législature. Sous l'empire de cette loi, le maître et l'esclave seront tous deux connus du tribunal auquel ils s'adresseront et on n'entendra plus parler de ce système d'intrigues de la couleur de celles dont le Sénateur a parlé. Lorsqu'ils viendront s'adresser à nous pour obtenir un bill nous pourrons leur dire de retourner chez eux et de s'adresser à un jury de leurs voisins, et l'avocat de district agira si la chose est jugée convenable et nécessaire. Nous serons ainsi délivrés des importunités qui nous assiégent et il existera un système général réglant toutes les émancipations nécessaires.

Mr King,

Je n'ai pas accusé de corruption les avocats de district et les jurés. J'ai voulu dire que leurs autres devoirs sont trop onéreux et absorbent trop de temps pour leur permettre de représenter les intérêts de l'Etat dans un sujet de cette nature. Ce sont des hommes et des hommes faibles comme nous le sommes. Ils peuvent céder aux importunités qui agissent tant sur la Législature Après que la loi générale des pensions a été adoptée nos obligations se sont élevées après un ou deux ans de $15,000 à 60,000 et cependant nous l'avions préparée avec grand soin. Le Sénateur de Ouest Féliciana a été un des premiers à soutenir son rappel afin de laisser juger du mérite de chacun. Ici le mal est plus grand encore. Le bill est mal rédigé. Un nègre ayant droit à sa liberté par la loi et par la justice ne pourra pas poursuivre; si même il est enlevé et vendu il ne pourra pas réclamer la liberté dont il a été illégalement privé. Le maître seul peut présenter la demande et dans des cas semblables il sera la dernière personne à le faire.

Mr Wickliffe,

Le Sénateur prétend-il dire que ce bill enlève à l'esclave le droit de demander en justice sa liberté tel qu'il lui est accordé par le Code.

Mr King,

Ce n'est pas dit en termes précis mais ce bill paraît être une loi générale pour régler l'émancipation des esclaves et des dispositions relatives aux espèces que j'ai citées n'auraient pas dû être oubliés. On semble croire que le Code est comme la Constitution qui ne peut être affectée par des dispositions législatives. C'est une erreur, le Code n'est qu'un composé de statuts que peuvent rappeler des lois contraires passées par la Législature. Je ne puis répondre à la question du Sénateur sans faire avec soin l'analyse du bill,—mais tel qu'il m'apparaît actuellement il pourrait bien détruire le droit dont jouit le nègre de poursuivre pour sa liberté. J'espère que le Sénat n'accordera pas la dispense des règles.

Cette dispense est refusée.

BILL POUR PERMETTRE AUX RAIL ROADS D'HYPOTHEQUER LEURS PROPRIETES.

Mr Kenner,

Je désire appeler la discussion sur le bill autorisant les compagnies de rail roads à hypothèquer leurs propriétés.

Mr Lacey,

J'ai voté hier contre le bill avec la majorité. J'ai demandé hier au soir la reconsidération du vote et elle a été accordée.

Mr Moore,

L'amendement que je présente n'est présenté qu'après mûre réflexion. Je ne suis actionnaire dans aucune de ces compagnies et je n'ai point par conséquent de préjugés à leur égard. Nous avons autorisé la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans à émettre des bons en faveur de ces chemins. Nous avons fait de ces bons une base d'opérations de Banque. On nous demande maintenant de permettre aux compagnies d'hypothèquer la totalité de leurs propriétés même celles qui n'existent pas en y comprenant l'intérêt de l'Etat. C'est aller trop loin. Je n'ai pas d'objection à leur permettre d'hypothéquer les portions de routes déjà faites mais je ne le veux pas pour celles qui ne sont pas construites, attendu surtout que nous avons fait des bons à émettre par la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans une base d'opérations de Banque.

Mr Kenner,

On semble croire que les compagnies ne sont pas déjà en possession de ce droit mais un examen a fait voir que leurs chartes le leur conférent. On a dit ici qu'on ne pouvait leur permettre d'hypothèquer ce qui n'existe pas mais si des individus et des capitalistes s'en contentent pour avancer leur argent, pourquoi ne leur laisserions-nous pas faire? Si nous ne leur avions pas accordéce privilége, personne n'aurait eu confiance pour leur prêter de l'argent car on aurait pu craindre que certains individus, une fois la route terminée, se fussent empressées à obtenir sur elles une hypothèque Tout ce que nous voulons est de garantir les personnes qui veulent avancer leur argent aux compagnies de rail roads. Je ne vois pas qu'il y ait rien de monstrueux dans cette proposition.

Mr Moore,

Voici quel sera l'effet du bill. Les compagnies hypothèqueront les chemins pour leur valeur entière. Les bons de la Nouvelle-Orléans seront émis en leur faveur pour $3,500,000 et elles en toucheront aussi le montant. Elles hypothèqueront ainsi l'intérêt entier de la ville et celui de l'Etat et encaisseront la valeur des deux. En ma qualité d'actionnaire, je suis opposé à de pareils procédés—je les crois mauvais et injustes et les compagnies doivent être satisfaites avec ce qu'elles ont déjà obtenu de la ville et de l'Etat.

Mr Trudeau,

En vertu de ce bill les Directeurs sont autorisés non seulement à hypothéquer les droits de l'Etat mais aussi ceux des actionnaires. Quel droit avons-nous d'aller plus loin et de donner aux Directeurs le droit de disposer en outre de l'intérêt de l'Etat et de la ville de ceux des actionnaires sans leur consentement?

Mr Kenner,

Ils ont déjà ce droit.

Mr Trudeau,

Où cela s'arrêtera-t-il?

On a demandé des chartes nous les avons accordées. On a demandé la souscription de l'Etat nous avons souscrit. On a demandé que la Nouvelle Orléans fut autorisée à émettre des bons au profit des compagnies, nous l'avons permis. C'est assez, je ne puis aller plus.

SECOURS A ACCORDER A DANIEL MARTINDALE.

Le bill pour venir au secours de feu Daniel Martindale est pris en considération.

Mr Munday,

La personne dont le nom est mentionné dans ce bill était l'année dernière avocat de district dans mon district, c'était un jeune homme dont les talents remarquables et les connaissances variées promettaient un homme distingué dans l'âge mûr. C'était certainement un homme précieux pour l'Etat et pour la profession dont il était un des brillans ornemens lorsque la fatale épidémie dont les effets désolants ont été ressentis sur tant de points de l'Etat apparut de nos côtés, son coeur humain et sympathique le porta à prendre une part active dans tous les secours à porter. Il était infatigable dans ses actes personnels et ne calculait pas ses moyens. Il s'empressait auprès du malade et consolait le mourant. Il a organisé un hôpital pour la réception des patients et a employé tout son temps à ces travaux d'humanité qui témoignent dans de pareils cas des coeurs véritablement généreux et philantropiques, mais la mort aime à laisser des traces éclatantes et il a été la dernière victime de l'épidémie qu'il avait si noblement combattue.

Noctes atque dies patet atri janua ditis.

Il est mort laissant derrière lui une mère veuve dont il était l'unique soutien et le seul espoir. Le seul objet de ce bill est d'autoriser le paiement pour le reste de son salaire jusqu'à la fin du terme que la mort l'a empêché d'atteindre. J'espère qu'il ne rencontrera pas d'objection.

Mr King,

Nous avons eu à la Nouvelle-Orléans environ trois mille victimes semblables dont la vie a été juste et méritoire—$600,000 ne suffiraient pas pour couvrir toutes les réclamations d'une nature semblable si elles étaient produites. L'objet paraît être de faire une donation charitable pour les services que le défunt a rendus pendant l'épidémie. Si c'est là le but, nous avons à la Nouvelle-Orléans huit ou dix mille cas semblables.

Mr Munday,

J'ai voté pour une quantité innombrable de bills présentés pour secourir la Nouvelle-Orléans lorsque j'ai été appelé à le faire et maintenant le Sénateur refuse de voter la misérable somme de $300 pour un cas particulier dans la paroisse de Est Féliciana. Il n'oserait pas voter contre un bill de même nature pour la Nouvelle-Orléans mais il veut le faire pour une autre paroisse. Le Sénateur a été malheureux dans ses comparaisons. Il dit que dix mille cas semblables se sont présentés à la Nouvelle-Orléans mais il s'agit ici d'un serviteur public méritoire mort en fonctions lorsqu'il exerçait les plus nobles devoirs de l'humanité. Pour toutes les demandes de même nature que le Sénatur pourra produire, je voterai le même secours non seulement volontiers mais avec joie.

Mr King,

Je ne puis cacher ma profonde sympathie pour l'appel que nous adre se le Sénateur, mais je dois me rappeler aussi que cela constituerait un précédent extrêmement dangereux. Si ce bill est adopté il servira de motif à la présentation de milliers de réclamations semblables. Le Sénateur a parlé d'esprit de sectionalité. Personne plus que moi n'en est plus dégagé. Il est vrai que j'ai voté des allocations pour des institutions charitables à la Nouvelle-Orléans mais c'était un sujet de police générale et non de faveur locale. Ceci au contraire est un mauvais système à quelque point de vue qu'on l'examine. Ce bill adopté justifiera des réclamations semblables venues de toutes les parties de l'Etat. Si le Sénateur s'adresse à moi au nom de la charité, je contribuerai volontiers mais je ne veux pas faire du trésor de l'Etat une institution charitable.

Digitized by Google

Le bill est adopté.

COLLEGE DE MINDEN.

Le bill allouant $5,000 au Collége de Minden est pris en considération.

Mr MacMurdo,

Avec la permission du Sénat, je dirai quelques mots à ce sujet. Il est inutile que j'allègue que je suis en faveur de l'éducation je le suis autant qu'aucun membre de cette assemblée. La seule objection que j'aie à faire contre ce bill est qu'il établit un précédent contre lequel il sera plus tard difficile de se défendre. Si nous accordons cela à une paroisse, il faudra peut-être l'accorder ensuite à toutes. Il y a quarante-sept paroisses dans l'Etat et en supposant $5,000 pour chacune cela ferait un total de $235,000. Si nous entrons dans ce système nous pouvons être dans un an appelés à allouer cette somme tout entière et le trésor ne pourrait supporter une pareille charge. Si ce bill passe, nous devons nous préparer à faire droit à une proposition pour augmenter les taxes de l'Etat.

Mr Defreese,

Je suis opposé à ce système de législation. La proposition a trait à une paroisse contigue à la mienne et cependant je voterai contre. Je voterais de même s'il s'agissait de ma paroisse. Si le bill n'est pas déposé sur le bureau je demanderai comme amendement que pareille somme soit accordée à chaque paroisse de l'Etat. Tout homme qui réfléchit doit réprouver ce système de législation. Les allégations du professeur Dimitry malgré sa chaude éloquence et sa rhétorique n'a pas d'influence sur moi en matière de législation.

Mr Kenner,

Il y a quelques années on était partisan d'un système qui consistait à construire des maisons d'école appelées colléges, académies ou séminaires. Ce plan fut trouvé mauvais. Le système des écoles publiques fut établi et produisit de meilleurs résultats que celui qui consistait à construire des écoles et des colléges et à laisser le public fournir des professeurs. Si nous adoptons ce bill la partie de l'Etat qui paie la plus forte taxe nous blâmera. Combien paie la paroisse de Claiborne?

Mr Hodge,

Plus que l'Ascension.

Mr Kenner,

Je voudrais en voir la preuve.

Mr Hodge,

Pour employer l'argument du Sénateur je lui parie cent piastres.

Mr Lacey,

Enrégistrez cela monsieur le rapporteur.

Mr Kenner,

Et ajoutez que j'accepte. Si les Sénateurs manifestaient autant d'anxiété de voir leurs paroles aussi exactement enrégistrées que celles de leurs voisins le journal ne leur serait pas aussi favorable, mais revenons au fait. La partie de l'Etat la plus lourdement taxée reçoit proportionnellement le moindre profit. Elle reçoit une piastre en retour sur quatre ou cinq qu'elle débourse, elle le fait sans murmurer, mais si vous faites ce qui est proposé elle aura le droit d'objection et en usera—ce sera au détriment de tout notre système d'écoles et de la cause de l'éducation dans tout l'Etat quelque soit le profit que cette institution puisse en retirer en particulier.

Le bill est adopté.

BAYOU PLAQUEMINES.

Le bill du Bayou Plaquemines est pris en considération.

Mr. Hébert,

Quant on veut forcer le cours d'un grand fleuve, on trouve qu'il en résulte des inconvénients qui forcent à revenir au régime naturel du cours d'eau. C'est le cas quand on s'adresse à un de ces cours d'eau qui déchargent naturellement le surplus de ses eaux soit par inondation ou par issues latérales et qu'on veut restreindre une immense quantité d'eau dans son lit. Des effets de cette nature ont été produits par le cut-off du Raccourci, le cut-off du Shreveport et d'autres qui, dans le fait, n'ont pas raccourci d'un pouce la distance entre la Nouvelle-Orléans et Natchez. A Plaquemines, on a modifié la distance entre la rivière en interceptant une de ses décharges naturelles. Dès qu'on arrête, le bois de dérive commence à s'accumuler et à intercepter l'ouverture. Le bill dit que l'interruption n'est que temporaire, mais la difficulté consiste à r'ouvrir de nouveau quand elle a eu lieu. On peut voir cela à Manchac. Si nous arrêtons la rivière Plaquemine, le courant aussi bien que la profondeur s'en accroîtront. Près de Plaquemine, l'accroissement est déjà de dix-huit pouces. Le premier effet qui se fera sentir sera la chute de la ville de Plaquemines dans la rivière. Je demande au membre qui représente cette partie de la Louisiane qui est au-dessous de Plaquemines, de me soutenir dans mon opposition au bill. L'ingénieur de l'Etat qu'il vaudrait mieux ménager deux nouvelles issues plutôt que de boucher le bayou Plaquemine. (Mr. Hébert cite un passage d'un rapport de l'ingénieur d'Etat) mais il y a une autre considération, cela arrêterait la navigation du bayou, et que les sénateurs de cette portion de l'Etat qui y ont recours, se rappellent ceci: il ne viendra pas d'eau du fleuve dans le bayou, et nous aurons à dépendre des eaux de derrière venant de l'Atchafalaya ; mais il y a une perte de 18 pouces dans le bayou Plaquemines, et en tenant compte de la différence des hautes eaux dans ce bayou dans l'Atchafalaya, les eaux de ce dernier ne peuvent remonter. Elles ne pourraient venir à plus de quatre milles au-dessous de la ville. Je ne suis pas préparé à présenter un argument élaboré sur le sujets, et je me contenterai de demander que le bill soit déposé sur le bureau et que le substitut soit pris en considération. Je vais citer la loi de 1855 auquel ce substitut se réfère. (Mr. Hébert lit le texte.) Je rappellerai au Sénat qu'il a adopté il y a peu de jours de cela, une résolution ordonnant à l'ingénieur d'Etat, de se transporter sur le bayou Plaquemines, de le barrer et d'intercepter l'eau si c'est nécessaire. Je suis informé que l'amas de bois qui avait causé tant d'alarmes est enlevé.

Mr. King,

J'espère que la motion d'adopter le substitut prévaudra. Il semble que l'Etat veuille jouer à l'ingénieur, et dicter d'une manière précise en quoi consiste un travail de cette nature pour lequel les talents les plus positifs sont nécessaires.

Mr. Palfrey,

J'espère que le substitut prévaudra. Le bayou Plaquemines est la seule voie de transport pour une immense quantité de produits de l'Ouest de l'Etat et de la Nouvelle-Orléans aux paroisses de l'Ouest. Les Avoyelles, St. Martin, Ste. Marie, Lafayette, Vermillion, Calcasieu, Ascension, et une partie des Rapides, sont toutes intéressées à la navigation de ce bayou. Elle est pour eux de la plus grande importance, ils n'ont pas d'autre issue pour leurs produits, excepté en faisant un long circuit par l'Atchafalaya. L'allocation est faite pour enlever les bois de dérive, et depuis plusieurs mois, le peuple de cette section est privé des bénéfices de la navigation. En faisant le tour par l'Atchafalaya, il est obligé de payer une piastre de plus pour transporter son sucre et pour les autres denrées en proportion, soit qu'ils les reçoivent ou qu'il les expédient. J'espère que le substitut sera adopté.

Le substitut est adopté.

SESSION DU SOIR.

MERCREDI, 15 mars 1854.

Limites entre les Paroisses d'Iberville et de Ouest Bâton Rouge.

Mr Lauve,

J'ai à faire observer à propos de ce bill, afin de montrer que le territoire de Grosse Tête appartient à Ouest Baton Rouge. Il suffit pour cela de lire la loi (Mr Lauve cite la loi.) Cela est suffisant pour convaincre tout le monde que la Paroisse de Ouest Bâton Rouge a, sur ce territoire, des droits que nous ne pouvons pas lui enlever. La loi le donne à Ouest Bâton Rouge, on dit au moins que dans un certain temps il doit lui revenir. J'espère que le Sénat pésera ces considérations et réfléchira mûrement avant d'accomplir l'acte d'injustice qui serait commis en adoptant ce bill. Ce n'est pas là un sujet sur lequel la Législature a à décider, c'est une question à soumettre aux décisions des Cours, et il faut la leur abandonner.

Mr Hébert,

Ce qu'a dit mon collègue réclame quelques mots en réponse. Le Sénateur nous a dit que ce n'est point là une matière que la Législature puisse régler.—Je crois au contraire que ce n'est point une de ces questions qui puissent être décidées par les Cours. Si le Sénateur s'appuyait sur un acte de la Législature, définissant la limite entre deux paroisses, il pourrait y avoir matière à décision judiciaire, mais cette loi n'existe pas, la Législature doit donc agir. Le Sénateur dit aussi que la loi qu'il a citée donne ce territoire à Ouest Baton Rouge. Je dis au contraire qu'elle la donne bien clairement a Iberville pour un temps limité. Il dit qu'au bout d'un certain temps ce territoire doit revenir à Ouest Bâton Rouge ; je prétends que la question est évidemment laissée ouverte pour que la Législature en décide. Les lois adoptées plus tard prouvent que la Législature n'a jamais eu les intentions que le Sénateur lui suppose ; elle avait deux motifs que je vais essayer d'expliquer. Des lois sur ce sujet ont été successivement adoptées par les Législatures de 1828 et de 1847. Ces deux actes sont en contradiction, mais un d'eux a laissé au peuple de ce territoire le droit de le décider. S'il désire s'adjoindre à Ouest Bâton Rouge, je suis prêt à proposer à la première session un bill qui satisfera à leurs vœux.

Mr Hodge,

Je désirerai que la loi soit lue.

Mr Hébert,

Je vais d'abord lire l'acte de 1825, (Mr Hébert en donne lecture.) J'appelle l'attention du Sénat sur cet acte. Le grand bayou Poydras qui y est cité, se trouve entre le Mississippi et Grosse-Tête. La loi donne le territoire intermédiaire à la Pointe Coupée. Un autre acte détermine les limites de la Pointe-Coupée et ce territoire n'y est point compris. Cette loi est réellement la seule disposition qui enlève ce territoire à la Pointe Coupée. Je citerai maintenant l'acte de 1847, (Mr Hébert en donne lecture) et j'appellerai l'attention spéciale des Sénateurs sur les termes de cet acte. Il donne à Iberville toute la partie Ouest de ce territoire, en continuant la ligne de division jusqu'a la Pointe Coupée. Cela montre l'intention de la Législature de donner à Iberville ce territoire. Je désire que le Sénat agisse sur cette matière et la règle pour toujours.

Voici les passages des lois citées dans le cours des remarques précédents.

ACTE

Pour déterminer les limites de la Paroisse de Pointe Coupée, et pour donner certains pouvoir au jury de police de cette Paroisse, et aussi à celui de la Paroisse de Ouest Bâton Rouge, approuvé le 4 février 1825.

Section 1. Il est décrété, etc., Que la Paroisse de la Pointe Coupée sera circonscrite par les limites suivantes, savoir: partant de l'extrémité nord de la ligne treize vers l'Est, ligne inférieure d'une portion de terre appartenant aujourd'hui à Alexandre Bandin et située sur le bayou Dumaine, suivant ensuite la dite ligne vers le Sud et les lignes limitant la profondeur des terres et plantations situées sur la rive orientale de chenal inférieur de la fausse rivière jusqu'au grand bayou Poydras et suivant de là le grand Bayou Poydras jusqu'à sa jonction avec le Bayou Grosse Tête, de là en droite ligne à l'Ouest jusqu'à la rivière d'Atchafalaya, et remontant l'Atchafalaya jusqu'au Mississippi, etc.

Un acte intitulé : " Acte pour déterminer les limites de la Paroisse Pointe Coupée, approuvé le 12 février 1838."

Section 1. Il est décrété, etc., Que la ligne de la Paroisse Pointe Coupée entre la dite paroisse et la paroisse de Ouest Bâton Rouge courra comme suit : Partant de l'embouchure inférieure de la Fausse Rivière et courant sur 35 acres le long du chenal inférieur de la Fausse Rivière, suivant alors les lignes de fond des habitations de Ouest Baton Rouge, jusqu'à ce que cette ligne rencontre celle qui divise les townships 5 et 6, courant ensuite en ligne droite sur le coin inférieur des Rangers 9 et 10, et 10 entre les townships 6 et 7, suivant ensuite la ligne des Rangers 9, 10, 11 entre les townships 6 et 7 jusqu'à l'Atchafalaya, et remontant la dite rivière jusqu'à son embouchure dans le Mississippi.

Section 2. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que toutes lois ou portions de lois contraires à la présente, est par la présente rappelée.

ACTE

Pour définir les limites entre les Paroisses d'Iberville et d'Ascension, et entre les Paroisses d'Iberville et de St. Martin, approuvé le 15 avril 1847.

Section 1 Il est décrété, etc., Que les lignes relevées et établies par Augustus S. Phelps, dans l'année mil huit cent trente sept, sont et demeurent déclarées et arrêtées comme la ligne de division entre les Paroisses d'Iberville et Ascension.

Section 2. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que la ligne entre les Paroisses d'Iberville et de St. Martin, commencera à un point où la ligne qui est entre les townships 1 et 12, rencontre l'Atchafalaya communément appelé Grande Rivière ou Vieille Rivière, sur sa rive occidentale à l'Est de, et près du lac Natchez, courant de là à l'Ouest sur la dite ligne de township jusqu'à ce qu'elle rencontre la branche orientale du Bayou Pigeon, de là suivant le milieu du dit Bayou et le milieu du petit Bayou Pigeons jusqu'au nord du Cross Bayou, et de là suivant le milieu du Cross Bayou jusqu'à la jonction avec le lac Long vulgairement appelé lac Morphy, de là traversant le dit lac pour aller frapper à un point de son bord occidental à trois milles au nord de la dite ligne de township, de là parallèlement à cette dernière jusqu'au lac Chicot, de là le long du côté Est du dit lac Chicot jusqu'à l'embouchure navigable Est dans le lac du Bayou Sorel, de là au nord en suivant le milieu de la dite embouchure et la Baie du Bayou Sorel jusqu'au Bayou Pigeon Supérieur, de là en re-vant le milieu de ce Bayou au nord jusqu'à sa jonction avec l'Atchafalaya nommé Grande Rivière, de là suivant le milieu de la dite Grande Rivière jusqu'à la bair Oské, de là en la traversant par le milieu à la branche Est du Bayou Alabouna, de là en suivant la dite branche et en rasant les habitations sur les deux bords, en remontant jusqu'à la ligne de township entre les townships 6 et 7, ou la limite Sud, la Paroisse de Pointe Coupée, la portion du Nord et à l'Est de la dite ville devant appartenir à la Paroisse Iberville, et celle au Sud et à l'Ouest à la Paroisse de St. Martin.

Section 3. Et il est de plus décrété, etc., Que toutes lois contraires aux dispositions de cet acte, sont et demeurent rappelées.

Mr Moore,

Le Sénat je l'espère, me permettra quelques observations à ce sujet. En lisant la loi de 1826, on voit que le territoire en dispute appartenait à cette époque à Bâton Rouge, si je puis me servir de cette expression, il était prêté à Iberville jusqu'à ce que Ouest Bâton Rouge ait pu construire une route conduisant a la maison de Cour. Je puis remarquer que la ligne de division dans ma section de l'Etat est le Bayou Atchafalaya. Je faisais partie du Sénat lorsque l'acte de 1847 a été adopté, je m'y suis opposé, contrairement à mes vœux il a enlevé une portion de ma paroisse. Iberville n'était pas satisfait de son territoire primitif et ainsi une partie de St. Martin a été séparée et lui a été donnée. Maintenant elle veut avoir un morceau de Ouest Bâton Rouge, car tout le monde peut voir que ce territoire a été seulement prêté à Iberville, et que Ouest Bâton Rouge n'a jamais perdu son titre Ouest Bâton Rouge, afin de se conformer aux dispositions de la loi, a dépensé beaucoup d'argent à construire un chemin planchéyé ; car la loi dit que ce territoire sera attaché à Iberville jusqu'à ce que ce chemin soit fait, et qu'alors il fera retour à son propriétaire originaire. Les Bayous autrefois étaient toujours les limites des paroisses. Ce fait est établi par les limites espagnoles. Il n'y a pas eu d'exceptions dans ce cas particulier, excepté ce qui était considéré comme purement temporaire. La seule raison qui a fait ajoindre temporairement ce territoire à Iberville, c'est qu'il n'y avait pas de route traversant Ouest Baton Rouge pour se rendre à la rivière, et que le public était obligé de passer par Iberville. Comme il appartenait à Ouest Baton Rouge originairement, que personne ne contestera, il aurait été souverainement injuste de le lui enlever. Il y a une autre objection à faire au bill. Si nous enlevons ce territoire à Ouest Bâton Rouge, nous violons moins l'esprit de cet article de la Constitution qui dit qu'aucune paroisse ne sera crée ayant de 5 milles carré de superficie. Si on enlève cette portion, il restera à Ouest Bâton Rouge moins de 0 milles. D'après les termes de la loi il est évident que du moment ou le chemin est terminé, il doit faire retour à Ouest Bâton Rouge.—Les lois entre St. Martin et Iberville que le Sénateur a décrites n'ont rien à faire avec la question. Cette ligne pourrait aussi bien exister sans qu'on ait rien à Ouest Baton Rouge. Le peuple de cette paroisse a récemment dépensé $13,000 pour faire un chemin à la convenance de la population de Grosse Tête, et maintenant on veut lui enlever ce territoire. Les dernières limites étaient l'Atchafalaya, la portion a l'Ouest du Bayou Grosse Tête, devait être réannexé à Ouest Bâton Rouge, de sorte que le chemin aurait été construit. Ce chemin est exécuté, il coute près de mille piastres, et maintenant qu'on a rempli les conditions de la loi, nous n'avons aucun droit de nous refuser à restituer ce territoire.

Mr Lacoste,

Je voterai pour le bill parce qu'il donne au peuple le droit de choisir. Il est en pareil cas le meilleur juge.

Mr Hodge,

Je desire que mon vote à ce sujet soit enrégistré. Il s'agit d'un bill pour déterminer la limite entre deux paroisses. Il a été dit qu'un des actes cités par le Sénateur d'Iberville (Mr Lauve), pour soutenir sa position, a été rappelé par un autre acte. S'il en est ainsi, où est la nécessité de celui que nous discutons. On pourra dire qu'il s'agit de calmer l'irritation qui existe. Iberville dit avoir droit au territoire et aux taxes, Ouest Bâton Rouge élève la même prétention. Cette discussion doit faire l'objet d'une décision judiciaire. Où est l'ordre pour la division du territoire d'une paroisse ? Quel droit avons-nous de prendre une partie d'une paroisse pour l'adjoindre à une autre ? Nous pouvons en organiser de nouvelles, mais nous ne pouvons pas prendre à l'une pour octroyer à une autre, et quand même nous le pourrions nous violerions en agissant ainsi, cet article de la Constitution qui dit que nous ne pouvons disposer des droits acquis. Ouest Bâton Rouge a fait le chemin, et a acquis par là un droit que ni nous, ni aucun pouvoir humain n'a le droit de lui enlever. Et en quoi consiste ce droit ? c'est de percevoir des taxes sur les propriétés inclues dans son territoire, et ce droit dans ce cas particulier n'est pas du tout insignifiant. J'appellerai l'attention du Sénat sur une particularité de ce bill :—Ouest Bâton Rouge a à supporter le poids d'une immense dette et de la taxe qui en est la conséquence, Iberville est riche et n'a pas de dettes. Si nous laissons au peuple de Grosse Tête le soin de décider la question des motifs d'intérêts pécuniers le porteront nécessairement à voter pour s'adjoindre à la paroisse où il y a le moins de taxes à payer et ce sera Iberville. Est-il droit, est-il bien, est-il honnête de laisser la décision de la question à pareil tribunal ? est-il bien d'enlever ce territoire au peuple qui a accepté les conditions de la loi en construisant le chemin ? Les Sénateurs ne pensent pas ce qu'ils disent, et ils ne croient pas que l'acte de 1847 aie l'effet qu'il lui attribuent. S'il en était ainsi cette loi serait inutile. Ils y ont cru pour la première fois quand ils ont entendu dire que Ouest Baton Rouge allait réclamer ses droits. J'appelle l'attention des avocats qui font partie du Sénat sur ce fait, que la Cour Suprême a décidé que la Législature n'avait pas le droit de retirer le privilège d'un ferry une fois accordé. Lorsque ma paroisse a été organisée, la Législature a donné à Shreveport le droit d'établir un ferry. Une autre loi en donna ensuite la moitié de la paroisse de Bossier,—Shreveport résista et porta le point devant la Cour Suprême ; cette Cour décida dans un arrêt rendu par le juge Slidell, que si Shreveport avait fait des dépenses, elle était investie d'un droit acquis que la Législature ne pourrait pas lui enlever. Si Ouest Bâton Rouge a construit la route, vous ne pouvez pas lui prendre ce territoire. La position est semblable à celle que je viens de citer.—Je demande au Sénateur d'exécuter la Constitution et de ne point la mettre de côté par suite d'influence de partie.

Mr Wickliffe,

Je demanderai au Sénateur si la Paroisse de Ouest Bâton Rouge a construit la route.

Mr Hodge,

Les citoyens l'ont faite et cela revient au même. Ils l'ont construite avec l'intention d'exécuter la loi.

Mr Moore,

Je demande au Sénat la permission de citer la loi afin de montrer que j'avais raison de dire que l'Atchafalaya servait de limite à toutes ces paroisses. (Mr Moore lit le texte.) En faisant cette lecture, je n'ai voulu que prouver que mon interprétation de l'intention de la Législature était correcte.

Mr Hébert,

Je demanderai au Sénateur de lire la loi adoptée quatre jours après et retardant l'opération de celle-là. Un an après, en 1827, la Législature en a adopté une autre la rappelant.

La première section est adoptée.

La seconde section est prise en considération.

Mr Hodge,

Je fais la motion de supprimer cette section, le Sénateur dit que cette loi est déjà rappelée.

Mr Kenner,

Je vote contre ce bill parce que la discussion m'a convaincu que la loi, la justice et le droit sont tout entier pour Ouest Bâton Rouge. De plus, c'est la paroisse la plus faible, et je sympathise naturellement avec le faible. Iberville est puissant et puissamment représenté dans cette assemblée. Il veut dépouiller une paroisse plus faible et je ne contribuerai pas à sanctionner cet outrage par mon vote. J'essayerai de signaler quelques uns des défauts de ce bill. Je n'aborderai pas cette partie de la question si admirablement traitée par le Sénateur de Caddo et par celui de St, Martin, mais je traiterai d'autres points. La première section fixe les limites d'Iberville telles qu'elles doivent être. La seconde section déclare que toutes lois contraires à la première section sont rappelées, la troisième dit que le peuple votera : le bill dit-il que s'il vote contre la réunion avec Iberville, il restera avec Ouest Bâton Rouge ? Pas le moins du monde ? Celui qui a préparé ce bill était trop habile pour cela. La question reste telle qu'elle est aujourd'hui, c'est-à-dire que le territoire reste faisant partie d'Iberville. Il doit donc rester à cette paroisse, quelque soit le vote du peuple. L'élection doit être tenue par des commissaires d'Iberville, pas un habitant de Ouest Bâton Rouge ne sera auprès de la boîte au scrutin pour vérifier si le votes pris sont légaux ou non. Les spoliateurs ont du avoir le cœur insensible quand ils se sont arrêtés à une pareille combinaison. Mais quelques-uns des spoliateurs seront élus, et la pauvre paroisse de Ouest Bâton Rouge n'a pas de chance pour que justice lui soit faite. Iberville conduira l'élection, et le Shérif d'Iberville et probablement les votants d'Iberville y aideront. Ce bill convient à Iberville mais je désire l'amender de manière qu'au moins on emploie des commissaires tirés de l'Ouest Bâton Rouge.

Mr Wickliffe,

Où le bill propose-t-il de prendre des commissaires ? au milieu même de la population intéressée. Le Sénateur croit-il que ces commissaires ne ferait pas de retour d'élection véritables ? Croit-il qu'ils falsifieront les votes ? Le Sénateur dit que ce bill consomme la spoliation de Ouest Baton Rouge. Je vote pour le bill parceque je pense que le territoire appartient à Iberville. Quoi de plus juste que de laisser décider la question par les votants qui habitent ce territoire. Nous ne pouvons le laisser à ceux des deux paroisses parce que Ouest Bâton Rouge n'aurait pas de chance. Je suis autorisé à dire par un des représentants d'Iberville que la proposition a été faite de faire cette élection, et qu'elle a été rejetée par les représentants de Ouest Bâton Rouge.

JEUDI, 16 Mars 1854.

EXECUTEURS DE SUCCESSIONS.

L'acte pour amender l'acte relatif aux achats faits par les exécuteurs de successions, est pris en considération. (L'objet de ce bill est de permettre aux exécuteurs de devenir acquéreurs dans les sociétés ordinaires comme ils le sont dans les sociétés en communauté.)

Mr. Muday,

Pendant la discussion du bill du shérif, il a été établi que les administrateurs ont le pouvoir de faire des ventes. L'objet de ce bill est de leur permettre de devenir acquéreurs.

Mr. Ryan,

Ils ont déjà ce pouvoir par une loi de 1835, lorsqu'ils sont héritiers. Le seul changement que ce bill propose est de permettre à l'associé survivant, dans les sociétés ordinaires, de devenir acquéreur.

Mr. Trudeau,

Je ne comprends pas le bill et je voudrais que quelqu'un me l'explique.

Mr. Lacey,

C'est simplement pour permettre à l'associé survivant dans les sociétés à devenir acquéreur, afin que les intérêts de la société puissent être protégés.

Le bill est ado pté.

APPROPRIATIONS GENERALES.

Le bill suivant pourvoyant aux allocations générales est pris en considération.

Sur motion, le Sénat s'ajourne à cet après-midi, à cinq heures.

SEANCE DU SOIR.

Jeudi, le 16 mars 1354.

5 heures de l'après-midi.

Le Sénat se réunit conformément à l'ajournement.

Membres présens :

L'honorable R. C. Wickliffe, Président pro-tem du Sénat, occupe le fauteuil.

Sur motion, le Sénat se dispense de l'appel de ses membres, et de la lecture du journal.

Sur motion de Mr Ryan, le Sénat s'occupe du bill intitulé :

Acte pour modifier le droit d'appel des procès portés par devant les juges de paix de la paroisse d'Orléans.

Sur motion, et après dispense des règles, ce bill subit ses différentes lectures.

Et sur la motion de son adoption, Mr Hodge réclame l'appel nominal.

L'honorable R. C. Wickliffe au fauteuil.

Messieurs Braud, Defreese, Hébert, Lacey, MacMurdo Munday, Martel, Moore, Pulfrey, Ryan, Richardson et Wickliffe—11 Sénateurs, votent dans l'affirmative.

Et Messieurs Boatner, Hodge, Key, Kittridge, Lacoste, Lauve, Rivers, Scott et Trudeau—9 Sénateurs, votent dans la négative.

En conséquence, le Sénat donne son concours au dit bill.

Mr Wickliffe présente la résolution suivante:

Résolu que soixante jours après l'ajournement du Senat sont accordés à Messieurs Emile Wirz et Oscar Arroyo, pour compléter les traductions du journal non terminées, des résolutions, etc., de ce corps, ce délai étant nécessaire à cause de la multiplicité et de l'accumulation inattendue des affaires.

Laquelle résolution est adoptée.

Sur motion de Mr Hodge, le même temps est alloué au secrétaire adjoint pour mettre à jour les affaires du Sénat.

Et sur motion de Mr Trudeau, le même temps est alloué à Jules Desoat, traducteur.

Mr Kenner présente la résolution suivante, laquelle est adoptée :

Résolu que la somme de soixante-dix piastres est allouée à James S. Hall, pour avoir rapporté les débats du Sénat pendant sept jours, pendant l'absence du rapporteur, et que sept jours lui sont accordés pour finir ses rapports et qu'il recevra à titre de compensation la somme de quatre piastres par jour.

Les Sénateurs suivants appellent les bills suivants :

Mr Kenner,

Acte pour autoriser la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans à dessécher et améliorer les terres marécageuses et inondées dans les limites incorporées de la dite ville et de ses alentours.

Sur motion et après dispense des règles, ce bill subit ses différentes lectures, et le Sénat y donne son concours.

Mr Lacoste,

Acte pour autoriser l'affranchissement de l'esclave Mary Ann, pour des services fidèles rendus à son maître.

Sur motion, et après dispense des règles, ce bill est lu trois fois.

Et sur motion de son adoption, Mr King réclame l'appel nominal.

L'honorable R. C. Wickliffe au fauteuil.

Messieurs Braud, Clifton, De Russy, Hébert, Kay, Kittridge, Lacoste, Lawes, Lacey, Lauve, MacMurdo, Moore, Ryan et Wickliffe—14 Sénateurs, votent dans l'affirmative.

Et Messieurs Defreese, Evans, King, Munday, Taylor et Trudeau—6 Sénateurs, votent dans la négative.

En conséquence, le Sénat donne son adhésion au dit bill.

Mr Kay,

Acte pour empêcher les personnes de coupe, ou de disposer du bois sur aucune des terres publiques concédées à l'Etat par les Etats-Unis.

Sur motion, et après dispense des règles, ce bill subit ses différentes lectures, et le Sénat y donne son concours.

Mr Moore,

Acte pour autoriser l'ingénieur de l'Etat à nommer des assistants.

Sur motion, et après dispense des règles, ce bill subit ses différentes lectures, et le Sénat y donne son concours.

Sur motion, le Sénat s'occupe à huis-clos des affaires de l'Exécutif.

Les portes s'ouvrent.

Sur motion de Mr Kittridge, le Sénat s'occupe de la résolution requérant l'imprimeur de l'Etat d'imprimer un certain nombre d'exemplaires du bill pour organiser les écoles publiques.

Sur motion, cette résolution est déposée sur le bureau.

Mr Trudeau présente la résolution suivante qui est adoptée:

Résolu par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentans, Que les commis nommés par les comités réunis des deux Chambres recevront quatre piastres par jour et pas davantage, laquelle somme sera payée par moitié du fonds des dépenses casuelles de chaque Chambre.

Le messager spécial du Sénat vient soumettre à la signature du Président du Sénat les bills suivants:

Acte pour amender l'acte intitulé acte pour amender les divers actes relatifs aux patrouilles, approuvé le 9 janvier 1821.

Acte pour amender l'acte intitulé acte pour régler l'époque des sessions des Cours de District (la paroisse d'Orléans exceptée) approuvé le 29 avril 1853.

Acte intitulé acte pour améliorer et dessécher les terres marécageuses et inondées de l'Etat de la Louisiane, approuvé le 30 avril 1853, et pour allouer la somme de trois cent mille piastres pour mettre cet acte à exécution.

Les Sénateurs suivants font la motion de prendre les bills suivants en considération:

Mr Kittridge,

Résolution pour donner à l'asile des orphelins de Bâton Rouge les barrières qui entourent le Capitol et la maison occupée par le sergent-d'armes.

Mr King,

Acte pour exempter de taxe l'asile de l'association des Marins.

Mr Taylor,

Résolution requérant un relevé du Bayou Jaune, aux Avoyelles, par le commissaire du Troisieme District.

Acte pour venir au secours de Drury M. Prithard, shérif et collecteur de taxes de la paroisse de Catahoula.

Mr Kenner,

Acte pour venir au secours de Martin Marsdale.

Mr Braud,

Substitut à l'acte pour améliorer la navigation à Bayou Manchac et de la rivière Amite.

Sur motion de Mr Lacey, le Sénat s'occupe de résolution invitant John Mitchell au siége du ouvernement, laquelle est adoptée.

Sur motion de Mr De Russy, le Sénat s'occupe bill intitulé:

Acte pour régler l'affranchissement des esclaves ns l'Etat.

Sur motion, et après dispense des règles, ce bill t lu trois fois, et

Sur la motion de son adoption, Mr Hodge réclame l'appel nominal.

L'honorable C. W. Clifton au fauteuil.

Messieurs De Russy, Lacey, McCay, Munday, Martel et Scott—6 Sénateurs, votent dans l'affirmative.

Et Messieurs Boatner, Clifton, Defreese, Hodge, King, Kenner, Lawes, Lauve, MacMurdo, Palfrey, Ryan, Richardson et Trudeau—13 Sénateurs, votent dans la négative.

En conséquence, le Sénat refuse de se dispenser des règles.

Mr Kenner présente la résolution suivante, laquelle est adoptée:

Résolu que Durant Daponta, le rapporteur du Sénat, a droit à son per diem pendant soixante jours après l'ajournement de la Législature, à l'effet de finir ses rapports, et que le rapporteur fera un index aux dits rapports dans lequel les sujets et les noms seront entrés. Résolu que la somme de cent piastres est allouée pour faire cet index.

Le Président du Sénat nomme Messieurs Boatner et Hodge membres d'un comité de la part du Sénat pour mettre à exécution les dispositions du bill intitulé:

Acte pour pourvoir à la révision des lois de l'Etat d'une nature générale.

Mr Rivers présente la resolution suivante, laquelle est adoptée à l'unanimité.

Résolu unanimement que les remerciements du Sénat sont offerts au Lieutenant-Gouverneur W. W. Farmer, pour la manière habile et impartiale avec laquelle il a rempli les devoirs de Président du Sénat pendant la session actuelle.

Le bill suivant est pris en considération, et il subit ses différentes lectures, et le Sénat y donne son adhésion:

Acte pour payer les dépenses casuelles de la Chambre des Représentans et du Sénat de l'Etat de la Louisiane, à la première session de la 2ème Législature, pour l'année 1854.

Mr Boatner présente la résolution suivante, laquelle est unanimement adoptée.

Résolu que les remerciements du Sénat sont votée à l'honorable Louis Hébert, sénateur de la paroisse d'Iberville, pour la promptitude et l'habilité qu'il a montrées en remplissant les devoirs de Président du comité d'enrôlement du Sénat.

Mr Trudeau présente la résolution suivante, laquelle est adoptée à l'unanimité.

Résolu que les remerciements du Sénat sont votés à l'honorable Robert C Wickliffe, pour l'impartialité, l'habileté et la courtoisie avec lesquelles il a présidé les délibérations du Sénat.

Sur motion de Mr Hodge, la résolution suivante est unanimement adoptée :

Résolu que Mr Oscar Arroyo aura droit à la même compensation comme messager spécial du Sénat pour le temps qu'il a servi comme tel; qui a été allouée au messager spécial de l'année dernière.

Le messager spécial du Sénat informe la Chambre que le président pro. tem. du Sénat a signé les résolutions et les bills suivants:

Acte pour améliorer la navigation de la rivière Sabine.

Acte pour pourvoir à améliorer la navigation du Bayou Lafourche, pour dessécher les terres marécageuses et submergées et pour en réserver une portion de la vente pour un certain tems.

Acte pour rendre l'intérêt des bons émis par l'Etat payable à la Nlle-Orléans.

Mr Mac Murdo demande que le bill soit pris par séries. (Accordé.)

SALAIRE DU SECRETAIRE D'ETAT, $2000

Mr Mac Murdo,

Lorsqu'il y aura une différence avec l'année dernière je mentionnerai le fait afin que les Sénateurs puissent voter en connaissance de cause.

COMMIS DU SECRETAIRE D'ETAT, $1000.

Mr. Hodge,

Je fais la motion de mettre $600 à la place.

Mr. Kenner,

Je demanderai si le commis copiste est le même individu.

Mr. Macmurdo,

Non, monsieur. C'est une personne qui copie les actes de la Législature pour l'imprimeur de l'Etat C'est là un service spécial.

Mr. Kenner,

Cela n'a jamais été fait avant l'année dernière, et par conséquent c'est une chose inaccoutumée. Avant l'année dernière, le même individu remplissait ce double devoir. J'appelle l'attention du Sénat sur ce fait. Il est vrai que cet officier copie les actes, mais ils l'ont toujours été depuis l'organisation du gouvernement de l'Etat, et jusqu'à l'année dernière, nous n'avons jamais payé d'extra. J'y ai alors objecté. et je ne vois pas de raisons pour changer mon opinion.

L'amendement est déposé sur le bureau.

Mr. Hodge,

Je demande à remplacer $1000 par $1200, de maniere que tout le travail puisse être fait par la même personne. Nous économiserons ainsi $400.

Mr. Munday,

J'objecte à l'amendement, $600 ne sont pas trop pour ce travail qui consiste à copier des actes dans les deux langues, les bills enrôlés, etc. Tout cela demande un homme très capable. Il n'est que juste de lui donner un prix convenable pour son travail.

Mr. Defreeze,

Je suis opposé aux $1200 parce que dans mon opinion, si nous les accordons, la majorité maintiendra aussi les $600.

L'amendement est rejeté.

SALAIRE DU COMMIS DE L'AUDITEUR, $1200.

Mr. MacMurdo,

Le commis principal du bureau de l'Auditeur a à remplir pe fort pénibles devoirs, $2800 sont une somme très modérée pour de pareilles fonctions. Il doit être familier avec tous les devoirs du bureau, être prompt à donner des informations et faire en outre beaucoup de choses que nous ne soupçonnons pas. On ne peut pas obtenir un commis pour moins de cette somme. Si le Sénat élève la somme à $2,800, la Chambre consentira.

SALAIRE DU CONTRÔLEUR A WHEELESBORO.

Mr. Moore,

Je ferai la motion de retrancher le salaire du contrôleur à Wheelesboro. Ce bureau n'est pas nécessaire et on peut plutôt y objecter qu'il donne souvent lieu à des conflits pour les entrées. La Cour Suprême a décidé qu'il est subordonné au bureau qui se trouve ici. On y vend peu de terres, ce ne sont que celles faisant partie de la donation de 500,000 acres. Il arrive quelquefois que les personnes qui font ici des entrées de terre sont tout à ce bureau et trouvent qu'il y existe des entrées antérieures. Lorsque le bureau fut établi, on a dit qu'il y avait dans le district environ 80,000 acres. Depuis lors, elles doivent être presque toutes vendues. Le conflit qui existe entre les deux bureaux, fait de celui-là un embarras. On a cru que ce serait un avantage et une facilité pour le peuple de cette section, d'avoir un bureau dans le voisinage J'ai aidé à l'établir, mais je suis convaincu maintenant qu'il ne sert à rien ou plutôt qu'il est nuisible.

Mr. King,

Si nous voulons abolir ce bureau, il faut le faire par une loi Il serait très embarrassant de maintenir le bureau, et le fonctionnaire et de ne pas allouer de salaire. Je crois que je soutiendrai l'abolition du bureau, si nous pouvions le faire ; mais le moyen est mal choisi.

Mr. Moore,

J'avais le projet de présenter à la fin du bill, un amendement pour détruire ce bureau. Si je demandais à retrancher le salaire seulement dans le but de faire une opposition systématique à l'officier qui le reçoit, je serais indigne du siége que j'occupe comme sénateur.

L'amendement est déposé sur le bureau.

SALAIRE DU GREFFIER DE LA PREMIERE COUR DE DISTRICT, $6,000.

Mr. Palfrey,

Six mille piastres est la totalité du salaire. Par la loi, il doit collecter les amendes et les forfaitures et se payer lui-même et de compter à l'Etat, la balance. J'apprends qu'il n'en collecte aucun et qu'il ne rend compte de rien. Il pourrait collecter au moins la moitié de son salaire sur les amendes et forfaitures. Je fais la motion de retrancher six mille piastres et d'insérer trois mille piastres.

Mr. MacMurdo,

On n'a pas en vue de payer cette somme sur le fonds général, mais seulement la portion qui ne sera pas couverte par les amendes et les forfaitures.

Mr. Defreeze,

Le greffier n'a-t-il pas reçu de l'Etat, la totalité de son salaire?

Mr. MacMurdo,

Je n'ai pas de renseignement à cet égard.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Palfrey,

Je pense que ce serait meilleur moyen pour le forcer à collecter les amendes et les forfaitures.

Mr. Lacoste,

Avons-nous le droit de réduire son salaire après l'avoir fixé à $6000 par une loi?

Je ne le pense pas.

Mr. Munday,

Je propose d'amender en insérant quatre mille piastres.

Cette motion est adoptée.

Après quelques autres amendements, le bill est adopté.

CUBA.

Mr. McCay présente les résolutions suivantes qui sont lues séparément.

Résolu par le Sénat et la Chambre des Représentants de l'Etat de la Louisiane, que la politique récemment adoptée par le Gouvernement espagnol dans l'île de Cube, dont le but est, et l'effet sera l'abolition de l'esclavage dans cette colonie, nous fait craindre que la race blanche avec ses arts, son commerce et sa civilisation, ne soit sacrifiée pour une race inférieure et barbare.

Résolu, que la consommation de cette politique exercera une influence pernicieuse sur les institutions et les intérêts sociaux, commerciaux et politiques des Etats-Unis.

Résolu, que nous croyons qu'il est temps que le Gouvernement Fédéral adopte des mesures énergiques et décisives pour déjouer et détruire un projet conçu par inimitié pour cette République, et calculé pour empêcher ses progrès et sa prospérité.

Sur motion de Mr. McCay et après dispense des règles, ces résolutions subissent leurs diverses lectures : la première et la seconde sont adoptées.

Mr. Hodge fait la motion d'effacer la troisième résolution

Mr. McCay réclame l'appel nominal sur la motion de Mr. Hodge.

L'honorable R. C Wickliffe, occupe le fauteuil.

Messrs. Hodge, Kenner, Kittridge, Palfrey et Taylor votent dans l'affirmative—5 voix.

Et Messieurs Boatner, Clifton, Defreese, Griffin, Kenner, Key, Lacoste, Lauve, Lacey, Macmurdo, McCay, Ryan, Rivers, Richardson, Scott, Lawes and Trudeau—votent dans la négative—17 voix

En conséquence, la troisième résolution est adoptée.

Messrs. Palfrey et Taylor ayant voté dans l'affirmative, demandent qu'il leur soit permis de motiver leur vote.

Cette motion prévaut, et ces messieurs donnent par écrit, les raisons suivantes:

Nous votons dans l'affirmative, parce que nous n'avons pas encore été informés officiellement, que le Gouvernement Général eut réprouvé la politique dont il est fait mention dans la troisième résolution.

Mr McCay demande que ces résolutions soient adoptées définitivement.

Mr. Hodge réclame l'appel nominal.

L'honorable R. C. Wickliffe occupe le fauteuil.

Messrs. Boatner, Clifton, Defreese, Griffin, Kenner, Key, Lacoste, Lauve, Lawes, Lacey, Macmurdo, McCay, Munday, Martel, Palfrey, Ryan, Rivers, Richardson et Trudeau votent en faveur—19 voix.

Messrs. Hodge, Kittridge, Scott et Taylor votent contre—4 voix.

En conséquence lesdites résolutions sont adoptées, et le Secrétaire-Adjoint est chargé de les soumettre au concours de la Chambre.

MESSAGE DE LA CHAMBRE.

Le messager spécial de la Chambre soumet au concours du Sénat, la résolution et les bills suivans:

Résolution requérant l'imprimeur d'Etat, d'imprimer certains exemplaires du bill concernant les écoles publiques.

Rapport des comites.

Mr Boatner, au nom du comité réunie des deux Chambres, présente le rapport suivant:

A L'HON. W. W. FARMER, LIEUTENANT-GOUVERNEUR ET PRESIDENT DU SENAT.

Le comité réuni des deux Chambres, nommé à l'effet d'examiner les cautionnements déposés par les banquiers et les Compagnies de Banque ainsi que tous les livres et tous les papiers ayant trait aux affaires de ce genre, conformément aux dispositions d'un acte intitulé:

Acte pour établir un système général de banques libres dans l'Etat de la Louisiane, ainsi que pour compter tous les billets en circulation qui ont été rendus par les dits banquiers ou par les dites Compagnies de Banque; et après les avoir comparés avec les livres, de les canceller et de les détruire après avoir donné à l'Auditeur des Comptes, un certificat à cet effet, etc, avons trouvé dans le Bureau de l'Auditeur, un lot de billets de la Banque du Sud de la Nouvelle-Orléans, de cent piastres chaque, du No 921 au No 1500 inclusivement, montant à la somme de 58,000 piastres, et marqués A. Ces billets n'avaient jamais été contresignés par L Bordelon, l'Ex-Auditeur, et n'avaient jamais été émis par la Banque. Le comité a détruit ces billets en les brûlant et a donné à l'Auditeur un certificat à cet effet. Le comité a aussi examiné avec soin les cautionnements fournis par les différentes banques lesquels sont déposés au Bureau du Trésorier de l'Etat, le comité les a trouvé justes et le comité joint à ce rapport, un tableau démontrant ces faits.

Le tout vous est respectueusement soumis.

Signé, M BOATNER,
Rapporteur du comité du Sénat.

Signé, GEO C McWHORTER,
Rapporteur du comité de la Chambre.

REPORT

OF THE

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC HEALTH.

MAJORITY REPORT.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives :

Your Committee having come to the conclusion that the focus of all the Epidemics which have visited the State being New-Orleans, it became their duty to ascertain how the City could be protected, or its health improved. To protect the City was to protect the State. To prevent the importation of diseases by foreign ships was the object of our first inquiry. This led to a long examination of the advantages and inconveniences of a system of Quarantine. The position of New Orleans is a peculiar one—lying at ninety miles from the sea, it can still be reached by the Balize, by the Lakes, and by the Atchafalaya. To guard a point and to leave the others unprotected, would be a useless expenditure of money. Thus not less than three Quarantines would be required to guard its approach from the sea.

Your Committee feared that, should a Quarantine be established at the Balize alone, the tide of emigration bound to New Orleans would reach it in passing through Mobile, and that a large portion of merchandize would take the same route, to the great detriment of the City, and also thus defeating the object of Quarantine. The Committee came to the conclusion that, should that system be recommended, the approach by the Lakes must be guarded. As to the Atchafalaya bay, no protection is required against it—vessels of small tonnage only entering it, during the winter months, and returning without touching at the city.

Besides the difficulties arising from the peculiar position of New Orleans, interests of vast magnitude are involved. Close up New Orleans, throw restrictions in the way of commerce, and what will be the consequence? Let the Mobile and Ohio Railroad be completed, and goods destined for the South West will probably reach their market by that route—whilst Western produce, now almost exclusively sent to New Orleans, will reach the sea by Mobile, to meet the drafts drawn on the West.

On the other hand, the fearful mortality of last summer had produced such vague fears for the future, and thrown so much discredit on the City, that New Orleans—just emerging from the fetters thrown upon her by bad legislation, and the apathy of her own citizens—is now threatened with general emigration, should such scenes as we witnessed last summer ever occur again.

Impressed with these views, your committee resolved to spare no efforts to arrive at a full knowledge of the history of the late epidemic, and of the preceding ones.

A circular was addressed to the physicians of New Orleans, propounding them a series of questions, and requesting their early consideration. We are sorry to be compelled to say that we did not receive from the profession that assistance which we had the right to expect.

To Drs. Cartwright, McFarland, Cenas, Fenner, Ney, Copes and Blackburn, we are entitled to able opinions, and to the Sanitary Commission we owe valuable documents. They placed in our hands the result of all their researches and labors, and were untiring in their efforts to enable us to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.

From a careful perusal of this mass of evidence, from opinions antagonistic to each other, it became a task of no little difficulty to solve the question, That the epidemic of last year was yellow fever, is admitted.—That the first cases originated in the city of New Orleans is probable. That it became modified, under peculiar circumstances, so as to assume a type unknown before, attested by some to be contagious—by others to be infectious, and by a third class to be neither—is also un undeniable fact. For your Committee, its spread through the country and on plantations, contrary to its usual habits, is due to its infectious character, or in less learned but clearer terms, to its communicability by the inhalation of a vitiated air—and without entering into a detail of the able theory of Dr. Cartwright, on the production of algoid organisms, it suffices for us to acknowledge the transportability of that vitiated atmosphere to explain the rapid spread of the last epidemic to our most remote corners. We see the disease invariably following the course of travel and spreading from the river banks gradually into the interior. We see that whenever in a small town, or in a family, a case is imported (the city of Donaldson excepted, where the population had been acclimated by a former visitation,) others rapidly follow, and, having no fixed theory to defend, we humbly acknowledge the transportability of the disease. That persons liable to it have approached and nursed the sick without having the fever, is no proof of its non-contagiousness, or non-infectiousness — those being exceptions to the general rule — and, as we believe, that it requires a certain physical predisposition in an individual exposed to the most contagious malady in order to take it. That yellow fever originated in New Orleans, we have admitted (although not certain of it)—that it became modified from causes which we cannot explain, no one will deny. And, if searching among our records, we look for the causes of this modification, we have it in Dr. Cartwright's able pamphlet, confirmed by the testimony of other physicians—ship fever—either impressed upon yellow fever its character or modified its own type. The ship Northumberland, from Liverpool, reached New Orleans early in May, with 400 emigrants on board, and we have it stated that the sick, with ship fever, in reaching the Balize, took the pallid countenance of yellow fever patients. We conclude that diseases can be modified, under peculiar circumstances and atmospheric influences.—That the ordinary yellow fever was modified by the presence of Typhus to a considerable extent, and assumed that fearful character which it took shortly after the arrival of the Northumberland.

That yellow fever proper cannot be imported and spread without the existence of an atmospheric predisposition to that disease, your committee does not doubt.—The single fact of the landing at Cadiz, in 1802, by Admiral Gravina, of five hundred patients with yellow fever, without the disease having been communicated to a single individual, would be a conclusive proof, even if unsupported by the opinions of the ablest writers on this subject.

But, under those same atmospheric circumstances, will it appear in the midst of our resident population without importation? And if it does, will it not linger slowly amongst us until fuel is thrown to it? Last summer two thousand emigrants were carried off before a single resident of New Orleans was attacked—and it is a well established fact that unacclimated persons are more or less liable to the disease, in its beginning, in proportion to the time they have resided here.

If it be once admitted that the generation or propagation of the fever requires fuel, where is the difficulty to prevent the landing of emigrants in our midst at a certain season of the year. We hold that to ship them to this port in the summer is immoral and unchristian, and that our safety, as much as theirs, requires that they should not be allowed to enter our port, where death awaits them. Compel the captain of a ship, arriving here in the summer, to land his passengers at the Quarantine ground, with provisions for their support, or quarantine such vessels until the sickly season is passed, and emigration to this port in the summer will soon cease.

If we cannot prevent yellow fever here—if it be a disease of a strictly local origin—if the cleaning of our streets, the draining of our swamps, and all sanitary measures must fail, we may at all events contract the sphere of its action by depriving it of that infectious character which it took in 1853. We are not aware that ever before this disease spread on plantations, and even in the Pine Woods—our own observations, the testimony of our oldest citizens, confirm us in the belief that prior to last summer our country parishes (villages excepted) have enjoyed a complete exemption from it. To attempt to explain it by asserting that the spread of emigrants in the country was its cause, would only prove the contagiousness of the fever. Never were foreigners before liable to it in the pure atmosphere breathed on our plantations, nor were they ever before capable of communicating the disease there, when they had brought the seed in their system.

The ship Augusta arrived here on the 17th of May last. The ten or twelve first cases are admitted to have originated among the crew. One or two cases are alleged to have taken place shortly after her arrival in another part of the city, with no communication with the ship; but it is not impossible that these, however much resembling yellow fever, may have arisen from other causes. Your committee does not say that the disease was imported by her, but state the facts, and leave to others to draw inferences.

Yellow fever is not the only scourge which has depopulated our State. Typhus, small pox, measles, cholera, are frequent visitors, and to check them is not less important than to arrest the ravages of yellow fever. How far quarantine can be a protection against them, experience alone can demonstrate. It has failed in Europe against Cholera—nor have military cordons been more successful. To attempt to prevent the spread of a purely epidemical disease in countries contiguous to each other, where the vitiated atmosphere is carried from one point to another by every gust of wind, would be tantamount to an attempt to arrest the clouds themselves in their flight. That the same result would be met with here under the same circumstances, is highly probable; but can that vitiated air cross the thousands of miles that separate us from Europe without being altered? unless confined in the close, ill-ventilated hull of a ship, where it maintains its virulence by constant propagation.

Dr. Cartwright states that in more than one hundred instances Cholera has been checked on plantations by removal of the negroes, with their bedding and clothing, in the open air. Could not the same results be attained by following the same precautions with emigrant ships?

Typhus, measles and small pox, are admitted to be of infectious character, and we believe that there is little doubt that those diseases can be propagated, if not by patients affected by them, at all events, by their bedding and clothing, saturated with their impure emanations, confined in the close hull of a ship. The mortality proceeding from those causes alone, would justify the system we recommend.

The opinions of the medical men of New Orleans cannot be a guide for us, because few deemed the subject worthy of their consideration, and those, for whose kind assistance we are indebted for what information we have, do not agree together.

Although the protection afforded by Quarantine inspires less confidence than it formerly did abroad, we still find our eastern neighbors enjoying the benefits of an uninterrupted good health, and from their adhering to a system considered by many as exploded; we conclude that they think it advantageous and necessary.

European writers may well attack a system useless to them. The tide of emigration flows not from us to them, but from them to us. They need no regulations to protect them from the introduction of diseases generated on board of ill ventilated ships, where living beings are packed so closely that the air which they breathe is soon deprived of a portion of its oxygen, and becomes contaminated by the emanations of accumulated bodies. They need no protection against diseases constantly generated in the damp cellars inhabited by their half-starved and half-clothed population. No wonder that their medical men have protested against a useless and expensive burthen. But how different is our position! Our balmy climate, our rich soil, our free institutions, our extended arms to the oppressed of all the world, are more than sufficient attraction. Thousands of emigrants reach our port daily, and from here diverge in every direction. But in what state do they arrive, after a passage of from fifty to seventy days, during which their constitutions have been undermined by bad diet, bad water and foul air? The records of the Charity Hospital and the Sexton's graves alone can tell. If they do not bring with them, in their soiled garments, all the diseases which they have contracted at sea or imported from home, they are, at least, in the condition required to generate or propagate them all.

Let them fall in our midst during the damp days of December, under the medicinal influence of Mississippi water, with a few sporadic cases of cholera amongst us; or during the warm days of August, with every atmospheric predisposition to yellow fever, and what will be the consequence?

A fearful epidemic of either kind.

Emigration is to New Orleans what the Nile is to the Egyptians. Left to itself, it is a torrent whose turbid waters carry death and destruction—properly directed and dammed up, it is a source of wealth and prosperity.

Independent of the reasons assigned in this report, your committee thinks that some consideration is due to the wishes of the great majority of our constituents.

And should a system of Quarantine have no other effect than to restore confidence and prove to our neighbors our firm intention of eradicating the evil, we would not hesitate in recommending it. We owe to the States with whom we are in daily intercourse, in return for their produce liberally forwarded, something more than mere abstract theories. We have numerous competitors for the rich trade of the Mississippi valley, and experience has already taught us that our market is not the only one they can reach. New Orleans has arrived at a critical crisis, and rather than shut our eyes and fold our arms, we prefer to meet it boldly. From all points railroads are stretching their iron arms to wrest from her her golden harvest, and should another epidemic visit us before the memory of the last is effaced, her prosperity would receive a severe check. It behooves the enlightened citizens of New Orleans and her authorities, to join with us, and by due enforcement of proper sanitary regulations, assist us in restoring her wonted reputation for health.

By the documents annexed it will be seen that the Chamber of Commerce, in answer to our enquiries, has nobly met the issue, and declared that Quarantine would be no obstruction to commerce and of great benefit to the city—thus supporting our position and setting at naught all objections to the system on that score.

In a few days the Sanitary Commission, of New Orleans, will present a report, joining in our conclusions.

Your committee recommend a system of Quarantine, which, whilst it will tend to promote the public health of the State, will throw as little restrictions as possible in the way of commerce.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 9, 1854.

To the Hon. A. TRUDEAU, Chairman,
J. A. BRAUD,
Special Committee of the Senate on the Health of the State.

The undersigned, Committee of the Chamber of Commerce of this city, appointed to reply to your communication of the 23d January, beg respectfully to say that they have taken into consideration your two querries:

"1st, What would be the effect of a system of Quarantine on the commerce and prosperity of the city of New Orleans, should its health be thereby improved?"

"2d, What point on the river would you recommend as a proper Quarantine Station?"

To the first question, we beg to reply, that, considering life and health paramount to everything, any course that may be adopted for their safety, must prove beneficial to the prosperity of the city and to its commerce; and further, we take occasion to express our opinion that the establishment of a strict quarantine would, under existing circumstances, prove of immense benefit to the general prosperity of our city, and would not injure its commerce.

To the second question, we beg to reply, that a quarantine station on the river below the city, should be at least forty miles distant, so as to prevent any communication, by land or water, with the city, except such as may be officially established, and we further suggest that a station should be located at the Rigolets, and such other points as might be necessary upon the various approaches to the city.

Respectfully submitted,

THOS. S. ELDER, Chairman,
LOGAN McKNIGHT,
CHAS. M. WATERMAN,
ML. MUSSON,
G. A. FOSDICK.
Committee.

SIR: The undersigned, members of the Senate's Committee, relying upon the assistance of the profession in New Orleans, and desirous of ascertaining the advantages and necessity of a system of quarantine, beg leave to submit to your early consideration the following questions:

1. Was the epidemic of last summer contagious? It was infectious.

2. Was it imported into New Orleans? I believe it was.

3. Did not the disease make its first appearance among the shipping? I think so.

4. To what cause do you attribute its spread through the country? Intercourse with New Orleans and other towns. *

5. If yellow fever is not contagious, as asserted by most all members of the Faculty, does it ever become so under peculiar circumstances? I do not doubt it.

6. At what date in 1853 was the first arrival of a ship into the port of New Orleans with yellow fever on board? Available records show this.

7. At what date was the first undoubted case of death from yellow fever in the city of New Orleans in 1853? I only know from hospital and other reports: said to be in the week ending 28th May.

8. Was not the cholera imported into New Orleans, by foreign ships, at each and every appearance it made here? I believe it was, though this is not quite so plain as in case of yellow fever.

---

* Abundant evidences exist of its transmissibility from one diseased town to another, by persons and by fomites.

Digitized by Google

9. What are the diseases most commonly introduced by the shipping? Ship fever, cholera and yellow fever, at this port.

10. Why are the foreign sea ports liable to be the seats of contagious disorders? Because they are foci of commerce and travel.

11. How do you explain the disappearance of the plague at Marseilles, with frequent cases at the Lazaretto? As in other similar cases: the protection of a judicious quarantine affords the explanation.

12. Has the quarantine system been effective in preventing the importation of diseases liable to be imported by emigrants? I think it has shown itself so in our great Eastern seaports and in Europe.

13. At what distance from the city should the quarantine ground be located? In an air line, not less than ten miles.

Answer at the Mayor's Office

Your obedient servants,

A. TRUDEAU, Chairman.
J. A. BRAUD.
E. E. KITTRIDGE.

U. S. MARINE HOSPITAL,
Natchez, 18th February, 1854.

To the Chairman of "Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives on Public Health," in session at Baton Rouge (La.)

HON. SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of questions proposed by your honorable Committee to the physicians of New Orleans on the subject of epidemic diseases and quarantine regulations. Prompted by deference to your noble object and the common impulses of humanity, I respectfully proceed to answer such of your thirteen interrogatories as my sphere of observation and practice may justify.

To the first and second questions, "Was the epidemic of last summer contagious; and was it imported into New Orleans?" I give decided and affirmative answers.

To the third question, respecting the priority of its appearance among the shipping, the local medical faculty of New Orleans are best qualified to give the answer.

To the fourth question, "To what cause do you attribute its spread through the country?" I answer: That, as the yellow fever, whenever it has come under my observation, has proved to be both contagious and infectious, the natural transmission and transfusion of the disease through the country, are effected by contact with diseased individuals, or by means of fomites contained in goods and merchandize that may be boxed or baled in the atmosphere of infected districts. Every case that occurred on the river above or below Natchez, or in the environs and interior, which fell under my observation or knowledge, could be traced indisputably to actual communication and contact with Natchez, New Orleans, or infected families and districts. There was not a single exception to this fact; and my medical experience leads me to the conclusion that the time of incubation required for maturing and developing the latent influences or seeds of epidemic disease varies from seven to fourteen days; after the expiration of which the insidious influences, if any were present, became inoperative to produce disease. As far as fell under my personal observation, which embraced a wide extent of practice, the epidemic of last summer was the veritable yellow fever, recognized and identified beyond all dispute by the leading invariable phenomena of that dreaded and inveterate disease.

Respecting the fifth question, I merely remark that it is by no means true that most all of the medical faculty, including those of all countries, are non-contagionists.—There are doubtless as much learning and medical science arrayed on the affirmative as on the negative side of the question. It is somewhat remarkable that, in this country, the most determined and obstinate denials of the contagious nature of yellow fever, generally come from members of the medical profession resident in large commercial marts, where any restriction upon direct and uninterrupted commerce is regarded with extreme jealousy and indignation, while the medical faculty of the State of Mississippi are nearly unanimous in the belief of the contagious and infectious character of yellow fever; and the Legislature, soon after the admission of the State into the Union, passed an energetic law, still in force, to authorize quarantines against the annual importation of yellow fever from New Orleans on the Eastern bank of the Mississippi, as high as the mouth of the Yazoo River. It is possible that the force of popular sentiment in large commercial cities, might have a tendency to obscure and warp medical acumen and judgment.

To the sixth and seventh questions.—"When did boats arrive at Natchez with yellow fever cases on board, and was the date of the first undoubted death from that disease in the city last summer?" I respond: I began to receive patients infected with yellow fever from the New Orleans boats, of that class of persons claiming the privileges of Marine Hospital treatment, during the latter part of July. Of such seamen and boatmen about forty were received in all, of which cases only nine terminated fatally. The first undoubted case of yellow fever resulting also in death, which occurred in Natchez during the year 1853, was that of Col. Pearsall, who came direct from New Orleans, was taken sick at the Mansion House, July 13th, and died July 17th. Two bar-keepers of the Mansion House, who had been in contact with Col. Pearsall, were taken down with epidemic shortly after his death. From July 13th, until sometime in the following December, cases of yellow fever occurred in Natchez and its environs, making the extraordinary term of the epidemic to reach five months, about three months longer than was ever before the term of the contagion in Natchez. To this unusual length of disease, as well as to the popular panic which scattered the population of the city through the adjacent country, may fairly be ascribed the prevalence and fatal ravages the infection in families and localities never before invaded by the pestilence.

In answer to the eighth and ninth questions, I believe the cholera was introduced into New Orleans by shipping, by which means it was first imported upon this continent; and I also believe that the diseases most commonly introduced by foreign shipping, and which have power to become epidemics, are yellow fever, cholera and ship-fever; the first becoming epidemic only in certain latitudes and atmospheric temperatures, and the two last anywhere, without reference to season, climate or temperature.

The tenth question of the specific localities capable of originating or being "the seats of contagious disorders," I can only answer by remarking that the cholera claims an Asiatic origin; the yellow fever is undoubtedly of African, West Indian and other tropical climates, generated in the hottest season of the year, and transmissible, by its infectious and contagious qualities, to other places where it would never have originated.

The eleventh question, respecting Marseilles, I lack the reliable data to answer.

To the twelfth and thirteenth questions, I would respectfully respond: That the quarantine regulations, authorised by the laws of Mississippi, strictly enforced whenever the yellow fever was declared an epidemic in New Orleans, saved Natchez from that dreadful scourge during a period of more than than twelve years, from the year 1839 to 1853; while unrestrained communication with New Orleans, every fever year, resulted in cases of the disease in towns higher up the river than Natchez. In the year 1847, the New Orleans steamers carried the disease to the citizens of Rodney, Grand Gulf and Vicksburg, which compelled the citizens of Natchez to quarantine against steamers descending, having touched at those places, as well as those ascending, coming direct from New Orleans.

The distance of a quarantine station from New Orleans, should be sufficient to secure the safe detention of subject and marchandize, so as to render access from a dense population difficult: say as low down as Fort Jackson, together with strict preventive at the Lake Avenues to the city, to prevent the secret arrival of infected foreigners or passengers.

Feeling solemnly assured, Hon. Sir, that the Legislature of your noble State is clothed with power, at a small outlay of cost and energy, to close the gates of the lower vale of the Mississippi forever against the approaches of the "scourge of the tropics," I yet scarce need add my humble voice to the more solemn and eloquent language that seems to issue from ten thousand new made graves in your own commercial emporium, mingled with tones of bereavement and mourning from thousands of families in the State you represent, from the Balize to Lake Providence.

Honorable Sir and Gentlemen,
I remain your obt. servt.,
L. P. BLACKBURN,
Physician and Surgeon of Natchez Marine Hospital.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Charleston City Council, December 20th, 1853.

Alderman Hume, from the Special Committee to whom was referred the resolution of inquiry "into the source and origin of Yellow Fever, as it has occasionally prevailed in Charleston, and to report upon such means of prevention, or exclusion, as may seem worthy of adoption, in order to obviate its future occurrence," having fully deliberated, studied and inquired into all its details, made the following report, which was received as information, and ordered to be published:

That its first appearance in Charleston was in the year 1699, and it made fifteen subsequent visitations to the year 1796, at long and short irregular periods of time intervening, apparently following no law of weather, viz: 1699, 1703, 1728, 1732, 1739, 1745, 1748, 1753, 1755, 1792, 1794, 1795, 1796, 1797, 1799. From 1799 to the present period, it has made eighteen visitations, with similar irregularity, viz: 1800, 1802, 1804, 1807, 1812, 1817, 1819, 1824, 1825, 1828, 1830, 1834, 1835, 1838, 1839, 1843, 1849, 1852, thus presenting to our view the same picture that our ancestors contemplated, thus going through the same phases of phenomena, with the same pertinacity, and equally defying the skill and care of preceding and succeeding generation. Shall modern energy quail before this monster, or shall we resolve to rise above the contingencies that give it birth? Shall we receive and worship it as a monarch, or shall we expel it as a tyrant? Our safety demands the latter; and may success attend our laudable endeavors to accomplish our sacred purpose.

The practice of men is always derived from their precepts, and however erroneous the practice may appear, if is in accordance with long established precept, it is deemed just and proper. The truth of a precept is rarely questioned. Popular prejudices, errors and ignorances prevail in every department of knowledge, and truth is frequently suffocated at its birth by the incumbent mass of error and superstition. It has been maintained by the medical faculty of this city since 1800, that the yellow fever takes its origin in Charleston from causes existing within the same, under the influence of peculiar conditions of the atmosphere; that it is capable of self-production, whenever these conditions exist. Similar to bilious fever in the country, whenever vegetation, putrefaction and temperature acquire a certain development. This may be an analogy for explanation, but it is by no means a proof of identity of cause; for the results differ in the remarkable condition of time and regularity. The natural causes of country fever exist every season, and produce their effect every year. Not so with yellow fever; we have every variety of irregularity, indicating no permanent cause, dependent upon the regularity of seasons; its time of origin has varied from May to October, and its interegna from thirty-three, ten, five, three and two years, to each successive year, no corresponding variation having ever taken place in our climate, adequate to explain these anomalies.

If we compare the meteorological details of individual years with each other, we will not find that all the healthy years are alike, or are the unhealthy; nor are the healthy always unlike the unhealthy; 1845 and 1846 differ materially, yet they were both healthy, 1845 and 1852 differ but little, yet one was healthy and the other unhealthy; 1849 and 1853 are similar (except meteorologically 1853 should have been more productive of disease than 1849,) yet 1849 was unhealthy while 1853 was healthy. Such comparisons tend much to weaken our faith in the influence of the peculiar (because unknown) condition of the atmosphere. It is evident there must be some disturbing cause occasionally introduced to produce the observed irregularity, and from the irregularity of that irregularity, the disturbing cause cannot be directed by a natural agent. When we compare 1849 with 1853, we see a strong resemblance. 1849 is alleged to have produced the fever, we presume, by its peculiar meteorological condition; if so, 1853 should have been equally, if not more prolific in producing the same evil: but as it was not, the meteorological condition of 1849 must have been equally innocent, or the same conditions are capable of producing opposite results, a position not generally admitted by philosophers.

In the similarity between the origin of country and yellow fever, we must not omit the emanations from the soils, which are known to issue, both in town and country, and no doubt play an important part in the development of disease. These emanations should materially differ, the purely vegetable productions of the country soil, offer a strong contrast with the animo-vegetable of the city, both in quantity and quality. Yet the endemic of the country is every year present, and the alleged endemic of the city is frequently absent. The introduction and consumption of nearly equal quantities of animal and vegetable matter, each successive year, by the inhabitants, should deposit beneath the surface equal quantities of relics for future decomposition; yet these equal quantities do not produce the same effects every year, showing satisfactorily that the regular emanations from our soil cannot produce the irregularities of our disease. We have no disposition to depreciate the efficacy of medical police to accomplish subordinate purposes, but to rely upon it exclusively to eradicate our disease would be vain. Equally vain would it be to believe that the great care taken by those who have the charge of the medical police of the city during the last summer was the cause of the fever's absence. To no one single cause can we justly attribute an effect which observation proves to belong to many causes. Care and caution should be extended to all suspected causes, and until this principle is fully acted on, we may dispair of success. A rigid police to secure cleanliness and perfect drainage is indispensable. Free ventilation of houses, and an avoidance of excessive population in small premises, is also necessary, with all the other precautions which experience has shown to be essential to the preservation of health in the most favored cities.

The exemption of Charleston from yellow fever during the last summer, is a subject of astonishment to all observers. That the season was unpropitious to health, the ravages of the fever on the South-western waters and other regions, fully exhibit. That we shared that general diffusion of unpropitious atmosphere, must be admitted, and our meteorological instruments testify to the same. yet the devouring angel spared our city.—Was it that he came and found not a congenial atmosphere and soil? or did he not visit our city to test our weakness? We apprehend the latter, for we can find no traces of his footsteps within our limits. It is true that two attempts were made by the fever to invade our city, but it was rudely and unceremoniously repelled, and expelled on both occasions. As action was prompt, the history is short. Capt. P., of the Ellen Goldsborough, arrived from Baltimore, on 30th August, sickened on the 4th September, was sent to the Marine Hospital on the 6th was declared to have yellow fever, and on the 7th was sent to the Lazaretto, where he died on the 10th. On the 23d September, Capt. P., of the Barkelew, was reported under similar circumstances, and was immediately sent to the Lazaretto, where he also died. Thus ended both attempts of invasion, and we may here remark that it is the first instance of Jacksonism, in a matter of this kind, ever undertaken by a mayor to preserve the public health, and we have every reason to believe that to this prompt and decided action the health of the city is to be attributed. It is impossible now to say what might have been the result, if these vigorous measures had not been adopted but we all know what has been the result when they have been neglected.

Foreign importation is probably the perturbating cause of all the irregularities that have characterized the history of yellow fever in our city, and to this cause we propose to direct attention, and to found a course of action commensurate with its importance. We are fully aware that on this point we now have the full sanction of the Medical Society of South Carolina which has been hitherto withheld, and they now abjure the dangerous doctrine "that the rigid enforcement of the quarantine laws was by no means necessary on account of yellow fever." Dr. David Ramsay, in the year 1800, writes to Dr. Miller, of New York, that "the disputes about the origin of yellow fever, which have agitated the Northern States, have never existed in Charleston.—There is but one opinion among the physicians and inhabitants, and that is, that the disease was neither imported nor contagious." Now the fruits of those disputes in the Northern States have been the proof that the fever was imported, and was contingently contagious, and on these creeds they have succeeded in excluding it from their cities for the last thirty years; while we, who believed otherwise, have been nearly destroyed by its ravages in the same period. Do not the results show which is the true creed, and can there be any difficulty in explaining the revolution which has taken place in the opinions of the medical faculty of our city.—They have collected facts and arrayed them against doctrines. They have read on the same day, Dr. Jewell's report of the introduction of yellow fever into a part of Philadelphia from the bark Mandarin from Cienfugos, Cuba, and its subsequent extension by persons who visited the vessel, or places where the disease prevailed, and the flimsy and imaginative arguments composed by Dr. Rush, in the year 1802, when he recanted certain errors into which, he says, he was led by Dr. John Lining, of our city, Now Dr. Lining was a true observer, had no doctrines to maintain, and no opposition to combat; he knew nothing of the unity of disease, and described the yellow fever as he saw it in the year 1748. As the work is scarce, not easily accessible, and apropos to our present purpose, we make no apology for presenting an extract. It is a letter containing "a description of the American Yellow Fever, from Dr. John Lining, physician of Charleston, in South Carolina, to Dr. Robert Whytt, professor of medicine in the University of Edinburg," dated Dec. 14th 1753.

"This fever does not seem to take its origin from any particular constitution of the weather, independent of infectious miasmata, as Dr. Warren (of Barbadoes, West Indies, page 8) has formerly well observed. For within these twenty-five years, it has only been four times epidemical in this town, namely, in the autumns of the years 1732, 1739, 1745 and 1748, though none of these (excepting that of 1739, whose summer and autumn were remarkably rainy) were either warmer or more rainy, (and some of them less so) than the summers and autumns were in several other years in which we had not one instance of any one being seized with this fever, which is contrary to what would probably have happened if particular constitutions of the weather were productive of it without infectious miasmata. But that this is really an infectious disease seems plain, not only from this, that almost all the nurses catched it, and died of it, but likewise as soon as it appeared in town, it soon invaded new comers, those who never had the disease before, and country people when they came to town, while those who remained in the country escaped it, as likewise did those who had formerly felt its dire effects, though they walked about the town, visited the sick in all the different stadia of the disease, and attended the funerals of those who died of it. And, lastly, whenever the disease appeared here, it was easily traced to some persons who had lately arrived from some of the West India Islands, where it was epidemical. Although the infection was spread with great celerity through the town, yet if any from the country received it in town, and sickened on their return home, the infection spread no further, not even so much as to one in the same house."

The truthfulness of this picture we can all attest, except, perhaps, we have neglected to trace it easily to some persons who had lately arrived from some of the West Indian Islands. What was easy for Dr. Lining to do in the village of Charlestown, is not now so easy to accomplish in the city of Charleston.

Yet, nevertheless, we shall see in the sequel that this search has been made, and the assertion of Dr. Lining fully corroborated. Dr. Lining was born in 1708, and was sufficiently mature in 1753 to think, observe and judge for himself.

Dr. John Moultrie, of this city, a cotemporary of Dr. Lining, published his "Dissertatio medica inauguralis de Febre maligna biliosa Americæ," in the year 1749, when he graduated. It is alleged that he advocated a doctrine opposed to that of Dr. Lining, but on reading the article we do not see that he does more than express his belief, as any other young graduate would do who had to write a thesis upon what he had scarcely seen, for he was not in Charleston in 1748, and could scarcely have commenced the study of medicine in 1745, when the fever prevailed. But we will let him speak for himself, and offer no apology for rooting out of the dust what few have ever seen, and what by tradition has often been misquoted. The translation is by a professed linguist and purports to be literal, and expressive of the author's views. There are but two paragraphs that bear on our subject, and are to be found on the 9th page of the original edition of Edinburgh, 1749.:

"Almost every one is persuaded that this disease is contagious. All, doubtless, are liable to this disease where it prevails, since they are surrounded by and breathe the same air. From the bodies of the sick, also, acrid and semi-putrid exhalations are continually escaping, which soon affect the air of the place in which the sick man lies, and which no less dangerous for the well than for the sick to inhale. I have seen many, however, who have sat day after day by the bedside of those suffering from this disease, who, by using precautions against the infected atmosphere, and avoiding much exercise, have escaped unharmed."

Dr. Moultrie continues: "I cannot believe with others that this disease is propagated from one place to another by contagion, unless the atmosphere is in a fit state to produce it. In the year 1745 this disease prevailed to a very great extent in South Carolina, when it was very evident that contagion from some other place had no influence in producing it. For the first person seized with the disease that year was a sailor, who having been drunk for two or three days in succession, afterwards fell ill of this fever, and the heat continuing excessive during the month, the fever spread widely throughout the city of Charleston. For when the weather is very hot there is danger lest an ordinary ardent fever should change into this disease of a more violent character, and I very little doubt that this is also occasioned by improper remedies and bad treatment. — Nay, if I am not mistaken, I have myself seen some such cases." It appears that Dr. Moultrie did not inquire from whence the sailor came, and it is possible that he was one of those persons, easily traced by Dr. Lining, as coming from some of the West Indian Islands.

From the above extract it is apparent that the opinion of the medical faculty in 1800 was not derived from Drs. Lining and Moultrie. We have no record that they ever attempted to trace the first cases to West India vessels. They seemed to assume that Charleston was within the zone of self-generating yellow fever, like the Havana, and all opinions to the contrary were heresy and schism. The conclusion seems to be founded on the observation that when the fever was carried into the country it extended no further, hence was not contagious, and could not have been brought into Charleston from the West Indies, and subsequently extend itself by contagion; but it did extend by some other means, which appears now to be the still further vitiation of an impure atmosphere by the addition of another unknown element. The doctrine of a contingent contagion, or, more properly, a contingent infection, will embrace all the phenomena observed. It implies that the atmosphere of crowded filthy cities is necessarily impure, but contains no element capable of producing yellow fever, but if a vessel arrives from a yellow fever port, with or without yellow fever cases on board, another element is added to the atmosphere of the city, which renders it capable of producing the disease. It is as a leaven which operates a new kind of fermentation, and results in a new production. Its effects are limited to the atmosphere of the city, hence the phenomena observed. Had the atmosphere been originally pure, the disease could not have extended, as is observed in the pure atmosphere of the country. This doctrine plainly indicates the object which a wise government should endeavor to effect, viz: to keep the atmosphere of the city as pure as possible, by removing filth, draining, ventilating and covering the surface of the earth. 2d, Excluding vessels and passengers from infected ports by a rigid and effectual quarantine, sufficiently comprehensive to embrace all the means of possible entry. Should the restrictions on the commerce of the West Indies by quarantine amount to a suspension of the whole trade for six months each year, the evils to the city will be less than it now suffers from the annual apprehension of the fever; and the pecuniary loss of a hundred years by the quarantine establishment cannot equal the ruin and desolation of a single season of the pestilence. Fortunately the most effectual quarantine need not do more than interrupt the landing of cargoes for a few days, and as all vessels will be subjected to the same delay, the equality of competition remains undisturbed. If the imposed restrictions should add to the value of the imported article, it is evident that the consumer suffers this extra expense, but we doubt not but that our citizens are willing to pay the difference, and consume the article in health and happiness. Who can calculate the price of health; and is the health of the city to be placed in competition with a few cargoes of sugar and molasses, introduced without care or caution, so as to afford a luxury to our people at the least possible expense of money, and at the greatest cost of human life. In modern times the growth of cities depends upon the increase of inhabitants, the value of city property depends upon the same, and the quantity of merchandise imported depends upon the number of consumers; hence the first act of a good government should be to increase its population, and with that comes all the other sources of wealth. To increase a population we must preserve them in health by all the sanitary means that wisdom has placed in our hands, and we must defend them against the importation of diseases endemic to other climes and exotic to our own. That yellow fever is one of this class we have every reason to believe. Its capability of introduction into other countries is admitted by all who have carefully examined its history with unbiassed minds, but still commercial interests induce many to believe that the matter is not fully established. The yellow fever, as an epidemic, has never been introduced into England; quarantines there are useless; hence the quarantines of other countries are injurious to British commerce, and the British Government denies the necessity of them, and strives to prove their inutility. The last and most memorable case of an attempt to surpass the truth was the introduction of the yellow fever into the Island of Benavista, one of the Cape de Verds, by the British steamer Eclair. The government sent Dr. McWilliam to investigate the matter. On his return, his report was unfavorable to the government views on the subject. Dr. King was then sent, who returned with opposite views. Although he could not disprove the facts of Dr. McWilliam, he gave them a different construction, and thus the government was enabled to maintain the integrity of its original creed. (See British and Foreign Medical Chir. Review.)

The facts of the case were that the Eclair contracted the yellow fever in Africa, visited this Island, landed the crew, and remained three weeks. The laborers employed in cleaning the ship, and the guard who watched over the sick, were the first to take the disease, which subsequently extended over the Island. The Island had been healthy for fifty years, and the disease was the same as that brought by the ship's crew. Whether it was contagion or infection, matters but little; the mortality was great, and the yellow fever was thus introduced.

The recent introduction of the yellow fever into a part of Philadelphia by the bark Mandarin, from Cienfuegos, is a fact too well authenticated to be disproved. The extension of the disease from New Orleans along the course of the Mississippi, tells a tale for itself; and if the Commission in New Orleans should succeed in proving its domestic origin in that city, it will not be able to deny its extension to other neighboring points, by transmission or other transportation.

To assert the domestic origin of yellow fever in Charleston, requires as much positive information as to assert its foreign origin; yet we have never been favored with the exposition of the facts. We have had denials on the other side, that "the transmission of the fever is neither tenable as a fact, nor in accordance with the opinions of a great majority of the medical profession in this country;" and that it has its origin, not from contagion, derivable from cases imported, but from local and general causes." From what observations, or from what facts, these results were drawn, we are yet to learn, and we rejoice to believe that we never will, for the Medical Society has abandoned the conclusions.

The absence of the fever from our city last summer, is still a matter of general onishment to all observers. Why should New Orleans be depopulated, and Charleston preserve its health? It is a point which has not escaped the examination of your Committee. All local and general causes remained the same, but the most minute inquiry cannot discover the introduction of a case from abroad. No drunken sailor brought the germ of disease to infect our atmosphere. No unclean vessel lay at our wharves to be visited by foreign cigar merchants, to inhale the disease, and return to their shops to sicken and to die. No infected ship sent her crew to the Marine Hospital, in fact, excepting the cases already referred to, as sent to the Lazaretto, the fever did not enter our city, and to this cause probably we are indebted for the preservation of the health of the city. These negative facts become more prominent and valuable when contrasted with others of a more positive nature. The investigation of cases introduced into our city in previous years, is not so easy as some may imagine. The impression of domestic origin was formerly so prevalent, that no one attempted to trace the origin of any first case. Hence we have only fragments of knowledge, collected with some labor, and reminiscences of what "now you speak of it, I remember." It is a lamentable fact, that notwithstanding the pertinacity with which the older medical men adhered to the belief of its domestic origin in each year, they have left no proof that such was its origin, nor have they given any proofs that it was not imported. This remains yet to be done.

Charleston was exempt from epidemic yellow fever from 1807 to 1817. During the interval of these years, the embargo, non-intercourse and war occurred, and West Indian commerce was suspended. In 1816 it was renewed, and the fever prevailed in 1817. This may be esteemed a casual concurrence, and the return of fever in 1817, with the revival of the trade, may be also a casual concurrence. All we can now gather is, that the first city case was in Lynch's lane; how it got there no one can say. On the 3d of August three deaths are reported in the city; and on the 28th of July we find the record of the first case in the Marine Hospital. This predilection of the fever for sailors is at least curious, if it is not instructive. From Lynch's lane it extended to most parts of the city. Beaufort at this time was healthy, and its inhabitants rejoiced that they were removed from the scene of pestilence. On one fatal day Capt. Bythwood sailed into their harbor from Charleston; two days after one of his passengers complained of sickness, and was placed under the charge of a colored nurse. The fever was soon characterized; the patient died; the nurse was the next taken; she died: then some of her family; and from this point the fever extended over Beaufort, and destroyed one-sixth of its inhabitants. These facts are on the authority of the clergymen of Beaufort, who officiated on the melancholy occasions which this unfortunate arrival produced. Had the belief of a contingent contagion existed in Beaufort, this man would have been remanded to the vessel, the vessel would have been removed to a distance, and the town might have escaped the calamity which subsequently befell it.

In 1838 the Lord Glenelg, British bark, arrived from Demarara on the 4th July, with yellow fever cases on board, and lay at Boyce & Co's wharf. The Medora, from Liverpool, lay at Magwood's wharf, about one hundred and twenty yards north. The first case in the city this year was the wife of the steward of the Medora, who frequently visited her husband in the ship, and the first case in the Marine Hospital was a seaman from the Medora. What intercommunication took place between the two ships is not known. The steward's wife (Mrs. Martin) resided on East Bay, opposite to Hard Alley. (Pritchard and Strobel.) It is important to notice that the cases of the Medora were one month after the arrival of the Lord Glenelg, being on the 1st and 4th August, a circumstance observed in many other instances, and too frequent, to be considered a proof, that the fever was derived from some local and general cause, and not from the infected vessel. It is needless to say more of the fever of 1838 than that there were 353 deaths, and such was its origin.

Of the origin of yellow fever in 1849 we have more detailed accounts, for which we are indebted to the industry and zeal of the late Dr. B. B. Strobel, and is remarkable as the first instance of a rebellion against the established creed of our physicians and a determination to investigate and publish the truth as it was seen. This season was rich in West Indian commerce, not fewer than thirty-six vessels arrived in the months of May, June and July, each of which might have been the means of importing the fever.

On the 7th June the Burmah arrived from Havana, and immediately sent three yellow fever cases to the Marine Hospital, of which Dr. Strobel was physician. She lost her cook in Havana, and one seaman on the voyage; hence the source of the disease is unquestionable. On the 17th June, three cases were brought in by the Leonora from Boston; one from the Chatham from Boston; one from the Elisabeth Bruce from

New York, all of yellow fever. A circumstance so remarkable could not escape attention. These fevers could not have been brought from Boston and New York, nor could they have been produced by local and general causes in Charleston, for there was no fever in the city, and all the vessels lay in the stream. On examination it was observed that these four vessels, in company with two others from the West Indies, viz: the Medora and Copia, lay together in the stream for several days; what intercommunicatons took place is not now known, or whether any did; suffice it to say, that the same disease prevailed in all, and it is reasonable to conclude, for want of a better explanation, that the disease was transferred from the infected vessels to the sound. On the admission of other cases into the Hospital from presumed sound ships, that is, ships from Northern ports, the Doctor invariably observed that they lay in proximity with West India vessels, either in the stream or at the wharves. The cases were so multiplied that accident could no longer account for the coincidence, and the infected vessels were so numerous that there was scarcely a wharf uninfected by them. A few examples will suffice to demonstrate this fact: Grafton, Boyce's wharf, Catharine infected; Thomas Bennett, Commercial wharves, Alliott, infected; John Anderson, Catharine, infected; Charles Carroll, Medora, infected; Silas Richards, Bridgton, Lancet, and Almendares, infected; Denmark, Alliott and Burmah, infected; H. Allen, J. C. Calhoun and Delaware, infected For particulars we refer to the essay of Dr. Strobel.

"On the 26th June, Samuel Humphreys came in the Hospital from a boarding-house in Market street, kept by Jacobs. He arrived on the 19th of June from Havana in the Caspian, and was landed in the city before taking sick. The Caspian proceeded to New York. This was the first case in the city," and was probably the origin of the cases that subsequently occurred in Market street; for "on the 7th of July, Beltzung took sick at the house of Baptiste, four to six doors west of Jacobs, and on the same side of the street." And Dr. Mackey reported many cases received in the Poor House, as coming from this neighborhood. After this, the fever became general. The question, for consideration in view of the cases narrated by Dr. S. are: Did the West Indian vessels infect the Northern vessels, or did the city infect them? Did the West Indian vessels introduce the disease into the city, or did the city produce it by virtue of general and local causes? Did the inhabitants who visited the infected vessels' wharves take the disease, and return to their homes to sicken and to die, or did the disease proceed from the premises of each patient? The priority of the disease in the vessels seems to settle the matter beyond a doubt. For the cases in the Northern ships occurred nearly one month before the cases in the city, and the time of one month may have been requisite to complete the incorporation of the West India infection, with the Charleston atmospheric impurities. The same fact was observed in the Boa Vista infection; one month elapsed before the disease assumed an epidemic form, and two months before it became general. Many similar cases may be reported where even more than one month expired before the epidemic became general. The work of Dr. Strobel contains a great many facts illustrating the introduction of the fever of 1839 into Charleston, and it is folly to suppose that it is a work purely of the imagination, unfounded on observed facts.

The fever of 1843 will be remembered as invading a portion of Charleston Neck, in the vicinity of Wolfe and Reid streets, and proving fatal, among others, to a distinguished citizen, who had lately removed to the city, and whose path to his residence passed through the infected district. We allude to Albert Rhett, Esq. Dr. Wragg reports "the city and suburbs remarkably healthy until the latter part of September, when a violent epidemic of yellow fever began on the Neck." The first case admitted to be yellow fever occurred on the 14th of September, (Dr. Toomer) on the south-west corner of Wolfe and Meeting streets. The cause, of course, was referred to general and local conditions of the climate and soil. Heavy showers of rain had fallen at the end of August, and a hot sun had succeeded. There were present, perhaps, all the elements to constitute a bad atmosphere, such as had previously been engendered in this neighborhood, without producing epidemic yellow fever; but the specific modifying agent had probably been previously absent, but was present on this occasion, and produced the peculiar modification of fever which characterised the season. The following extracts of a letter from Mr. R. R. Hughes may throw some light on the origin of the disease: "On the 27th July, 1843, I arrived in Charleston in the brig Hayne, Capt. Trescott, from Havana, suffering under fever. Dr. Simons came on board, and was told by Dr. Wurdeman (also a passenger) that no yellow fever was on board, he thinking that I had common bilious fever. The day before I left Havana, an Englishman who soon after died, was lying for a few hours with a high fever on my mattress. I took him off with much difficulty, as he was delirious, olled up my mattress and sent it on board he Hayne. I think I put it in my berth nd slept on it during the passage. The nattress went with my baggage, and was iven to a negro in the house. I was taken o the house Northwest corner of Wolfe and Meeting streets, as soon as possible after the essel touched the wharf, where I remained ntil I recovered, fifteen days in bed, and hen went to Aiken. The first deaths I heard of in my neighborhood were two Dutchmen in a small house on the South ide of Wolfe street, nearly opposite my oom.

Mr. Hewes was attended by Dr. Mitchell, een by Dr. Dickson, and the nature of his isease was fully established. It may be rged, against the probability that Mr. Hewes ntroduced the fever into this region, that the ength of time between the arrival of Mr. Hewes, and the development of the epidemic, was too long. But according to Dr. Wragg, "there were no fevers prevalent until the 10th to 13th September. There were literally no cases of bilious remittent and intermittent fevers." Previous to that time, but after the rains and hot sun, these fevers did prevail, and it is to be presumed that he yellow fever element, until then latent, gave its peculiar type to the fever. This is n strict accordance with the facts elsewhere bserved, and consonant with the hypothesis derived from them. The union of the domestic and imported malaria is deemed necessary o produce epidemic yellow fever; while the ingle domestic on the Neck produces bilious, &c. It is rather a curious coincidence, that he only time that yellow fever has prevailed s an epidemic on the Neck, and was not pidemic in the city, that a case should be roved to be carried there, and the disease hould commence in the opposite house.—Such coincidences much resemble cause and ffect, and are difficult to refer to general and ocal causes alone.

The fever of 1849 will next be considered with reference to the facts of its origin. On he 18th July, 1849, the bark Numa arrived rom Havana, and on the 6th August, one of er crew (Sauzaboui) was sent to the Marine Hospital, where he died that night of black omit. She lay at Union wharves, foot of Pinckney-street. The Isabel and Merchant, oth from Havana, arrived on the 25th of uly and 25th August, and lay also at Union harves. The engineer of the Isabel was ttacked on the 7th August, proving infecon on board these two ships at least. On he 20th August, the British bark Queen Victoria, hauled into Patton's wharf, next above Union, from Hull, England, sound and pure, and the Huron, from a British port, lying in the dock below; thus the pure and impure vessels were all in the vicinity of each other. On the 20th and 21st of August, the Captain of the Huron was attacked with fever, but recovered. On the 28th, Captain Laycock, of the Queen Victoria, was attacked with yellow fever, and died of black vomit on the 1st September. Five of his crew were also attacked, but recovered.—Thus we have another example of what occurred in the stream in 1839, and must be attributed to the extension of the infection from one vessel to another. If we proceed up the streets leading to these wharves, we find a case on the 3d of September, at the corner of East Bay and Hasell streets, (Betts,) another on the 7th, East side of East Bay, one door above Hasell, (Carrol,) and on the 10th, one at Bennett's Mill, foot of Wentworth, two wharves above Patton's, (Drew,) one corner of Anson and Market on the 9th, (Beblin,) and one in Linguard street on the 10th, (Collins.) Supposing these persons never to have visited the infected vessels, they must have been within their influence, for they were attacked in the same way, by the same disease, and at the same time as those who were adjacent to the ships. It is impossible to ascertain now what promenades these persons may have made, in order to determine whether they went to the disease, or the disease came to them; but we have a case where the person went to the disease, brought it home, and transferred it to his neighbors, viz: Sahlman, residing at the corner of East Bay and Elliott streets, who "was in the habit of going on board vessels from the West Indies, and had been into one of the vessels at Union wharves to purchase segars, on the day before his attack." He was taken sick on the 26th August, and died on the 2d September. Wm. Martin lived in Stoll's alley, and kept a bakery in Church street, between Broad and Elliott, was taken on the 2d September, and died on the 7th. From this period our records enable us to trace the progress of the disease to Church and Elliott streets, to Anson and Pinckney, to Market and Linguard, to Hayne and Meeting, and so on all over the city. It is not proper that I should omit to mention another origin of the disease, viz: from Savannah. "On the 24th August, Holman arrived from Savannah in the steamer, on the 25th he entered the Poor House with yellow fever, and died on the 29th. We could learn nothing of the antecedents of this man." He may have come from the West Indies through Savannah, with the disease undeveloped until his arrival here; it is certain that he did not take it here, and we have no information that the fever was in Savannah.

We trust that enough has been advanced to demonstrate the extreme probability, that the germ of epidemic yellow fever is imported more frequently than has been generally suspected. We acknowledge the difficulty of tracing the origin of early cases, and we also regret that, until lately, none of our physicians have sufficiently doubted the accuracy of our forefathers as to make further investigations necessary. It is no honor to Charleston to be the parent of such a pestilence; it is no credit to her sons to endeavor to prove her to be. There is no positive proof that she is, and there is much positive proof that she is not. There is both damage and danger in the charge, and she has the right to be esteemed innocent until proved to be guilty; and it becomes her sons of the present day, by industrious research, to disprove those assertions which the indolence and negligence of her former sons induced them to make. That Charleston is beyond the Northern limit of self-generating epidemic yellow fever is exceedingly probable, for it is the property of epidemics never to die in the places of their nativity. Yellow fever does die in our climate, for it is not renewed each successive summer, while at Havana it flourishes in perpetuity. If the fever is not a native of the West Indies, it is, at least, naturalized, but it cannot be said to be naturalized in Charleston. Our winters extinguish it effectually. Charleston does occasionally produce sporadic cases of fever of domestic origin, but they do not extend, nor infect localities. In 1847, a drummer at the Citadel Academy went on a drunken frolic to Sullivan's Island, returned to Elliott street in the city, and when he became a little sober, reported at his quarters at the Citadel; in a few days he was taken with all the symptoms of yellow fever, even unto black vomit: he neither died nor did he extend his disease to the numerous subjects in his immediate vicinity. Had he obtained his disease from an infected West India vessel, the result and consequences would have been very different. We apprehend that it is from such cases as this, that the elder physicians founded their belief of the domestic origin of yellow fever, and inferred, if it was seen, occasionally, to be of domestic origin, it must necessarily always be so, without distinguishing the remarkable difference which exists between the sporadic and epidemic. Another source of error was the observation, that in pure country air the epidemic fever was not extended; such is still the observation, but the present conclusion is different. The impure air of the city is necessary for this extension, and so long as the city air is pure, fever will not even extend in the city. We never hear of yellow fever in the winter, and we always notice its decline and destruction as cool weather advances. It is possible that the reduction of temperature impedes the putrefactive fermentation, diminishes the amount of eliminated gases and vapors, and thus destroys the medium of intercommunication, and consequently the foreign element is extinguished by defect of combination and influence of a low temperature. It was a standing order to the French ships cruizing in the West Indies, to make sail for the Polar seas as soon as the fever was discovered on board, and the success was generally satisfactory. It is now observed that ice constitutes the best disinfectant that can be used at quarantine grounds, and we all know that a low temperature checks every fermentation; hence the deduction that our impure city air is the result of the putrefactive fermentations going on, by influence of solar heat, in the large mass of vegetable and animal matter distributed within and upon the surface of our soil, giving rise to secondary productions of every variety, is not at all extravagant nor incredible.

Having assumed an hypothesis adequate to explain all the obscure phenomena connected with the origin and propagation of the yellow fever in Charleston, we are prepared to apply it to the prevention of the evil. We have assumed on sufficient observation and evidence, that two conditions of the air are necessary to produce epidemicity. First, a condition of impurity of domestic origin, arising from the fermentations of the earth and its contents, derived from the exuviæ of a dense population. Secondly, a foreign imported element, which readily combines with our domestic impure air, and imparts a property to it, identical with what it enjoys in its native clime. Without professing to ascertain what the elements may be, we only identify them by their effects upon the human system—and their only property, at present known, is that of producing disease and death in the human family, wherever the combination is allowed to be consummated. This single observation contains all the principles of human action. Prevent the combination, and security from its ravages must be the result. Exclude the foreign element from our port, or extinguish it in the harbor, but never let it reach our wharves to effect the deadly combination. Can this be done in a commercial city? Can our wells be poisoned, for the sake of commerce? Where is the difference between poisoning our air, and poisoning our water? Both are essential to the vitality of our citizens, and merchants have no more right to poison the one, than our enemies have to poison the other. Poisoning is the foulest kind of murder, equally abhorrent to the savage, as the saint; and it is only necessary to demonstrate, beyond a doubt, that the poison of yellow fever is introduced among us by commerce, and we will soon find that there is among our merchants a moral principle paramount to the love of gain. However valuable the West India trade may be to the city, it cannot be equivalent to the injury produced in other branches of commerce, by the dread which the disease produces in the minds of country purchasers, and the compulsion it induces to flee to other markets, where the disease is prohibited entrance. Of death and desolation we need not argue, for habit has rendered us callous to such considerations, and the exemption which the native enjoys may make him careless of the sufferings of others. Far be it from us to attribute a bad motive to the non-believers in the introduction of the disease, but the facts collected appear to be sufficient to produce a reconsideration of the matter, and to induce the performance of an experiment which will settle the matter beyond a doubt. The experiment does not involve the destruction of the West India trade, although it will encumber it with additional expenses, and thus raise the price of the commodities beyond their former value; but this increase of price will fall equally upon all the West India merchants, thus producing no change in their relative profits, while the community at large are made to pay the extra charges. It is not observed that the rigor and extra expenses incident to the New York Quarantine increases the price of sugar in that market, and with all the impediments of quarantine, the West India trade is prosperous in that city. We desire to accomplish no more for Charleston, than what the Legislature of the State of New York has done for the city of New York. We desire to imitate her example, to profit by her experience, and be rewarded by the same happy results. "For let it be remembered," says Vache, (State Commissioner of health for the Marine Hospital, Staten Island,) "that the malady has not appeared in this city for nearly a quarter of a century, and not since the present health laws have been rigidly enforced, and never will, as long as the State remains as it is, and its provisions are observed to the letter." Here we have the fruits of difference of opinion between Drs. Rush and Hosach. So long as Rush prevailed, and domestic origin was advocated, the fever continued its annual ravages. When Hosach prevailed, and foreign importation was admitted, ways and means were found to stay the pestilence, and nature seemed to yield to a correct public opinion. Let public opinion change in Charleston, and ways and means will also be found to stay our pestilence. We have been taught how it may be done; we have only to put those principles into practice, and the scourge of Charleston will be as a thing that was.

From the preceding facts and observations, your Committee venture to draw the following conclusions, viz:

1st. The origin of yellow fever is not dependent upon particular constitutions of the weather alone, for it has appeared, occasionally, in seasons materially differing from each other, in all the details of meteorological phenomena. Yet as a general rule, it prevails oftener in rainy seasons, with cool nights and hot days, and least in dry seasons, with hot nights and hot days, all other perturbating causes being absent.

2d. The development and extension of the fever is promoted by the accumulation of filth, pools of standing water, excavations in the earth, crowded population in small ill-ventilated apartments, exposure to the heat of the sun, excesses, both in quantity and quality, in articles of diet and drink, deficient drainage, in fact all those circumstances which come under the cognizance of a medical police, and are found to be necessary for the preservation of health in all cities, and fortunately are within the power of a good government to effect. It is at least prudent and wise to attribute the origin of some of our fevers to the neglect of the above considerations, particularly those whose origin we cannot, or have not, traced to a foreign source, while it should be strictly enforced upon the public mind, that the neglect of the above precautions create those impurities of the atmosphere of the city, which form the recipient, the domicil, as it were, of the foreign element, through which the poison is carried to every part of the city, and to every chamber and sitting room.

3d. Your Committee are constrained to aver that the introduction of the yellow fever by vessels from foreign ports, is by far the most frequent cause, and the best established origin of the epidemic in our city. And it affords your Committee great satisfaction to have collected so many facts in support of this opinion, as it places within the power of the city authorities the means of successfully contending against its introduction. So long as the enemy entered secretly into our camp, we were unprepared for resistance; but now, as we have learned his mode and manner of attack, he is disarmed of half his terrors. Our city is our castle, and we will close our doors, both front and back, external and internal, and bid defiance to our former enemy. Our strategy is self-defence, our base of operations the Charleston bar, and our prison the quarantine ground. On this frontier we will wage the war, and leave our citizens to pursue their several vocations in security, unalarmed by any other cause save the apprehension of neglect of duty in our officers and soldiers. Fortunately the State has given full powers to the city to execute the quarantine laws, and they are sufficiently comprehensive to embrace all the necessary details, when directed to be rigidly enforced. That direction for rigid enforcement we hope will now be given, and the unanimous sentiment of the Medical Society will no longer give their opinion to the Government that the rigid enforcement of the quarantine laws is by no means necessary on account of yellow fever. It is proved, on trial, to be necessary elsewhere, and we have every reason to believe that it will be equally salutary here, as the neglect of it has been accompanied with so many disasters for so many years, that its rigid enforcement promises relief, rather than an aggravation of evil. The certainties of commerce must yield to the uncertainties of medical opinions, and if we are to bear the expenses of a quarantine, we are at least entitled to perform an experiment with them, and know positively whether or not they are worth the annual support. If the execution of the laws has not hitherto excluded the disease, the error and fault was ours; we have never believed it necessary to attempt the exclusion, we now recommend the reverse instructions. Exclude it by every means consistent with the vitality of the West India trade, and the vitality and health of the city. If the prosperity of the city depends upon its health, we have now the means to preserve it, and no subordinate or secondary consideration should be allowed to interfere with, and interrupt a rigid and effectual enforcement of those laws, which were enacted by the wisdom of the State to preserve the health and advance the prosperity of the city.

In framing regulations for the successful performance of quarantine, we are not to rely upon the exact original import of the word, implying that a vessel is to be detained forty days before coming up to the city; for, in that period, it was presumed that all persons on board, who were liable to the disease, would have taken it, and died or recovered. This was the early idea on the subject, when the plague, which was considered truly contagious, that is, diffusive by personal contact or presence, was the disease to be guarded against; but it was afterwards discovered that the disease could be extended by the vessel and cargoes, hence the introduction of purifications, fumigations, and other means directed against the vessel, in order to destroy the infection which it contained.

These two principles are still the foundation of all judicious quarantine regulations, and the details are modified in such a manner as to secure the primary object of security to the health of a city, and to offer the the least impediment to its commerce with reputed infected ports. Experience has taught that it is not every article of a cargo that retains the infection; some are purified by simple exposure to the air, others by washing, and the timbers of the ship appear to be more difficult of purification than most articles of a cargo; and so long as the cargo remains on board, the purification is impossible. It is for this reason that cargoes from infected ports should be discharged at the quarantine station, purified in the manner found successful by practice, and reshipped to the city. The vessel itself is now in a fit condition for purification. It is futile to undertake the purification of the cabin and forecastle when the hold retains its infection; for on the vessel's arrival at the wharf, and the hatches removed, the infection is diffused. In the recent case of the Mandarin in Philadelphia, the diffusion of the infection took place after the discharge of the cargo, and not with it, the cargo being sugar, molasses and segars, articles considered "sufficiently ventilated by transposition." Cases similar to the Mandarin are of common occurrence at our wharves, but they have been hitherto considered unworthy of notice; while we read with avidity the history of an identical case in a Northern city, protected by an efficient quarantine, and sympathise with the people in their denunciation against the health officer, who was so negligent of his duty as to allow an unclean ship to unload at the wharf, and infect a portion of the city.

Transhipment of the cargo, in order to ventilate and purify the hold of the vessel, is indispensable to an efficient quarantine; whether this be done by lighters, or into public stores, to be erected at a convenient station, as at New York, is a question for future consideration. The concurring advantage of this process is the early delivery of the cargo to the merchant, encumbered, we must admit, with the expenses of the transhipment. After the thorough cleansing of the ship, she is allowed to come up and be ready for her export cargo. To guard against the failure of complete disinfection, it would be prudent to assign an especial and separate wharf for these vessels, and their preceding cargoes removed to the greatest possible distance from the mass of clean vessels, and out of the way of the usual congregations of seamen and other foreigners. While the removal of the cargoes and the purification of the presumed infected ship is progressing, the period of incubation of the fever is advancing, and it it is probable that these delays will equal the time necessary to decide whether the disease will or will not be developed in the crew.

The acclimation of our citizens to the peculiar diseases of this latitude would enable them to pass from these vessels to the city without danger of taking the disease, and transferring it to the city, while a foreigner would receive it in the vessel, bring it up in apparent health, and in a few days be the means of counteracting all previous efforts, by its development and subsequent extension. Great caution should be exercised in the selection of the transferring crews and laborers; negroes are decidedly to be preferred; and the unacclimated stranger should be positively prohibited from joining the party.

In conclusion, your committee would offer the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Mayor be directed to put in rigid force the quarantine laws of this State on the first of May, and continue the same until the first of November each year.

Resolved, That a commitee of — be appointed to examine our laws, and compare them with those of New Yovk and elsewhere, and report upon such modifications of the regulations as may be more efficacious in accomplishing the desired object, while it shall be less onerous to commerce.

Answers of S. A. CARTWRIGHT, M. D., to the interrogatories propounded by the Members of the Senate's Committee.

Question 1*st*. Was the epidemic of last summer contagious?

Answer. It appeared to be so in a certain sense, like typhus and ship fever, when the sick were confined in close, ill ventilated rooms, but not in the open air. To prevent being misunderstood, I beg leave to say, that I regard both the doctrine of contagion and non-contagion as sectarian, resting upon a part of the truth and not the whole. All the emanations of the body, and all the passions and emotions of the mind, are contagious or non-contagious, according to circumstances; and unless these circumstances be looked to and made the basis of action, any preventive measures founded upon the abstract doctrine of the contagiousness or non-contagiousness of yellow fever, ship fever and cholera, must from the nature of things, prove abortive and end in disappointment.

Ques. 2. Was it imported into New Orleans?

Ans. A few cases were imported or brought into New Orleans, but a great many cases occurred, some at a very early period, which could not be traced to any foreign origin. I saw some cases of yellow fever brought into the city from the Piney Woods, in the persons of the laborers on the railroads. Yellow fever, like typhus, intermittents, catarrhs, &c., would seem to be referable to a plurality of causes, and not to an unity, as implied by the question.

Even hydrophobia is not bound down to unity of cause. The first dog that goes mad every Spring, was not bitten by another dog. The rich blooded northerners coming South, huddling together by night in ill ventilated apartments, using a diet and drinks they are not accustomed to, and exposing themselves by day at hard labor or severe exercise, under our hot mid-summer sun, can at certain seasons generate yellow fever almost anywhere in the South. Experience proves that a combination of causes, as dear bread, high rents, and a cold winter generates the typhus fever almost every winter among the poor of the large European cities.

Ques. 3. Did not the disease make its first appearance among the shipping?

Ans. From the best information I can gather, it did not. The first death from yellow fever occurred in the Charity Hospital, on the 27th of May. Three days afterwards there was another death. On the 7th June, two more, and another on the 10th and 11th; these were all unequivocal cases of yellow fever, attended with black vomit. All were emigrants, who had been but a short time in the city. None of them had been in any infected port, having come from Europe direct to New Orleans, and one from Boston. No ship anterior to these deaths, from any infected port with yellow fever on board, had as yet arrived in the city. On the 11th June, the day that the last of the above mentioned deaths happened, the Evangeline, from Jamaica, came into port with the yellow fever on board.

This was the first yellow fever brought to the city by the shipping, and the first ship of the season which had been infected with it, with the exception of the Northumberland, early in May from Liverpool direct, with about 400 emigrants on board, many of whom were afflicted with ship fever, which it is said, assumed the livery of yellow fever on the way up from the Balize.

The Mary H. Kimball, from Rio de Janeiro, about which so much has been said, did not arrive until the 25th of June, after a great many cases of well marked yellow fever had not only occurred in the Hospital, but in private practice.

The two cases at Gormley's Basin, back in the swamp, entirely cut off from all communication with the river or shipping, happened on the 6th of June, instead of the 6th of May, as originally reported by Dr. Moses Dowler. These two deaths took place five days before the first ship with yellow fever on board came into port.

Ques. 4. To what do you attribute its spread in the country?

Ans. To the spread of the emigrant or unacclimated population, or that class of people among whom it first appeared in the city, and in accordance with that law of fevers, depending upon hidden causes, but displayed in large armies, where camp fever is often seen to break out among the new recruits, and after being confined to them for a time, to pass over to the veterans, and to the inhabitants of the town or city in or near which the soldiers are quartered. Soon afterwards the smaller detachments of soldiers, quartered at a greater or less distance from the main army, are attacked with the same disease, spreading in many cases to the inhabitants of the country around the various encampments. Most commonly, however, camp fever is as strictly confined to the new recruits, as our yellow fever generally is to the newly arrived emigrants. When either extends to other classes, some undefined meteriological condition of the atmosphere is presumed to be the cause, while others attribute it to contagion, to fear, to local miasmas, or to microscopic living organisms.

Ques. 5. If yellow fever is not contagious, as asserted by most all members of the Faculty, does it ever become so under peculiar circumstances?

Ans. Diseases, acknowledged by all parties to be contagious, as small pox, measles, scarlet fever and whooping cough, do not spread unless under peculiar circumstances. The facts are, that a few cases of one or the other of these contagious diseases, spring up in town or country almost as often as the moon changes. When circumstances are not favorable to their propagation, they die out like a fire without wind to fan it or fuel to support it. On the other hand, when favored by some secret constitutions of the atmosphere, (increasing the susceptibility of the system to be affected by them,) the experience of the world declares, that human ingenuity has never been able to guard effectually against them. So tired had the world become with vain efforts by the most stringent sanitary regulations zealously enforced, to prevent small pox, that Jenner's discovery of a method to destroy the susceptibility of the body to its influence, was everywhere hailed with delight—yet vaccination is scarcely more effectual in preventing fatal attacks of small pox, than free ventilation, cleanliness, temperance, and putting the negro in the sun to do all the rough out door work, are in preventing fatal attacks of yellow fever.

It is very true that when epidemic, the disease pays less respect to the persons who have observed the above mentioned precautions, than it otherwise invariably does; but it is no less true that when small pox is epidemic, it pays less respect to the vaccinated than it otherwise does. From want of attention to the influence of this law, derived from the great numbers afflicted, the virtues of vaccination have been often called in question, because it is not a certain preventive against small pox, in a modified form at least, when the genuine disease prevails to a great extent. Last summer upwards of two thousand deaths occurred among the newly arrived emigrants, before I could hear of a single one among the citizens proper of New Orleans. Measles is a more fatal ailment than yellow fever, when epidemic among large masses of the poor, shut up in filthy, close, damp and overcrowded tenements, as those occupied by a similar class in this city last summer, where the principal mortality occurred. If that mortality had been from epidemic measles instead of yellow fever, it would at once appear that the circumstances causing the mortality were entitled to more consideration than the contagious nature of the malady.

No city that I know of has ever yet been able to protect a single generation from measles, whooping cough or scarlet fever; it is out of the power of man to exclude their contagion, but it is within the power of a good government to control the circumstances from which the complaints arising therefrom derive their malignancy.

Ques. 6. At what date in 1853, was the first arrival of a ship into the port of New Orleans, with yellow fever on board?

Ans. On the 11th of June.

Ques. 7. At what date was the first undoubted case of death from yellow fever in the city of New Orleans, in 1853?

Ans. On the 27th of May.

Ques. 8. Was not the cholera imported into New Orleans by foreign ships, at each and every appearance it made here?

Digitized by Google

Ans. It was not. In its first appearance on this continent, in the year 1832, it gradually approached New Orleans from the upper country, and was seen on the steamboats, flatboats and rafts of the Mississippi and the Ohio, several weeks before it made its appearance here, or a single case occurred among the shipping of this port. Its second appearance in America was in the autumn of 1848. It attacked the emigrants who came up the river from Europe—not on their passage, but after their arrival. It then extended to the citizens and sojourners in New Orleans, and commenced a second tour through the United States, pursuing a retrograte course to the first, going up the river instead of down, and stopping at many of the woodyards and towns on the margin, and in some instances penetrating into the interior country. In 1832, it first appeared at Quebec, June 8th. It soon afterwards visited the cities of Montreal and New York. On the same day, October 1st, 1832, it fell upon St. Louis and Cincinnati. Fifteen days afterwards it reached Memphis, and in precisely fifteen days more, viz: on the 30th of Oct., 1832, it made its first appearance in New Orleans. Ever since its last epidemic prevalence here in 1848, sporadic cases, about the same time of year, have annually occurred for five years in succession, mostly among the newly arrived emigrants in the first instance, and afterwards extending to a few of the citizens and transient population, particularly the oyster loving portion of them: thus proving that there is some attraction or chain of connection drawing it here every autumn—well worthy to be sought out and broken if it can be found. It may be in the unwashed, unventilated clothing, loaded with human secretions, in a long sea-voyage, which the swarms of emigrants arriving at this port in autumn, annually bring with them. I broke the chain in a single day, which had long bound it to a large sugar plantation belonging to Capt. Minor, in the Parish of Ascension, after it had killed forty negroes, and had disabled a good portion of 300 more, by exposing all the clothing and the bed clothing to the open air, and making all the negroes, sick and well, camp out in the open fields—forbidding any tent or covering to be erected over them for two or three days. That measure banished the cholera entirely from the plantation on the same day it was carried into effect, which happened to be a rainy day, and all the sick and invalids, who were removed into the open field, immediately began to recover. Removal had been twice tried before on the same plantation without effect, but in each case it was a removal out of one lot of houses into another, and not into the open air. The latter I have known to be effective in more than an hundred instances. The city authorities in permitting the removal of emigrants from ships arriving from countries where cholera is prevailing, with all their unwashed, unventilated clothing, into boarding houses and overcrowded tenements in this city, and carrying the sick to the Charity Hospital, have demonstrated the purity of our autumnal atmosphere, by the inoculation not having taken effect and lighting up an epedemic every year, instead of only a few separate cases—enough however to frighten the people, and greatly embarrass the business of the place.

I am no contagionist, but I hold that the long pent-up exhalations from the sick, the dying and the dead cannot be taken into the lungs without contaminating the blood. New Orleans had an expensive quarantine last year, yet so fearful were the masters of the cholera ships of being remanded back to the quarantine station, if any cases were found on board, that good care was taken, it is said, to conceal them, or to smuggle them on shore. But the emanations saturating the clothing of the well, in a crowded emigrant ship, are probably not less noxious than those from the sick themselves.

Ques. 9. What are the diseases most commonly introduced by the shipping?

Ans. Ship fever is almost constantly brought into this port, and occasionally a few cases of other complaints.

That ship fever is communicable from one to another in the pent up, poisonous atmosphere of its own exhalations, is generally admitted. That emigrants loaded with those exhalations and foul excretions, are constantly admitted into the emigrant boarding houses, and crowded, ill ventilated, damp, mouldy, dilapidated tenements in this city, occupied by the poorer classes of the foreign population, readily explains the remarkable fact, that so many of that kind of people are almost daily dying, winter and summer, without anybody being sick: the contagion stupefying and killing them, without producing those painful phenomena which usually pass for sickness.

Ques 10. Why are the foreign seaports liable to be the seats of contagious disorders?

Ans. Why, because they are ruled by those oppressive governments under whose wasteful extravagance and unlimited taxing power the poor are half starved for the want of food, half frozen for the want of fuel, and half smothered in their own exhalations to keep themselves warm. New Orleans bids fair to remain in the same category, unless the Legislature, in mercy to the city, cuts down the taxing power of the corporation to something like a republican figure.

No people can long bear to pay three or four per cent. taxation on the value of their property, without denying themselves those solid comforts of life, which after all are the best preventions against contagious and epidemic diseases. (As soon as a generous public diffused the comforts of life among the poor of New Orleans, the last summer, the terrible epidemic immediately subsided.)

Ques. 11. How do you explain the disappearance of the plague at Marseilles, with frequent cases at the Lazaretto?

Ans. This is an important question, the correct answer to which will be well calculated to bridle the fears that are running away with the popular judgment on the subject of contagion.

The plague at the Lazaretto, and none in Marseilles, if left unexplained, is sufficient of itself to overrule the objections to an expensive, rigid and vexatious quarantine, (to keep the yellow fever out of New Orleans, if that measure actually keeps the plague out of Marseilles.) It requires a high degree of medical knowledge to answer the question correctly and satisfactorily. Fortunately, a most distinguished physician of London, Dr. Heberden, has long since answered the question, and relieved me of a task that I would have been inadequate to unless I had been aided by his work, entitled "Observations on the increase and decrease of different diseases, particularly the Plague." He proves that the plague has been on the decrease, that is, contracting the sphere of country liable to be infected by it, for more than a century. London and Marseilles were included in the region of country, but for many years it has left that region and drawn itself within narrower limits. Within its present limits no quarantine regulations have been found effectual in preventing its appearance, while all the towns and cities situated in the region of country it has left, have for half a century or more enjoyed a complete exemption from it, whether they have a quarantine or not. So also the yellow fever, which at one time extended as far north as N. York, Boston and Quebec, has for many years ceased to exist in those places. That this exemption is not due to any quarantine regulations, is proved by the fact, that the multitude of towns and cities in the same latitude, unprotected by any quarantine whatever, have been entirely free from it, although cases have occasionally been imported by the shipping, as the cases of plague at the Lazaretto, of Marseilles.

Ques. 12. "Has the Quarantine system been effective in preventing the importation of diseases liable to be imported by emigrants?

Ans. No quarantine that we have ever had has ever been effective for that purpose, and none that I have ever seen proposed by those who are fishing for abstractions could by any possibility be so. Although a rigid quarantine was instituted at the port of New Orleans, in 1821, and was not abolished until 1825. Nothing was effected by it, but expense, trouble and sundry annoyances to commerce. It did not prevent the occurrance of the yellow fever in 1822. The quarantine has never been effective in preventing the importation of diseases liable to be imported by emigrants, for the very good reason that we never have had one of a practical kind, directed against the infectious materials and diseases the emigrants import. Such, for instance, as the fomites of ship fever itself, including putrid and adynamic fevers. The seeds of these affections are sown broad cast, almost every month in the year, by the newly arrived emigrants in various quarters of New Orleans, and occasionally they find their way to the plantations and other towns and cities of the Mississippi valley.—They are directly the cause of a large portion, and indirectly, of a far greater part of the mortality which is constantly occurring among the poorer classes of this city and the neighboring towns. That they can be excluded by wise sanitary regulations instituted by the Legislature of Louisiana (which I have no objection to bearing the name of quarantine), and New Orleans be made healthy, I have no doubt. None but the Legislature has the power to do the goodly work. The city government has no authority beyond its chartered limits, and if it should have the authority conferred on it, the presumption is that it would abuse it, as formerly, by creating offices, incurring unnecessary expense, and annoying commerce with vexatious impracticable quarantine regulations, directed against the wrong cause of disease. The dominant idea among the advocates of quarantine in the city, is the radically erroneous one that, to be effective, the measure would require restrictions to be laid on commerce, and the expense incurred of building lazarettos, hospitals, storehouses, &c, at or near Fort St. Philippe, or some half way ground. It will consume all the resources of the city and the State to build and support hospitals for the accommodation of the sick, and houses of refuge for the debilitated and disabled among those vast multitudes of emigrants, passing from Europe through the port of New Orleans into the great Mississippi valley, unless the Legislature lays the axe to the root of the evil, by forcing from ship owners, emigration gents and companies, the necessary fines to sure the comfort and the health of the assengers.

It would be better for all parties, and ould advance the interests of legitimate ommerce, to prevent sickness by enforcing stice to be meted out to the emigrants, an to impose oppressive taxes on the city nd State, to repair the evils caused by the reedy avarice of crowding too many emirants on the same ship and not furnishing em with good water and wholesome provions. There are laws already in existence gainst such practices, but they are not en-oced or the penalties attached to their viotion exacted. If those penalties were en-oced, the amount derived therefrom would ot only be sufficient to defray the expenses f an economical quarantine, but to add a onsiderable amount to the treasury of the tate. Hospitals are not in accordance with he genius of our republican institutions.
The American policy is to do away with the ecessity for such institutions. At best they re but sores on the body politic, made ne-essary by oppression and injustice. As a pecimen of how little use they are to our eople, out of 15,558 patients admitted into he Charity Hospital in 1849, only 147 were Louisianians, and for twenty years the proportion has been about the same, one in a hundred.

Not only the quarantine of 1821, but all subsequent quarantine regulations, in the shape of city ordinances, with the same view, proved entirely abortive. There was an ordinance early in the year 1847, passed by the City Council, against the introduction of contagious and infectious diseases, but it did not define what was meant by the terms contagious and infectious. If by these terms were meant to be included all substances of an infectious and poisonous nature to the human system, the ordinance was defective, as it was directed against disease in the abstract, instead of against the noxious materials causing disease. The decomposing azotized compounds, thrown off from the bodies of large numbers of human beings, shut up under the hatches of an ill-ventilated ship on a long voyage, saturating the unwashed clothing, bed clothing and luggage of the emigrants, might well be characterized by the terms contagious or infectious—as but few substances in nature are more depressing to the vital powers, when the air respired is contaminated by them in a concentrated form. To the poisonous metamorphozed effluvia arising from a quantity of decomposing animal matter, confined a long time in a damp, hot, close room, I traced the origin, thirty years ago, of the most malignant epidemic I ever witnessed. Its gradual progress, radiating from the focus of infection, a considerable distance around, was noticed in the facts published and left unexplained. It was not then known that, after the metamorphosis into fungoid or algoid organisms, that these living substances have the power, under certain circumstances, of self propagation. There are a great many species of both classes of such microscopic living organisms, no doubt more or less noxious. Prof. Riddell has detected several kinds with his microscope—always finding them, no where else than, in the most filthy kind of matter, in close damp, hot places. His oscillaria I have repeatedly seen through his microscope. It is an algoid endowed with life and motion. Although always an opponent of a quarantine to exclude the importation of an ideal abstraction, I have nevertheless always been in favor of practical sanitary measures to drive out and exclude those realities in the shape of nuisances which observation, unbiased by any theory whatever, has pointed out as containing the seeds of disease and death. Such, for instance, as putrid provisions, damaged cargoes of perishable articles, and the soiled unwashed, unventilated clothing and bed clothing, saturated with the azotized compounds of great numbers of human beings, confined in the steerage of a filthy ship, in a long sea voyage, particularly if the ship fever break out among them. That the clothing and bed clothing of such persons, in its soiled condition, can, if carried into close, damp, crowded rooms, communicate disease to the inhabitants thereof, admits of so little doubt, that the safest rule would be to burn all that is not worth the trouble of purification by washing and airing. The important fact has been too long overlooked, that typhus or ship fever does not obey its accustomed laws in this city as yellow fever and other diseases do. It does not appear and disappear, but continues all the year round among the poorer class of emigrants. Every month in the year there are deaths from it, and more deaths per annum from it than from any other kind of fever, except during an epidemic. The books of the Charity Hospital prove that patients in that institution, with this fever, under the name of typhoid or putrid, are dying all the year round, and that in 1848, no less than $11,-251 was paid out of the Hospital fund to the Franklin Infirmary for patients removed to that institution, afflicted with this fever alone. Such facts indicate that it is kept in activity every year, and every month in the year, by constant accessions of its peculiar miasm in a fresh state. Indeed, it is not altogether unreasonable to suppose that the ship fever, among the 400 emigrants imported into this city, direct from Liverpool on the Northumberland in May last, impressed its character upon the late epidemic, causing it to assume a typhoid type and to wear an unaccustomed contagious aspect.

Ques. 13. At what distance below the city should the quarantine ground be located?

Ans. Five miles—at the battle ground. That particular place is already associated with the idea of protection and safety against evils approaching from abroad. Before the vast army of emigrants, annually pouring into the Mississippi valley, be permitted to pass that spot, let them cast off their European habiliments, to be purified of these miasms, called plague spots by the Hebrew legislator and fomites by our fathers, but which modern science has found to consist of living organisms belonging to the fungoid and algoid classes of the microscopic world, and greatly varying in species and possessing the power of self-propagation. Be this as it may, ablution and exposure to the open air, are known to possess the virtue of destroying typhous and pestilential miasms from whatever cause proceeding, and to rob them of the power of propogation, either by the sick or their clothes and bed clothing. No hospitals, therefore, or Lazarettoes should form any part of that rational system of quarantine, seeking to destroy miasms by ablutions and free exposure to the open air, instead of building hospitals to breed and propagate them. A few sheds or tents at the quarantine ground, to protect the sick from the sun and the weather while enjoying the invigorating luxury of breathing the fresh open air, after a tedious passage on ship board, would be all the buildings required. Those ill with typhous or pestilential fevers stand a better chance to recover under a tent or shed than in a hospital or lazaretto. Even in surgical diseases patients recover from operations in the tented field with much more facility than they do in the hospitals of London and Paris.—In the cholera infantum and marasmus of the children in crowded houses, the exposure of the little skeletons to the fresh open air of the country reanimates them almost immediately.

But as some diseases will not bear the fresh open air, there could be no objection to a few scattered cottages at the quarantine ground for such as might be afflicted with them. As all such complaints possess no power of propogating themselves, the patients could be safety carried to the hospitals we already have. Hospitals are not needed for pestilential and typhous complaints, because in such affections the open air is not only preventive, but curative. As to the well, they should be required to camp out in the open air a day or two, and after having performed the necessary ablutions, and putting on clean clothing, to come to the city, or to go where they please.

A rational quarantine, founded on the principle of excluding the importation of every thing tangible, which experience has proved to be the causes of disease, such as vegetable and animal matter in a state of putrefaction, unsound provisions and clothing and bed clothing saturated with human exhalations, was the kind of quarantine that Dr. Bush, and the great lights of America, advocated half a century ago, in opposition to that irrational expensive quarantine system which had been tried more than half a century before their time and failed, and always will fail, because it is directed against the shadow of things instead of the substance. The sanitary regulations proposed by Bush, Mitchell and others, were too simple and too cheap to be at first appreciated.

They placed no restrictions on commerce, but rather facilitated its operations by preserving the health of the crews of ships, and other persons engaged in it, by the same hygienic measures which preserved them from bringing disease among other people. A quarantine to be effective should be divested of all impracticable expediences, unnecessary obstructions thrown in the way of trade, or hardships imposed upon the emigrants and passengers. It would be an unnecessary hardship to detain the emigrants and passengers at any half way ground between the city and the Balize, cut off from fresh vegetable food and all the comforts and conveniences that would be at their command if near the city. It would cause unnecessary detention and incur the expense of double towage, or fail in its object by not giving time to the port physician for an effective examination of the condition of the ships and passengers. Whereas, if that officer was required to reside permanently at the Balize, he would have time to examine the vessels carefully before they are taken in tow by the boats, giving the latter the necessary directions for the disposition of the ships, permitting such as were found to be in a sound condition, after landing the emigrants at the quarantine ground, to proceed into port—or directing those found to be infected with a sickly crew or foul air from want of cleanliness or damaged cargoes, to be brought to and left at the quarantine station—besides forwarding a bill of items for the recovery of damages against all such that may have brought more passengers to the ton than the law allows, or had in any way subjected themselves to penalties. If one officer were inadequate to the performance of such duties, there could be more than one or he could have assistants, who could board the vessels with the pilots and facilitate business, without obstructing commerce a single hour. A few thousand dollars would defray the whole annual expense. Our government not only protects peaceable, law-abiding passengers after their arrival here, but evidently intended (judging from its unexecuted laws) to punish all aggressions that may be committed upon them in their voyage hither. There could be no better hygienic measure devised to preserve the health of emigrants from the depressing influences which fall upon the soul on seeing the land containing the bones of their fathers, receding forever from their view and themselves on a wide waste of waters, than to feel and know that the protecting arm of that great Republic of equal rights and laws, to whose shores they are hastening, was already around them.

The proposed quarantine will be defective if the golden rule be not, in some shape, incorporated in its provisions, and ships of all nations required, not only to come into port clean, but to go out clean. Thus would New Orleans gain, by acting justly, a reputation for health, which the envy and detraction of rivals could not destroy, or long retard her progress to her high destiny in becoming one of the greatest cities of the earth.

Lastly, as an additional security against any infection from the shipping, none but well acclimated persons should be permitted to act as stevadores.

SAM'L A. CARTWRIGHT.

Canal Street, New Orleans,
Jan'ry 31, 1854.

QUARANTINE.

To the Hon. Messrs. A. Trudeau, J. A. Braud, and E. E. Kittridge, Sanatory Legislative Commission:

GENTLEMEN—I have received a copy of your circular soliciting the opinions of the medical faculty in reply to certain interrogatories which you have propounded; and, although a feeling of diffidence might well induce me to shrink from exposing my crude and imperfect suggestions or opinions to the analysis and criticism of gentlemen so much my superiors in all the qualifications necessary to give wise and useful information, yet as a noble and patriotic desire to promote the public weal has induced you to solicit information, a no less sincere desire to contribute my feeble aid in the important investigation in which you are engaged has induced me to present the following replies to your interrogatories:

Question 1—Was the epidemic of last summer contagious? I answer No!

Question 2—Was it imported into New Orleans?

To this question I also answer No!

Question 3—Did not the disease make its first appearance among the shipping?

To this question I also answer, emphatically, No!

It occurred first among a class of population who have always been the first in all cities and in all ages to acknowledge the presence of epidemics, and who suffer the most from all other diseases, viz: the exposed, improvident and intemperate.

Rain and sunshine; heat and cold; unwholesome food and drink; adulterated and empoisoned liquors; irregularity in eating, drinking and sleeping; excessive labor by day, and excessive venery by night, as well as the most insalubrious style of clothing and dwelling. All these circumstances and peculiarities have characterised the first victims of all epidemics in all ages and in all countries, and such was the case last summer.

Superadd to these circumstances the fact that the individuals above described were all strangers to our climate, and, in the very nature of things, compelled to undergo acclimation, and you have a full and ample solution of the causes which originated the epidemic of last year among those who were its first victims.

Question 4—To what cause do you attribute its spread through the country?

I answer—To the fact that we had no winter during the twelve months preceding it—all the cold weather of the preceding season was late in the spring, hence the surrounding country, as well as the city, emerged as it were from midwinter into midsummer; all the usual tonicity acquired by our inhabitants in city or country, even brief and imperfect as our winters are, was on this occasion withheld, producing a state of lassitude or enervation preëminently qualified to generate disease; hence, when an atmosphere sufficiently pestilential to create yellow fever pervaded almost the entire southwest, no protection was afforded to the inhabitants except constitutional insusceptibility to the disease, such as sometimes exists to all other diseases, whether atmospheric or contagious.

There were elemental peculiarities existing throughout the whole of the infected districts which evidence fully the pestilential condition of our atmosphere, wherever yellow fever prevailed, and which were so obviously of a local character that they cannot possibly have been associated either with contagion or importation, and if one single local fact can be pointed to, which may account for the existence of an epidemic in New Orleans, it must be unwise, illogical and unphilosophical to refer the disease to foreign origin, until it has been perfectly demonstrated that the suspected local cause is utterly incompetent to produce the disease.

Among many local phenomena which occurred, and which could have no relation to contagion or importation, and which may to a certain extent account for the presence of an epidemic, were the following:

A piece of fresh meat attached to a kite, and elevated a few hundred feet, came down in twenty or thirty minutes completely covered with living, moving vermiform animalculæ, and this circumstance occurred throughout the whole epidemic, whenever the experiment was made, which was almost daily.

The upper stratum of clouds never changed their position from the commencement to the close of the epidemic: they appeared "nailed to the sky," and this extraordinary phenomenon was observed in the interior as well as in the city; but what is most remarkable in the premises is the fact that on the very day that they were observed to move, for the first time in several months, the epidemic began to decline, and continued to do so until it ceased to exist, without the aid of cold, frosts or tempests.

If these phenomena be corroborated by more extended experiments in future epidemics, they may serve in part to account for the existence of a yellow fever epidemic, without any reference to contagion or importation.

They demonstrate a horribly poluted condition of our local atmosphere, and show that that atmosphere was permanently established around us throughout the whole epidemic.

When these extraordinary local circumstances can be supposed to be influenced by quarantine, we may begin to believe that it might be of some utility.

I have never exactly given in my adhesion to the doctrine that atmospheric animalculæ were the cause of yellow fever, as many believe; on the contrary, I am rather inclined to suspect that they are the consequences of the stagnant and pestilential influences which create the disease; but at any rate a reference to the facts above stated may perhaps induce one portion of the searchers after truth occasionally to raise their noses out of the mud, in which they have so long been groping after the causes of yellow fever, and inducing another portion, instead of charging distant and, possibly, more salubrious quarters of the world with its creation, and striving by quarantine regulations to keep it away, to look at home for its origin, and to endeavor by neutralizing the causes on which epidemics depend to disarm them of their virulence, and thus establish our future security.

If one intelligent physician of enlarged views; industrious habits and devoted research, were appointed as the medical adviser of our citizens and municipal councils, nay, of the whole State of Louisiana, instead of Boards of Health, and other useless and expensive incumbrances, and if a tythe of the amount which a quarantine would cost were placed at his disposal for experiments and investigations; nay, if the amount which the present Board of Health has squandered (more than fifty thousand dollars) without doing one particle of good, were judiciously employed by a competent individual, in proper researches, more real benefit would be conferred on our city and State and, in fact, on the entire southwest in one year than perpetual quarantines up and down the river, at every bayou, canal and road, and on every plantation in the State, all of which would be necessary, even were any utility to be expected from their employment.

New Orleans possesses medical men fully qualified to fulfil the high and important duties to which I have above referred, as all will admit when I mention such names as Dowler, Barton and Cartwright.

Discard then for a time all ideas of quarantine—confide to one of these able physicians the sanatory destinies of our city and State with all their solemn responsibilities—give him facilities for experiment and investigation, and depend upon it the antiquated and useless contrivance of Boards of Health will forever after be exploded.

Question 5—Does not yellow fever become contagious under peculiar circumstances?

I answer, my experience, as well as common sense and science, so far as I posses those attributes, teach me that it does not.

My mere declaration is not worthy of being obtruded on your notice, but contagion, (derived from tango, to touch) meaning the transmission of disease by contact, is entirely refuted by the known and a thousand times demonstrated facts in relation to yellow fever, and I am fully qualified to demonstrate, and so is every other man who reflects, that in every instance in which contagion has been suspected, the accompanying circumstances have incontestibly substantiated the fact, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that yellow fever is never contagious, and this has been made much more manifest in the country than in the city, for in the city the sick might have been surrounded by acclimated friends and attendants, but in the country all were liable to contagion; and is it not repugnant to reason, science and common sense to suppose that a single individual could, through the instrumentality of contagion, be attacked with yellow fever, be visited, nursed, attended, shrouded, coffined and buried by persons exposed and liable to the same contagious influences, and they escape? If yellow fever were contagious, could sporadic or isolated cases ever occur? or has a case of yellow fever ever occurred in which a much larger number of persons, liable to the same contagion, have not escaped when in direct contact with the sick, than of those who have been attacked; and if this be the fact, and it cannot be doubted, then the doctrine of contagion falls to the ground under all circumstances.

The circle of bona fide and undoubted contagious diseases is very limited.

No disease can justly be considered contagious which cannot be communicated by inoculation, for common sense repudiates the supposition that mere contact, or touch, can communicate yellow fever, when the introduction of all the morbid fluids and secretions, including black vomit, of persons laboring under that disease, have been conveyed into the human body a thousand times without producing it.

Hence it is, that the plague itself has been pronounced non-contagious by the most wise and experienced phyricians; not only from their observation of its phenomena, but but from the frequently attested fact that it cannot be communicated by inoculation.

The only diseases known, unquestionably, to be contagious, are small-pox, syphilis, itch, and a few other cutaneous diseases, and they are all communicated by inoculation.

Scarlatina has been considered contagious, but it is very doubtful; still, its cutaneous peculiarities might render it so, and not conflict with the above opinions.

When measles, dysentery, typhus, &c., &c., spread throughout a hospital, an army, a city, or a neighborhood, is it not much more reasonable to ascribe those diseases to the fact, that all who are assailed have been subjected to the same local and atmospheric circumstances and elemental vicissitudes; perchance, also, the same food, the same privations, exposures, fatigues and irregularities, that all others have who have been afflicted with the same disease?

Is it not much more natural that such should be the case, than that different portions of the same community, exposed to the same circumstances, should be attacked with a variety of diseases?

If an hundred men were to jump from the roof of a four-story building, is it not much more probable that a large majority would be found to have broken bones, (although some would escape unhurt, as they do in all epidemics.) than that a variety of other diseases would ensue among them?

Typhus fever is the natural concomitant of cold climates, as yellow fever is of warm, and when large numbers of human beings at the North, or in Europe, are exposed to the same atmospheric and elemental vicissitudes, unwholesome, unsound food, damp and rotten beds, intemperance, irregularity, and, perchance, debauchery, can we be surprised at the disease to which their climate predisposes them, disseminating itself among them, rather than that other diseases should occur; and does not common sense point to these local and incidental circumstances as the cause of diffused typhus among them, as an ample exponent, without reference to contagion?

So, at the South, if we have thousands of beings subjected to all the morbific causes above enumerated, and at the same time not only predisposed, but absolutely compelled to undergo the disease, and daily and nightly exposed to all the same circumstances, can we be surprised if they are attacked in vast numbers at the same time, (constituting an epidemic) without reference to contagion. Indeed, would it not be much more surprising if they escaped, or if they were attacked with other diseases.

The celebrated reply of Dr. Radcliffe covers this ground, and completely explains my idea:

"A shower of rain (says that distinguished physician) falling on you and me, will wet us both; but a shower of rain falling on you will not wet me."

In short, as quarantine depends upon contagion, if that chimera be abandoned, quarantine becomes nugatory.

Question 6. At what date in 1853 was the first arrival of a ship into the port of New Orleans with yellow fever?

Answer. The iron ship Evangeline, the first suspected vessel, arrived from Rio Janeiro, by the way of Jamaica, on or about the 10th of June, which was thirty days after the first case reported in private practice, and twelve days after the first case reported in the Charity Hospital.

She was in port long before any suspicions of her insalubrity were mooted. Her captain gave to a large number of our citizens a festive entertainment, at which a subscription was collected to award a premium to the two vessels which should make the quickest trips from New Orleans to Liverpool, during the present year.

Digitized by Google

Besides this, the Evangeline obtained much notoriety from her peculiar build, and her hollow iron masts, affording her greater facilities for ventilation and purity than any other vessel which had ever entered the port of New Orleans.

Some time after her captain had given the entertainment above referred to, (when cases of yellow fever were numerous in other quarters,) he was attacked with the disease, but from the long period which had elapsed after the yellow fever had made its appearance, before even of the arrival of the Evangeline, there is not the shadow of reason for charging her with its introduction.

Another vessel which came from Rio de Janeiro by the way of Jamaica, has also been charged with introducing the yellow fever into New Orleans, but it is almost a mockery to mention her name in connection with such a charge. I mean the bark Mary H Kimball.

She did not arrive in New Orleans until the 25th of June, fifteen days after the Evangeline, being forty-nine days after the first appearance of yellow fever, and twenty-seven days after its existence was reported by the Charity Hospital.

The bark Linda Stewart, of Baltimore, Capt. Lloyd Stemmer, also arrived from Rio de Janeiro, direct, on the 12th of June. She loaded and left for Baltimore on 30th of June, about two months after the first appearance of yellow fever in the city.

As she has never been named or suspected in connection with the appearance of yellow fever in New Orleans, I do not know that it was even necessary to allude to her.

These, I believe, constitute all the vessels from Rio Janeiro, with which the terrors of an excited population, and the representations of wild contagionists or interested declaimers, ever, even associated the idea that the yellow fever of 1853 was an imported disease.

Let it be borne in mind that this idea was sprung upon our population at a period of imminent peril and excitement, when almost any assertion, however false, absurd or extravagant, could have obtained any number of devout believers.

Question 7. At what date was the first undoubted case of death from yellow fever in the city of New Orleans in 1853.

Answer. Dr. M. M. Dowler, whose professional skill, long experience, and profound and intimate knowledge of yellow fever are exceeded by no medical gentleman in New Orleans, and confer infallibility upon his opinions on the subject, has positively declared, and published the fact over his own signature, that he saw a bona fide and indubitable case of yellow fever on the 6th of May, which terminated fatally, with black vomit, on the sixth day, being the 12th day of May; which case may safely be recognized and recorded as the first undoubted case of death from yellow fever in the city of New Orleans in 1853.

Question 8. Was not the cholera imported into New Orleans at each and every appearance it made here?

Answer. To this question, I reply most positively and unqualifiedly, no! No foundation has ever existed for such a suspicion.

The great cholera of 1832, being its first appearance in New Orleans, occurred at a time when probably a thousand cases of yellow fever existed in the city.

Unlike every other epidemic, which usually progresses by stealthy and insidious advances, with frequent pauses of several days, the cholera of 1832 rushed into our midst "on the wings of the wind," and swept like an avalanche over our devoted city, and in three days not a vestige of yellow fever existed; that, together with all other diseases, having lost their distinctive characters, and been merged in cholera, and in ten days seven thousand of our inhabitants were swept away.

If ever there was a disease whose modus operandi defied the suspicion of contagious communicability, that disease is Asiatic cholera.

Even the peculiar circumstances under which it made its appearance, forbid the possibility of its having been introduced by shipping.

It occurred at a time when the city of New Orleans was undergoing the ravages of yellow fever, and the records of that period show no arrival of any foreign ship for a long period anterior to its appearance; and at that time no sign of a wharf existed above Canal street, and no craft of any description (save flat boats and skiffs) had ever landed there, and yet the first victims of the cholera of 1832 resided in the (then) Sixth Ward, as high up as Poydras street.

The following extract from a work written immediately after the disappearance of the cholera in 1832, when all the actors in that hideous drama who survived could realize the graphic picture, may furnish some idea of its origin and character, and afford some information as to the probable restraints which quarantine could interpose to prevent the approach of such a visitor:

"The approach of cholera to this city involves a novel and most extraordinary incident; one indeed which is unprecedented in the entire history of pestilences.

"We have heard and read of epidemics which have gradually diminished in severity and in the frequency of their attacks until they have finally subsided or been merged in other diseases, but never before has it occurred that yellow fever, in its fullest and most plenary concentration of autumnal strength and malignity, has succombed to the superior energies of another and more overpowering pestilence, and suddenly disappeared from the scene of action.

"And indeed it was no ordinary exertion of elemental power which thus vanquished and put to flight our ancient enemy.

"We had heard the roarings of the wind afar off, and had felt the gusty breathings of the awakening gale, but like unskillful and improvident mariners, we had neglected to trim our vessel to meet the approaching tempest. Lulled into fallacious and destructive security by frequent contact with the febrile diseases of our own country unscathed, our citizens could not be induced to believe that they would be obnoxious to the icy and withering assaults of the foreign destroyer.

"We had nevertheless had sufficient warnings to have excited our apprehensions.

"A piercing easterly blast, which had for upwards of thirty days swept over our city, heralded the approach of the Asiatic vampire.

"The majestic Mississippi, turbid with the agitating influence of the pestilential breezes, rolled mournfully by our city, like a fearful but magnificent sea of blood.

"The sun withheld his genial rays by day, and the moon her silver beams by night, but in her stead a menacing and ominous comet, that prophetic harbinger of every ill, shook his fell and fiery train, and shed his baleful influence over our land.

"Such was our gloomy and inauspicious condition, when, on the ever memorable morning of the 25th of October, two men were perceived lying on Poydras street in a dying condition, who perished in one or two hours after they were first discovered.

"Large crowds collected about their collapsed and livid bodies, and many were the extraordinary speculations which occurred among the spectators, as to the circumstances which had led to their sudden and mysterious death, among which the suspicion of poison bore a prominent part; but few, very few, conjectured the real cause, and, those who did so, appeared reluctant to acknowledge the sensations of dismay and apprehension which so portentous a supposition created.

"In the course of the same day, a few scattering cases occurred in different parts of the city and suburbs.

"On the 26th the alarm became general, and agitating reports and rumors circulated wildly throughout the city of attacks of disease, fearful in numbers, and terrifically rapid in their progress.

"From that time forward the disease raged with increasing fury, and death stalked abroad with such irresistible sway that almost every hope of escape or recovery seemed to be dissipated."

Such was the cholera of 1832.

Question 9. What are the diseases most commonly introduced by shipping?

Answer. Diseases of undeniable and unquestionably contagious character, such as small-pox, and a few others, may undoubtedly be introduced by shipping, but so far as New Orleans is concerned, there is just as much probability that they are most frequently introduced by gangs of negroes, traveling through the interior, and brought to New Orleans for sale, and there is not a physician in our city, or in the world, who will venture to assert that he has not frequently seen cases even of small-pox, contagious as it undoubtedly is, which could not be traced to any known source; and what is most remarkable is, that whenever small-pox occurs to any extent in New Orleans, there is always an atmospheric condition prevailing, tending powerfully to the establishment of cutaneous predispositions, causing almost every other disease to be accompanied with eruptive affections.

This invariable peculiarity I leave wiser men than myself to explain.

Small-pox, like every other disease, must commence some where, and I see no reason, under a predisposing atmosphere, why it should not commence here.

Question 10. Why are the foreign seaports liable to be the seat of contagious disorders?

Answer. Were this question presented to a contagionist, he would be compelled consistenly to reply:

"Those seaports which do the most business, have the largest influx of foreign shipping, and which are not protected by a rigid quarantine."

For myself, considering but few diseases contagious, I am constrained to reply that I do not believe the fact can be demonstrated that foreign seaports are particularly liable to be the seats of known and acknowledged contagious diseases.

Small-pox is by no means a more frequent or severer visitor in seaports than in the interior, and in thirty years' residence I have never seen a case of genuine itch in New Orleans, and if I am not much mistaken, it is to be sought for far away up the tributaries of the Mississippi, and as for syphilis, the reckless, licentious and debauched habits of so many of our transient population, male and female, may well account for its frequency in New Orleans, as well as in other large seaports.

If, by a forced construction, the term contagious diseases is meant to include cholera and yellow fever, I think I have in my replies to some of the former interrogatories abundantly explained how those diseases, as well as typhus or ship fever, may originate and diffuse themselves throughout a population, and be propagated without reference to contagion.

Question 11. How do you explain the disappearance of the plague at Marseilles, with frequent cases at the Lazaretto?

Answer. Just as I would explain its disappearance in so many other places, which were formerly visited by it.

Just as I would explain the disappearance of yellow fever in so many places, where it formerly prevailed.

If the disease has died out, if I may be permitted to employ the phrase; or if the local atmospheric causes or other circumstances on which it depends for existence do not surround a community, neither yellow fever, cholera, typhus fever, nor even plague can be disseminated and become epidemic in any city or community.

Did not a sporadic case of cholera, pronounced Asiatic by a Coronor's jury, occur in New York city a short time since, under circumstances of extreme anxiety, grief, remorse and depression?

Why did it not generate an epidemic if the disease was contagious?

Did not yellow fever exist in New York some years since, and so well defined was the limit of the pestilential atmosphere which induced it, that the corporation were enabled to establish a barrier by boarding up the streets, and thus to mark the outline of the infected district, and almost all the citizens venturing within the said infected district were attacked, and all who avoided it escaped; nor did any person who was attacked within the infected district ever disseminate the disease when removed out of it.

Did not yellow fever exist in a certain portion of Philadelphia during the year 1853? Was the disease ever disseminated out of the infected district, either by visitors, or by the sick, or, in other words, by contagion? And why not? Because the atmospheric or pestilential causes which created yellow fever did not exist in sufficient concentration to originate the disease out of the immediate locality in which it first appeared.

What that atmospheric or pestilential peculiarity was, it remains for science to discover, but that will never be done by raking in mud puddles and privies, nor folding our arms, acquiescing in the monstrous delusion contagion, or confiding in its abortive progeny, quarantine regulations.

Question 12. Has the quarantine system been effective in preventing the importation of diseases liable to be imported by immigrants?

Answer If by diseases, liable to be imported, is meant our epidemic visitations, such as yellow fever, cholera, and ship or typhus fever, I answer no!

The man who inhales an atmosphere saturated with the causes, and is exposed to the same circumstances which produce any febrile disease, is liable to an attack, unless constitutional debility to its invasion exists.

When yellow fever occurs in New Orleans we have a state of atmosphere which, with our latitudinal topographical position, and our state of climate and temperature, predisposes to its formation, and the same may be said of cholera.

Ship fever is a typhoid disease, which only occurs at that season of the year when a temperature exists, which produces typhoid diseases.

If a man goes on board a ship reeking with the causes of ship fever, he will probably contract the disease.

If an individual is exposed to the atmosphere in which cholera is generated, he may expect an attack of cholera.

But neither cholera, yellow fever nor typhus can become epidemic in a city unless causes exist there per se which are fully qualified to create those diseases, without reference to contagion or importation, and at the appointed times and seasons for the origination and dissemination of those diseases.

This was abundantly demonstrated by the advent of from forty to fifty thousand strangers into New Orleans last fall with perfect impunity, when the whole city was reeking with the causes and consequences of a deadly yellow fever epidemic, and while sporadic cases were daily occurring, and when nothing either positive or conjectural had occurred to account either for the subsidence of the disease or the exemption of the stranger.

The disease had run its course. The clouds which, like a funeral pall, had so long environed and hemmed us in, had dispersed; a new and vivifying atmosphere usurped their places and we awoke to health and happiness.

The foregoing hasty and imperfect replies to the interesting questions propounded by the honorable Legislative Sanatory Commission who have done me the honor to interrogate me, furnish a key to my opinions in relation to our various epidemics, and the probable inutility of quarantine laws.

I consider contagion a nonentity and quarantine a nullity.

This brings me to the last question.

Question 13. At what distance from the city should the quarantine ground be located?

Answer. If all history had not negatived the utility of quarantine regulations and institutions, New Orleans would require at least a dozen establishments, in order to perfect an efficient cordon sanitaire adequate to protect her from the importation of communicable or transmissible diseases.

As it is, with a knowledge of their utter worthlessness in the prevention of those diseases, not to mention their pernicious consequences, it would be but the act of a wise and patriotic Legislature to repudiate them altogether, and to employ the pecuniary means necessary for their institution and support, in the improvement of the city, and the mitigation of human suffering when we were actually assailed by disease.

I remain, gentlemen,
Yours respectfully,
J. S. McFARLANE, M. D.
New Orleans, January, 1854.

New Orleans, Feb. 10, 1854.

Hon. A. Trudeau, Chairman, &c.

I have the honor of answering the questions you propounded to me as follows:

Question No. 1.—Was the epidemic, &c., contagious?

Answer.—It was not, in my opinion.

No. 2.—Was it imported, &c.

Answer.—It was not, in my opinion.

No. 3.—Did not the disease first appear amongst the shipping.

Answer.—I am not aware that it did.

No. 4.—To what cause do you attribute its spread, &c.

Answer.—To atmospheric causes, known to physicians as disordered constitution of atmosphere.

No. 5.—If yellow fever be not contagious, &c., does it not become so under peculiar circumstances?

Answer.—If the medical constitution of atmosphere is deranged, fever occurring in such atmosphere may spread to others.

No. 6. } I am not able to answer.
No. 7. }

No. 8.—Was not the cholera imported by ships, &c.?

Answer.—I do not believe that it was.

No. 9.—What are the diseases most commonly introduced by shipping?

Answer.—Contagious diseases: typhus or ship fever, variola or small pox, &c.

No. 10.—Why are foreign sea ports liable to contagious disorders?

Answer.—Because they are more densely crowded with a filthy population than inland cities.

No. 11.—How do you explain the disappearance of the plague from Marseilles, &c.?

Answer.—Because the plague is a contagious disorder, and may be limited in this way.

No. 12.—Has the quarantine system been effective in preventing importation of diseases, &c.?

Answer.—I have no expression in this matter, as no quarantine has existed in this port since I commenced practice.

No. 13.—At what distance from the city should the quarantine ground be located?

Answer.—I have no expression in this matter either, but should consider that from fifteen to twenty miles sufficiently far off.

With sentiments of high regard,
I remain your ob'dt servant,
A. H. CENAS, M. D.

New Orleans, Feb. 10, 1854.

Messrs. A. Trudeau, J. A. Braud, E. E. Kittridge, } Senate's Com. La. Legisla.

Gentlemen:

I have addressed to each of you, by mail, a copy of my "History of the Epidemic Yellow Fever at New Orleans in 1853," which I beg leave to present as covering most of the series of interrogatories you did me the honor to lay upon my desk a short time ago. This work has been gotten up by me at considerable expense and labor, and as it contains information of vital importance to the people of Louisiana, would it be asking too much to request you to endeavor to get the Legislature to purchase four or five hundred copies at 25 cents a copy? If, after perusing the work, you think it worthy of this notice and patronage, I should be greatly obliged to you for the assistance. I have labored long and hard in the great cause of Public Health in New Orleans, and not without considerable loss of money. My labors have been highly approved by the medical profession, both at home and abroad, and it is really a hard case that I should be allowed to suffer.

In reply to your 8th interrogatory, my reply is No.

To the 9th, the diseases most commonly introduced here by the shipping are typhus fever and small pox.

To the 12th, No.

In regard to the efficacy of quarantine as a protection to New Orleans against yellow fever, I must conscienciously say my conviction is that it will be found utterly useless when tried.

I have the honor to be

Your ob'dt servant,

E. D. FENNER.

COUNTER REPORT

OF THE

JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA,

"TO INQUIRE INTO THE BEST MODE OF PRESERVING THE HEALTH OF THE STATE."

The undersigned, members of the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives, to whom was referred the "inquiry into the best mode of preserving the health of the State," beg leave to submit the follow Report:

In taking into consideration the "best mode to be adopted to preserve the health of New Orleans and of the State," and to prevent the spread of epidemic diseases, we approach the subject with great diffidence, being fully impressed with the importance of the inquiry, and the minute and extended research necessary, properly to elucidate its numerous and varied bearings, that a correct judgment may be formed as to the expediency or policy of establishing quarantines.

In this place we wish to render our acknowledgments for the results of long experience, extended inquiry and research, in relation to the subject in hand, kindly given to your Committee, and to the undersigned personally, by the Sanitary Commission and by individual members of the medical profession of New Orleans.

We would also observe that, in making a Report for the guidance of Legislative action, we do not deem it proper or useful to go into a long detail of the theories entertained by the medical profession in regard to epidemic diseases, but we shall endeavor to come to true conclusions from the facts and the conditions necessarily attendant upon the origin and progress of yellow fever, cholera, &c.

However, in pursuing this inquiry, our first aim should be to understand the nature and origin, or, at any rate, (whether truly understood or not,) to form an opinion as to the nature and origin of the principal epidemic disorders, and the laws governing their extension or propagation. Our decision upon this branch of the inquiry will mainly determine the expediency or inexpediency, the use or uselessness, of establishing quarantines to effect the end in view.

We presume that few, if any, will deny the proposition, that the cause or specific poison which produces most of the epidemic diseases which man is heir to, and to which our attention is called in the present inquiry, exists in and is propagated by the atmosphere.

We may also assume as a truth, affirmed by observation and experience, that, as a prerequisite for the extensive spread or propagation of epidemic diseases, a peculiar epidemic atmosphere must and does exist, brought about perhaps by meteorological or electrical influences.

This last proposition we mention as the most satisfactory explanation of the great spread of epidemics at certain periods, over large sections of country, and the total exemption of the same localities, under apparently the same conditions and circumstances.

We may instance New Orleans, for the last six years having free and unrestricted commercial intercourse with all the world, with no epidemic yellow fever for the first five years—but within that period an epidemic cholera—and at the end of it an epidemic yellow fever.

Now why, under nearly the same apparent circumstances and conditions, did New Orleans escape the last named disease for five years, and be desolated by it on the sixth? The only answer we can give is expressed above.

But the query at once arises, does what may be called (for want of a better term,) an epidemic atmosphere obviate the necessity of inquiring into the local conditions requisite for the propagation of the late epidemic? In our view, we say, by no means. For whether we take it for granted (but for inquiry only.) that the specific poison of yellow fever is never sufficiently eliminated and concentrated by the long continued action of heat and moisture upon decaying vegetable matter, to produce yellow fever, and consequently the disease is not of domestic, but of foreign origin, yet we may bear in mind these truths, viz:

Digitized by Google

1st. That the yellow fever never takes its origin or propagates in a pure atmosphere.

2d. That whether it requires one or more causes and conditions for its existence and propagation, a poisoned atmosphere, arising from decomposing vegetable matter, or freshly exposed earth in which it is combined, long acted on by heat and moisture, is always necessarily present.

3d. That epidemic yellow fever, cholera, influenza, &c., depending on atmospheric constituents for their origin and propagation, are not contagious, as the term is generally understood, viz: a disease depending upon a specific poison, generated by, and emanating from a person, and producing its like in another.

4th. That the yellow fever can be, and has been of domestic origin in hundreds of instances, in different localities and periods, during the last hundred years.

There seems to be a vague idea entertained pretty generally by the people, that a disease, pervading epidemically widely extended and varied localities, with such deadly virulence, must be propagated by, and have its origin in contagion; but if the above propositions are truths, they will find that the means of propagating the cause, if not the cause itself, must and does exist in their midst.

As before observed, we do not intend to enter into details, but will give conclusions, based upon the examinations of facts and conditions, for and against contagion as the propagating principle of yellow fever, cholera, &c., entertained by a large majority of the medical profession throughout the world at the present time.

Some of these conclusions we will mention here.

Dr. Gillkrest, Inspector General of Army Hospital in Great Britain, having had this subject under special consideration, has come to the conclusion that no proof, in the least conclusive, has been adduced in any country, of the contagious properties of yellow fever or cholera, but quite the contrary.

The Board of Health of London have recently put forth a document, stating "that from reports made to them, the fear of infection may be practically disregarded."

In 1849 the authorities of Guy's Hospital, in London, closed their doors against the admission of cholera patients, when surrounded by the sick and dying from that disease, through fear of contagion; but at this time that Institution receives more cases of cholera than any other hospital in that city, having found that it has no contagious property.

Dr. Furlonge, who has had much experience in regard to yellow fever in the West Indies, declares that "none of the medical faculty there believe in the contagion of yellow fever."

We have now come to the point where the question naturally presents itself, viz: If yellow fever, cholera, &c., are not contagious, and always require certain constituents of the atmosphere, of domestic or local origin, to supply a basis or medium for the diffusion or propagation of these epidemic diseases, what means must be adopted most likely to insure the health of the State?

We answer emphatically, keep the atmosphere pure in all localities by the removal of all decaying vegetable matter, freshly exposed earth mould, &c., liable to be acted on by heat and moisture, separately and combined, for long periods.

New Orleans, as the great emporium of the State, may be cited as an example where cleanliness would be most likely to mark its effects, and prove the proposition above assumed.

In what condition are the streets, gutters, yards, lots, and lodgings for the poorer classes in New Orleans and its suburbs?

The gutters of the whole city and suburbs are teeming (no, not teeming, but generally in a perfectly quiescent state) with all the filth that one hundred and fifty thousand people are able to scrape into them, save to a portion of the outbearings of water closets.

A large portion of the streets and gutters in the outskirts of the city proper and suburbs are unpaved, and frequently knee deep in mud and vegetable matter. One half the lots in the city and suburbs are from six inches to a foot lower than the surrounding side walks, which, after every heavy rain, are flooded with water, mixed with vegetable matter, forming hundreds of filthy ponds, surrounded by a tight fence, eight feet in height, and thus to remain until dried up by the intense rays of a sun at 130° of heat by Fahrenheit.

We would here ask, could any one

Digitized by Google

expect a pure and health-giving atmosphere to exist under such circumstances?

If all the chemical science on earth was brought in requisition, a more effective laboratory could not be devised for the concoction of impure air—calculated to destroy human life—than now exists in the city of New Orleans and its suburbs.

Added to this, the poorer classes are suffered to live in hamlets, located in mud and filth, that would endanger the swinish, and by comparison must inevitably be followed by disease and death in the human species.

This being the local condition of New Orleans, we are asked how a salubrious atmosphere is to be insured, and what are the means proposed?

We would suggest:

1st. That every street in the city and its suburbs should be paved.

2d. That every lot in the city and suburbs should be graded to a hight above that of the surrounding side walks, rounded in the centre, and then paved with brick, laid in thick coat of hydraulic cement, (especially every lot built on or enclosed.)

3d. Thoroughly drain, by ditching or grading, all the swamp land in the rear of the city, exposing no more swamp land to the action of the sun's rays, by felling the timber, (its natural protection,) thereby creating a source of malaria equal to the famous Pontine marshes near Rome.

4th. Erect a sufficient number of water works on the river to throw a constant stream of fresh water down every gutter in the city and suburbs, at all times, when the river is teo low to flow the water without the works.

5th. A better construction of the dwellings of the poorer classes, viz: airy and well floored, high and dry above the surface of the earth.

When this is done, the people of New Orleans may boast of the cleanliness of their city, and the comparative salubrity of the air they breathe, with a more confident security from the epidemic diseases that they have heretofore been subject to.

We would here further remark, that the people of New Orleans have no other ground to hope for exemption from the scourge of epidemics than by adopting the above mode suggested.

That we are convinced that no quarantine regulations will have any protecting effect in preserving the health of city of New Orleans or the State from the spread of epidemic diseases.

That the only possible good to be derived from any sanitary regulations, would be by the appointment of a health officer, to be stationed at the Balize, to go out with the pilots, and while the vessels are coming into the river, to examine as to the existence of ship fever and small pox, (and these diseases only.) In case of ship fever and small pox, clean the ship, wash the bodies and clothes of the well, and send them on their way rejoicing; the sick to be detained under some cheap, airy shelter, until well enough to travel.

We believe no possible benefit can be derived from the simplest or most complete system of quarantine at any other locality, and the process above suggested at the Balize is not put forth to operate as a system of quarantine, but for the sole purpose of preventing the herding of the sick and filthy immigrants into the already crowded and ill-ventilated tenements of the poorer classes in New Orleans.

OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE

ON

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The Joint Committee on Charitable and ıblic Institutions, of the Senate and House Representatives, having, with the utmost ıl and dillgence, performed the duty as-ɡned them, now proceed to lay before both ɑnches of the Legislature their report. T First they would premise, that the fatal idemic of last season has much increased e burdens of many of the charitable insti-tions to which the State has been a contri-ıtor: and to the credit of those institutions it said, that their exertions in the holy ıse of charity increased with the exigen :s that called them forth: for notwithstand-ɡ the numbers stricken down by the pesti-ıce which stalked abroad, and the many ɑnts and children deprived of their natu-l protectors, your Committee heard of none ɑinst whom the doors of succor were closed, d to whom the hand of charity was not ely stretched forward. This is a feeling, ınk heaven! which in an especial manner rvades our beloved State; and your Com-ttee feel that the Legislature would be se to its duty, should it fail to partake in Feeling assured that it does, your Com-ttee suggest, below specific appropriations some of the charitable institutions which ıy visited, and trust they will meet your proval. Indeed, if your Committee were ; aware of the many pressing calls on the easury of the State, they would ask for ıny of them a much larger appropriation ın that named, knowing full well how ıch they stand in need of it, and how meri-ıously they deserve it.

The first institution visited by your Com-ttee was the Orphan Boys' Asylum, loca-l in the Fourth District, New Orleans. ıere are now one hundred and eighteen ys in the Asylum, ranging in age from ;ee to thirteen years. It is conducted, under a Board of Directors, by a male Superintendent and a female Matron, both of whom, besides attending to the general administration of the establishment, devote themselves to the education of the inmates. The worthy President of the Direction, Lucius C. Duncan, Esq., has furnished your Committee with an abstract of the financial condition of the institution, from which it appears, that its income last year, from all sources was $13,739 97, all of which, less $4025 97, was expended. The fixed income of the establishment is derived from rents, and was last year $1348 32. The health of the boys seems good. There were twelve apprenticed out last year. The food of the boys seems to be sufficient in quantity and wholesome in quality; but we would suggest to the Direciton that some repairs might, with advantage, be made on the building. The sleeping domitory is far too cold and uncomfortable for winter lodging, even in this mild latitue.

Our next visit was to the Female Orphan Asylum, Camp street, under the superintendence of Sister Regis, assisted by seven others of the same religious order—the Sisters of Charity. This institution is a credit to our common Christianity; and the noiseless but incessant labors of those ministering angels in the care and culture, both moral mental and physical, which they bestow on the parentless little ones over whom they watch, is a practical rebuke to those intemperate zealots who seem to conceive that they best serve God by the diffusion of sectarian prejudices, forgetting that charity has its sanctuary in the heart, and that acts, not words, are the true evidence of its existence.

This institution, (the N. O. Female Orphan Asylum,) received within its walls since June 1st, one hundred and twenty-eight orphans, most of them of tender age. The whole number there now is three hundred and sixty. We have only to repeat what the committees of previous Legislatures have reported: that nothing can be better than the order, arrangement, cleanliness and discipline which pervade the whole establishment. The Asylum has no permanent endowment—it is solely dependent for its maintenance on the annual donation of the Legislature, bequests and donations of individuals; yet the good that it does is incalculable. Another house is now being built in connexion with the Asylum, where girls, when they arrive at the proper age, will be taught a trade, the better to enable them to combat the difficulties of life.

Our next visit was to the Poydras Female Orphan Asylum, Julia street, New Orleans. This institution was liberally endowed by the late Julien Poydras. It is under the direction of an association of benevolent ladies of the city. The number of orphans there at present is one hundred and twenty-four. Your committee, like their predecessors, have not received any statement of the financial condition of the Asylum, and cannot therefore state to the Legislature what it is; and they suggest that hereafter appropriations be withheld by the Legislature from all institutions not furnishing an abstract of their financial condition.

We visited the St. Mary's Orphan Boys' Asylum, situate in the Third District, New Orleans. This Asylum is controlled by a Board of Directors and conducted by some six of a religious society, called the Christian Brothers, who devote themselves to the education of youth; and by a like number of ladies of some religious order, who superintend the household duties. The number of boys in the Asylum is two hundred and twenty-six, ranging in age from four months to fourteen years. The admissions this year were sixty-two. Some of the boys are learning trades in the Asylum, and when a wing of the Asylum, now being raised, is built, this department of industry will be extended. Your committee approve of the whole conduct and management of the establishment,

Your committee visited the Orphan's Home, situate in the Fourth District, New Orleans. This is an Institution which owes its existence to the active sympathy of some ladies in New Orleans, for the number of children which the epidemic of last year placed in a state of orphanage. The President of the Direction is Mrs. Ross. The number of children in the Institution at present is 67. They are of both sexes and range in age from infancy to that of fourteen years. Such of the children as are old enough attend the public schools. The institution is creditable to its founders, and entitled, we conceive, to the patronage of the State.

Your Committee visited the St. Anna's Asylum for destitute Widows and Orphans, and from their examination of it, recommend that a donation of the same amount as that of last year be made to it.

Your Committee visited the Institution of Indigent Colored Orphans, situate in the Third District, New Orleans. After a careful scrutiny of the establishment and the manner in which it is conducted, the Committee recommend that a like donation to that of last year be made it by the State.

Your Committee also recommend that the donation of last year from the State to the Firemen's Charitable Association of New Orleans be renewed.

To the Indigent Widows' (Les Dames de la Providence) Asylum, your Committee likewise recommend that the donation of last year be repeated. It fulfils a benevolent and salutary purpose, and the State in contributing its quota to the support of the Institution, performs an act of which the Legislature should approve.

Your Committee visited the Charity Hospital, New Orleans. The State is represented in the Direction of this institution. Its internal economy is controlled and directed by Sister Regina, (of the Sisters of Charity). Already the financial affairs of the Hospital have been submitted to the Legislature.—Your Committee need not, therefore, recapitulate on that point. It is admitted on all hands, that whether as regards medical and surgical skill, and attendance, careful nursing, cleanliness, and the general arrangement and internal economy of the establishment, it is unsurpassed by any similar institution in this, or perhaps, in any other country. From the law passed by the last Legislature, imposing a tax on foreign immigrants and from other sources, the current income of the Hospital is brought to a point at or near the annual outlay; but the building itself, or at least a portion of it, is in a ruinous—a dangerous state of dilapidation, and to further procrastinate its repairs would be to jeopardise the lives of its inmates and to incur, at no distant day, a much increased expenditure; the Committee, therefore, recommend that an appropriation of $20,000, as stated below, be made to the Hospital for building purposes, and $15,000 towards its general support.

A portion of your Committee visited the St. Vincent Hospital and Asylum at Donaldsonville; their report of its administration is highly favorable. The Hospital is for the reception of indigent sick, and the Asylum for the support and education of orphans; both are immediately superintended by Sister Mary Austin and seven other ladies of the sisterhood, and controlled by a direction. The Committee recommend that an appropriation of $1000 be made to the Hospital, and $1000 to the Asylum.

Pursuant to their duty, your Committee visited the Insane Asylum at Jackson—the receptacle of the most afflicted of God's creatures, for when man's reason is o'erthrown, what a very wreck he is! wanting even the instincts common to many of the brute creation. This institution is specially under the control of, and dependent for its support on the liberality of the State, and she has discharged her duty with characteristic beneficence. The excellent state of the buildings, the cleanly condition of the unfortunate inmates, and the whole economy and administration of the institution, show that the direction have frugally, well and wisely disbursed the funds placed at their disposal, as will be seen by their report for the year 1853, already submitted to this Legislature. It is found necessary in carrying out the original design, and indeed the necessities of the case demand it, that an additional wing be added to the buildings. To enable the directors to effect this, and to meet the unavoidable expenses for the current year, the Committee recommend an appropriation of $20,000 for the former purpose, and $15,000 for the latter purpose. The Committee think it proper to add that the number of patients at present in the Asylum, is 133.

Your Committee visited the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, situate in our immediate neighborhood. This is another of those indexes that point to the benevolence of the State, showing with what maternal solicitude she watches over even the most afflicted of her children. The report of the Directors of the Institution has been laid before the Legislature, and the Committee bear testimony to the correctness of its statements. The number of pupils in the Institution at present is twenty two, those of both sexes included. Their proficiency in the elementary branches of an English education is gratifying in the highest degree, and truly creditable to the principal of the Institution, Mr. Brown.

A new building—one better adapted to the purposes and designs of the Institution—is in the course of erection, and when completed, it is contemplated to add a department for the education of the blind; $25,000 is asked for the construction of this building and the Committee recommend that it be appropriated, together with $8,900 for the suppport, for the current year, of the Institution.

Lastly, the Female Asylum of Baton Rouge was visited by your Committee.—Though limited, the number of inmates being only twenty four, the building is insufficient in size for their comfortable, or rather, proper accommodation. The benevolent ladies who conduct it, ask for an appropriation of $3000, which, besides paying the passing expenses of the school, would aid them in making the desired addition to the building which the Committee agreed to recommend.

And now your Committee having adverted briefly, necessarily so, to the condition of the several Institutions, to visit which they deemed it their duty, beg leave to close their report with the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Finance Committee be instructed to insert in the general appropriation bill, for the present year, the following appropriations:

To Orphan Boys Asylum, Fourth District, N. O.	3,000 00
Female Orphan Asylum, [sister Regis,]	6,000 00
Poydras Female Orphan Asylum	1,000 00
St. Mary's Catholic Boys Asylum	6,000 00
St. Anna's Asylum for destitute widows and children	2,000 00
Institute for Indigent colored orphans	2,000 00
Indigent widows, [les Dames de la Providence]	2,000 00
Orphan's Home	2,000 00
Charity Hospital	15,000 00
" for building purposes,	20,000 00
Insane Asylum, Jackson,	35,000 00
Deaf and Dumb Asylum,	33,900 00
Female Asylum, East Baton Rouge	3,000 00

All of which is respectfully submitted,

G. W. MUNDAY,
Chairman Senate Committee,

D. CORCORAN,
Chairman House Committee.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

ON

AGRICULTURE AND COMMERCE,

WITH REGARD TO

PUBLIC WEIGHERS OF COTTON AND SUGAR.

FEBRUARY 23, 1854.

The Committee on Commerce and Agriculture, to whom was referred a bill entitled "an Act to appoint Weighers of Sugar and Cotton, in and for the city of New Orleans," beg leave to report:

That they have examined with care the various provisions of said Act, embracing as they do, a radical change in the present system of buying and selling Sugar and Cotton, and hence is a matter of great importance to those whose interests are immediately affected thereby.

By this Bill, the "Governor is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, twelve Weighers of Sugar and Cotton for the City of New Orleans, to continue in office for two years, and who shall give bond and security in the sum of $5,000, for the faithful discharge of their duties; and the said Weighers thus appointed shall have power to appoint one or more deputies to aid and assist in the discharge of the duties of said office, each Weigher to be responsible for the faithful conduct of said deputy."

The magnitude of the interests which will be affected by the premises of this bill, demands the serious consideration of the Legislature, and the State should not interfere with the established usages of the trade, until it can be shown that the present mode of delivery of Cotton and Sugar, in the City of New Orleans, is alike unfair to the purchaser or seller.

The Committee have heard of no complaint of a nature to induce them to invoke the aid of the State in selecting public officers to perform that which is now done by weighers selected by those most immediately interested. The passage of this Act, would in the opinion of the Committee, be creating a monopoly of the most odious kind, as the appointing power would to a great extent be in the hands of twelve weighers chosen by the Governor, each of whom is empowered to choose one or more deputies, and the whole number thus chosen to weigh the 1,600,000 bales of cotton, and 150,000 hhds. sugar, annually received in New Orleans, would not probably be much less than one hundred.

But apart from this objection, your Committee see no great reason why the parties engaged in the purchase and sale of sugar and cotton in New Orleans, should not be left to employ their own agent to weigh the same, as in other parts of the State. If it is intended to apply the premises of this Bill to the city alone, why should not it have equal force throughout the State. A large part of the sugar crop (say quite half) is disposed of on plantation, weighed and delivered there. If the system of weighing in New Orleans is wrong, it is equally as important to both buyer and seller to have correct weights of the sugar sold on plantation. These two modes of delivering of the same article would tend to throw discordance either on the one or the other.

By the present system of disposing of sugar and cotton, the factor is the direct agent of the planter, and ought to be presumed to take the same care of his interest in selecting a proper weigher, as in obtaining the best price for the article sold. The direct responsibility of the weigher to the factor, and the factor to the planter, seems to your Committee to be much more precise when the weigher is selected by the factor, than if he were appointed by the State.

Any unfaithfulness on the part of the weigher would lead to the loss of his place; whereas if appointed by the State, the remedy would be beyond his control.

The Bill furthermore provides, that each hogshead of sugar and bale of cotton shall be branded with the name of the weigher, and gross weight thereon, &c. These formalities would only further complicate the purchase and sale of both articles, by unnecessarily retarding their delivery. It is doubtful if one-half of the quantity of either sugar or cotton could be thus delivered, than is done by the present method; and in the crowded state of the levee and cotton presses during a large portion of the busy season, the inconvenience would seriously affect the dealing in these articles.

In conclusion, your Committee look upon the various premises of the bill as so many restrictions placed upon the commerce of the State, instead of leaving a healthful competition, both as regards the nature of the services to be performed, and the compensation.

The Committee therefore report against the adoption of the Bill, and beg leave to be discharged from further consideration of the subject.

Respectfully,

J. A. BRAUD, Chairman.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, BATON ROUGE,
February 15th, 1854.

To the Honorable the President and Members of the Senate:

I have the honor to transmit the accompanying Report of the Board of Administrators and Superintendent of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind.

The rapid increase in the number of pupils admitted to this noble Asylum, coupled with the fact, that there are numerous patients in the Charity Hospital who are afflicted with blindness, and who are likely to become inmates of the former Institution, render it necessary that the Legislature should carry out with the least possible delay, the good work already commenced, by giving to the Institution the aid it requires, to enable it to accomplish the benevolent ends it has in view.

I would, therefore, particularly call the attention of your honorable body to that portion of the report of the Board, asking for an additional appropriation for building purposes, and which, I trust, will meet with your most favorable consideration.

(Signed,) P. O. HEBERT.

REPORT OF THE ADMINISTRATORS.

To the Honorable the General Assembly:

The Board of Administrators of the "Louisiana Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind," respectfully submit their second annual report.

As required by the Act approved March 18th, 1852, we early turned our attention to the erection of permanent buildings for the two institutions under our charge. Anxious to secure as great an amount of competition as possible in bidding for the contracts, we fixed the day for opening proposals on the 18th of August last. Advertisements inviting bids for the furnishing of all materials and labor for the erection of the buildings, or for furnishing materials only, or for the performance of the masonry or carpenters' work separately, or together, were published in the New Orleans, Vicksburg, Natchez and Baton Rouge papers—detailed plans and specifications having been previously prepared and opened for public inspection.

Upon the day fixed for opening the proposals—from a considerable number offered—the Board selected the lowest, and adjudicated the brick work, with all the materials furnished, to separate bidders, at a cost of $12 65 per 1,000 bricks in the wall. The carpenters' work, consisting of the entire framing of the buildings, at a cost of $6,800; and for the lumber, delivered at the river, at a cost of from $10 to $30 per thousand feet. The contracts as above stated are closed, and the contractors are now satisfactorily progressing with the execution of their several contracts.

Those contracts which have been made, provide simply for the erection of the buildings, and preparing the roof for slating. As the other parts of the work could not be progressing in the meantime, we have not thought it as yet expedient to invite proposals far finishing; this, however, will be done as soon as the progress of the building operations shall render it necessary and proper.

In order to carry on the work without delay or interruption, we respectfully recommend at present an appropriation of twenty-five thousand dollars for building purposes.

The Treasurer's report, herewith presented, exhibits the amount of disbursements from March 1st, 1853, to January 28th, 1854. The account of the General Superintendent, accompanying his report, exhibits the amount and minute classification of all expenditures for the support of the Institution, from the date of its organization to the 31st December, 1853. The amount of $8,925, which he estimates as the appropriation required to defray the ordinary and current expenses for the support of the Institution, for the year ending March 31st, 1855, is as small as we should dare to recommend.

It has, from the first, been our desire to open the department for the blind as soon as practicable, and we much regret that any doubt should exist as to our being able to receive this unfortunate class of persons at the opening of the next session. It is still our intention and object to open this department at the earliest moment, the necessity of which has recently been forced upon our attention in the perusal of that portion of the Board of Administrators of the Charity Hospital for the year 1853, which mentions as inmates of that most noble Institution, twenty-three blind persons. If such appropriations are made for the prosecution of the buildings, as will leave us free to urge on the work, we shall probably be able to finish a sufficient number of rooms in the new structure for the reception of such blind pupils as may apply for admission, retaining the mutes in their present quarters until the new buildings are completed.

The grounds in the rear of the buildings are now being enclosed with a plain substantial plank fence; it is designed, when this shall decay, to have a hedge sufficiently grown to afford permanent protection. The grounds, in addition to affording ample room for the exercise and recreation of the pupils, will also be cultivated in garden vegetables, for the supply of their tables.

It affords us pleasure to be able to report the Institution, as far as it has gone into operation, in a prosperous condition. The General Superintendent of the establishment has discharged the duties of his station with promptness, energy and fidelity; and the Board have reason to congratulate themselves in having secured the services of one so eminently qualified in every particular for the discharge of the trust confided to him. Entire harmony and efficiency have characterized the proceedings of the officers in our employ.

The pupils have been well cared for, all their necessary wants supplied; and the establishment, in all its departments, resembles a large, well organized and happy family. In short, we are satisfied that it is, in the appropriate sense of the word, an "Asylum," a home for the unfortunate, where, for a brief period, they may, in the happiness which surrounds them, be led almost to forget their heavy afflictions, and by judicious care and scientific training, be fitted for a life of comparative independence and usefulness. The case does not require the multiplication of words. We have no private or sectional interest to subserve in its advocacy, and it confers no benefits on us, except the satisfaction of witnessing the relief of misfortune and that gratified feeling of State pride with which we regard the progress of such an Institution; sentiments, we believe, entertained by all the good citizens of Louisiana. As the representatives of her sovereignty it is for you to determine what justice, charity, humanity, and her honor require to be done for its benefit.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed,) B. F. HARNEY,
President.

REPORT

OF THE

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

To the Hon. Administrators:

Gentlemen—In making my second annual report to you, it is a pleasing duty to recur to those evidences of permanent usefulness and prosperity, which the history of the Institution during the past year has developed.

The health of our pupils, certainly no small desideratum in any educational enterprise, and, for obvious reasons, especially desirable in this, has been almost without exception good. Though a fearful pestilence has swept over our State, it has passed by our pupils, as if controlled by a power, which, in pity, added not its malignant presence to their accumulated misfortunes.

It was feared that the presence of the epidemic would deter many parents from sending their children to the Asylum, and thus decrease the numbers in attendance during the past year. So far from this being the case, however, our School, as will be seen from the accompanying catalogue, has nearly or quite doubled its numbers since last year. No schools of the kind in the Union, though established in States containing a far greater population than Louisiana, have ever exhibited, so early in their history, a more rapid increase. The same ratio of accumulating numbers has but to be continued another year, to fill in the new buildings all that portion designed for the deaf and dumb.

A gratifying circumstance connected with the reception of new members into the School is, that without a single exception, they are pupils possessing good natural capacities, and, consequently, those who will be benefitted to the greatest possible extent by the offered facilities for improvement. It is a duty, as it should be a pleasure, for those having the care of the unfortunate, to aid the most feeble intellect in acquiring at least the rudiments of an education. But, for reasons not necessary to state, the public take most pleasure in testing the improvement made by minds of the first order. With this penchant it is impossible to contend successfully, especially in the commencement of an Institution. It is, then, fortunate that the admissions of the past have been of a character to test, in future years, the ability of the Asylum to insure the rapid proficiency of pupils possessing the requisite amount of intellect.

It is rare to see in an Institution pupils as happy as ours. They are, yet, so few as to seem much like a large family; and it is no exaggeration to say that they are as strongly attached to the officers and to each other, as are children of ordinary households to their parents, or brothers and sisters. Every attempt is made on the part of the older scholars to content the new comer with his situation. None of the vexations incident to a novitiate in a school of children possessed of all their senses, are here before him. He is at once received and treated as a brother.—Almost uninterrupted harmony marks the pupils' intercourse, and tends most materially to lighten the task of instruction and government.

Our visitors have seemed pleased with the pupils and the School, and have, in all cases, expressed their gratification at the establishment of an institution conferring so many blessings on the unfortunate. This we can scarcely regard so much the result of good already accomplished, as of the kindly feelings of the citizens of Louisiana towards this helpless and deserving class of sorrow-stricken children of silence. When the department for the blind shall have been also put in successful operation; when experience shall have matured our present plans, and time given the seal of permanency to our operations; when we can point not only to results hoped for, but to benefits already bestowed upon the unfortunate, we may well anticipate, that then, these general sympathies of the people, assuming the form of a convinced and abiding public sentiment, will secure for the Institution a lengthened course of future improvement and usefulness.

It was announced in the first annual report, that the department for the blind would be opened at the commencement of the session in the autumn of the present year. Though there is at present little probability of the entire new buildings being prepared for occupancy at so early a period, yet it is not perhaps advisable, at this time, to announce a further postponement of the opening of the blind department. It may be found practicable to finish for these pupils a few rooms in the new structures, so that, although they may not enjoy all the necessary facilities for acquiring an education, such as may come shall be afforded at least some of the comforts and conveniences of their future educational home. The number of blind in the State is but little inferior to that of the deaf and dumb, and their claims to an education, so far at least as this Asylum is concerned, are fully equal—it having been established alike for the benefit of both these unfortunate classes. Should unavoidable circumstances, however, prevent the reception of the blind at the period contemplated, timely notice can be given.

It will be seen from an accompanying statement, that the current expenses of the Institution, from its organization, December 8, 1852, until December 31, 1853, a period of nearly thirteen months, including the purchase of many articles for permanent use, amounted to $9,188 14

Expended previous to March 31,	4,063 70
Expended from April 1, 1853, to December 31, 1853,	5,124 44
Estimate for demands not yet presented,	500 00
Estimated expenditure during the remaining quarter of the current fiscal year,	2,200 00
Total amount for year ending March 31, 1854, in part estimated as above,	7,824 44
Amount appropriated by "Act making appropriations for fiscal year ending March 31, 1854,"	8,925 00
Probable balance of said appropriation which will remain in hands of Treasurer of Institution, April 1, 1854,	1,100 56
Additional appropriation required for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1855,	8,925 00

The appropriation for the year ending March 31, 1854, was based on careful estimates of the several classes of expenditure, and would have been nearly or quite exhausted during the period, had not the prevalence of the epidemic caused the postponement of the commencement of the present session. No cause is now seen for varying the estimates of the last year, except a slight addition to the expenses of the boarding department, consequent on the reception of a considerable increase of pupils anticipated during the coming year. This will however be sufficiently provided for by the unexpended balance; so that for current expenses, as before stated, it will only be necessary, to ask the next Legislature for an appropriation equal in amount to that made by the last.

Though the general health of the pupils has been good, we have been called to mourn the death by yellow fever, of two most valuable officers; Mr. Thomas Wood, on the 13th of September, and Mr. Martin M. Hanson, on the 8th of December.

Mr. Wood had, for a short time, acted as the Steward and Gardener of the Institution, and in the faithful discharge of duty was surpassed by none. His skill in landscape gardening was well known before his employment here; and had he lived, our grounds would have become a permanent memorial of his taste. Once in the enjoyment of wealth and comparative affluence, he shunned not the most arduous labors which his new station had imposed upon him and seemed to take the same satisfaction in tasking his skill for the gratification of others, as in more prosperous days he had experienced in beautifying grounds he might call his own. Even during his last sickness it is a subject of painful regret that his anxiety to discharge every self-imposed duty perhaps cut short his life of humble, unobtrusive usefulness.

Mr. Martin M. Hanson, was the First Assistant Teacher in the Mute department. A mute himself, he esteemed no labor too great, no trial too severe, which might minister to their benefit. His skill as a teacher has rarely been excelled, and he never failed to secure the admiration and love of his class. His well-balanced mind, coupled with the greatest decision and energy of character, made him a most useful officer; his kindness of heart, keen sense of propriety, and unswerving integrity, rendered him a most valued friend and associate. Apprised when far distant, of the loss we had already sustained, and strongly urged by some of his relations to forego his intention of return, he still chose to resume again his duties in the Institution. Death cut short his career of usefulness, and he sank to a grave, which will often in future years be visited by his grateful pupils, who will delight to relate to those who knew him not, the excellencies of their early friend and teacher.

Thus, of three gentlemen, who were a few months since engaged as attached friends in carrying forward the objects of this Institution, two have gone to their final resting place, leaving the survivor of their number to pen these few lines as a feeble testimony of their worth. Of all the associates of former years, the two dearest, most faithful, and, in carrying out this enterprise, the necessary to success, have fallen. Both were previously holding responsible and honorable positions in a distant State, when, among other considerations, moved by friendship for, and remembrance of former associations with the writer, they accepted the situations here tendered.

Though of course aware that this may possibly be the last report which he may have the gratification of presenting to your honorable body, and that the next, perhaps written by a successor, may kindly speak of one as departed, who at least wished well the cause. No regret except that for lamented friends, is felt for engaging in an enterprise from which so much good is to be hoped for the children of misfortune in this State.—Others may fall in its accomplishment, but a higher power than man's guides the destiny of such enterprises as this; and, from success already attained, we may well believe, that as sure as to-morrow's sun shall rise, it will yet rise on this a flourishing Institution, pouring its rich blessings upon the unfortunate mute and blind children of Louisiana.

Allow me, gentlemen of the Board of Administrators, in conclusion, to tender you my grateful acknowledgements for the kindness and courtesy with which my suggestions have been received and adopted by your honorable body, and for the judicious counsel and aid so freely tendered in the management of the Institution. It shall be a principal object of effort during my future connection with the Institution, never to forfeit your confidence, so highly prized, so generously bestowed.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES S. BROWN.

INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB AND THE BLIND,
Baton Rouge, January 5, 1854,

RULES FOR THE ADMISSION OF PUPILS, ETC.

I. All the Deaf and Dumb of the State, between the ages of ten and thirty years, and all the Blind between the ages of eight and twenty-five years, are entitled to an education, free of charge of board or tuition, in this Institution. Persons desirous of placing a pupil in the School, should write to the General Superintendent, informing him of the name, age, residence, of the mute or blind applicant, and the cause, if any, of deafness or blindness. The General Superintendent will immediately answer, stating the time when the pupil will be received.* This course is in all cases recommended, though none will be refused who come at the commencement of the session. Application in behalf of persons of more or less than the required age, will be considered by the Administrators; who reserve to themselves the right to accept or reject such applicants, as they may deem just and proper.

II. Pupils from other States will be admitted to the privileges of the Institution, on payment of one hundred and fifty dollars per annum, in advance, by their parents or guardians.

III. The length of the course of study will be such as to afford to all diligent pupils, possessing ordinary mental capacities, an opportunity of acquiring a good and substantial education; fitting them, as far as practicable, for the common avocations of life. This will generally require seven years. Pupils whose circumstances imperatively require it, or those of merit and promise, recommended by the General Superintendent, and approved by the Board of Administrators, may remain some years longer.

IV. Persons bringing pupils to the Institution, are requested to make out, before leaving home, written answers to the following questions, which are to be left in the hands of the General Superintendent:

1. What is the name of the child?—to be written in full.

2. When born? The year, month, and day of the month.

3. Was the child born blind or deaf? If not, at what age, and by what cause was blindness or deafness produced?

4. Is the blindness or deafness total, or partial? If partial, what can be seen or heard?

5. If deaf, has the child learned to form letters with the pen? If blind, has the child learned to spell?

6. Have any attempts been made to restore hearing or sight? If so, with what success?

7. Has the child been vaccinated, had the scarlet fever, measles, mumps, or whooping cough?

8. Is the child a native of *Louisiana? If not, now long since since was the removal to *Louisiana?

9. Has the child any disese, or is he or she subject to any peculiar attacks of sickness?

10. Are there any cases of blindness or deafness among the kindred? If so, what relationship do they sustain?

11. What are the names and post-office address of the parents or guardian?

12. What are the names of the child's brothers and sisters?

V. Parents or guardians are required to furnish, annually, to each pupil the following clothing, etc.:

For Males—Two woolen coats, and two thin do.; two thick vests, and two thin do.; two pairs woolen, and three pairs thin pantaloons; six shirts, six pairs socks, and three pairs shoes, or boots; two hats or caps, and one palm-leaf hat; two fine combs, two pairs wooden combs; two pairs suspenders, four handkerchiefs, and three cravats.

For Females—Four calico dresses, and one white do.; one bonnet, one sun-bonnet.; three changes of under-clothing; five pairs stockings, three pairs bootees, one pair slippers; two night-gowns, two night-caps, four pocket handkerchiefs, one shawl, three hair combs, one coarse and two fine combs.

The clothing should all be legibly marked with indelible ink. Each pupil should have a trunk. In addition to the above, the sum of $5 00 should be deposited with the General Superintendent, for

RECEPTION OF VISITORS.

Citizens of the State and strangers are admitted to the school-rooms, each day, from 10 to 12 o'clock, A. M., Saturdays and Sundays only excepted.

* Blind pupils, see Rule X, cannot be received until October, 1854.

* In case of pupils sent here from other States, the State of residence will of course be substituted for "Louisiana."

MINORITY REPORT.

OF THE COMMITEE APPOINTED TO APPORTION THE REPRESENTATION OF THE STATE.

The undersigned members of the Joint Committee, appointed to divide the State into Senatorial Districts, and apportion representation among the Parishes and Election Districts, ask leave to present the following Minority Report:

The undersigned are fully apprised of the importance of the duties assigned them, and deeply regret that there was not unanimity of opinion on this important subject in your Committee.

The undersigned, disclaiming all intentions of a factious opposition on their part, submit the following as some of the reasons that compel them to dissent from the report of the Majority.

The undersigned believe that the doctrine of Equal Representation is too well settled to admit of a cavil in this place. And the undersigned are equally certain that when circumstances prevent, or positive law forbids that exact equality which constitutes the beauty and strength of the Representative system, it is nevertheless an imperative duty to approximate as nearly as possible to that equality.

Have the Majority done this?

Most assuredly they have not!

There are nineteen Parishes in this State, (nearly one-half) with an aggregate population of 88,551, and they are represented at the ratio of 4,660, only a little over half of the ratio adopted by the Majority. The undersigned having these facts before them, and the Constitution declaring and commanding that Representation shall be equal and uniform, feel impelled from a high sense of duty to recommend the lowest ratio possible under the Constitution, which is 6,503, and in so doing feel that they are simply fulfilling a constitutional obligation. The, undersigned would further suggest as a consideration worthy the attention of this House, that we are now making this apportionment on a basis that is entirely novel to the people of this State, and one too, that is already in anticipation, odious to a large portion, if not a majority of them, as depriving them of their proper right and influence in this House, for which reason policy as well as duty should dictate to us to adopt that ratio which would be least likely to deprive any Parish or District of its present representation.

The undersigned have also to state that they dissent from the report of the Majority in the division of the State into Senatorial Districts.

The undersigned are clearly of opinion that the formation of large districts, (out of the City of New Orleans,) with two Senators, is in contravention to the spirit and true intent of the 16th article of the Constitution, and is only permitted by the Constitution when absolutely requisite in carrying into effect the other greater features, equal and uniform representation.

The undersigned are fully convinced that the District composed of the Parishes of Caddo, De Soto, Sabine and Natchitoches, is in express violation of the latter clause of article 16 of the Constitution, which says: "If a Parish or District fall short of, or exceed the ratio one-fifth, then a District may be formed, having not more than two Senators; but not otherwise. Caddo and De Soto are two contiguous Parishes, having an aggregate population (19,130,) large enough for one District, and do not exceed the ratio (16,011,) one-fifth; therefore there cannot be any plausible reason for that District being joined to another.

Sabine and Natchitoches are two contiguous Parishes, having an aggregate population (18,485,) large enough for a District, and do not exceed the ratio one-fifth, demonstrating clearly that the contingency under which alone such Districts may be formed, not having occurred, such Districts can only be formed by doing violence to that clause of the Constitution.

The undersigned herewith submit a project showing the number of Senatorial Districts and their population, together with the population of each Parish, and the number of Representatives every Parish has, under each ratio, 6,502 and 7,000.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT

OF THE

JOINT COMMITTEE ON THE PILOTAGE SYSTEM.

The joint committee appointed to inquire iuto the Pilotage System, pursued at the mouth of the Mississippi river, under a resolution of which the following is a copy:

"Resolvod by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Assembly convened, that a joint committee of three upon the part of the House, and—upon the part of the Senate, be appointed to examine into the system of Pilotage, established at the mouth of the Mississippi river, with full power to send for persons and papers, and report to to this house on or before the 15th of February next,"

Have the honor to report that a portion of the committee remained in the city, to acquire such information as would throw light upon the subject under investigation, and a portion of the committee visited the South-west Pass, which is considered as the head-quarters of the Pilots, and where the books and accounts of the association are deposited. Your committee went into a thorough investigation of the fisca. concerns of the Pilots, of the manner in which they discharged the important duties confided to them, and of the relations of these men under their present organization, with the interests of commerce, and consequently with the welfare and prosperity of the Statel Your Committee, after careful observation of the operation of the Pilotage system and elaborate examination of the mode and manner in which it is administered, have arrived at the conclusion that the laws respecting the pilotage of the month of the Mississippi cannot be changed for the better for the advantage of commerce or of the community in general. Various rumors are afloat relative to the revenues of the pilots, and the manner in which their duties are performed, all of which are utterly unfounded or grossly exaggerated. Your Committee, on a comparison of the revenue and expenditure for the years 1843 and 1844 with those of the years of 1852 and 1853, an interval of eleven years, find the following results.—The share of profits distributed to each man in the year ending August 31st, 1843, was $2080 00

Do. for the year ending August 31,				1844,	1704 44
Do.	do	do	do	1852,	1839 13
Do.	do	do	do	1853,	2076 39

Thus it is shown that the income of the pilots has not been augmented in the course of eleven years, although the number of vessels passing the bar outward and inward, has considerably increased, but the share of distribution money to each is kept equal, by the increased number of pilots rendered necessary by the increase in the amount of work to be performed. Vessels taken over the bar of the Mississippi by pilots of the Louisian Association during the year ending August 34st, 1843 inwards and outwards—

Salling vessels.....	3266
Steamers	349
Making that year, vessels C	3615

The number of vessels brought over the Bar during the year ending August 31st, 1853, sailing vessels—3601; steamers, 413—showing in this year 4014 vessels. The number of vessels crossing the bar of the River has not increased in proportion to the augmented commerce of the port of New Orleans, but the amount of tonnage has greatly increased, a brief statement of facts will explain this seeming mystery.

Ten or fifteen years ago, the largest ships that ascended the Mississippi, were of the burthen only of five to six hundred tons; of late, ships of much greater burthen frequent our waters—at this moment there are lying alongside the Levee in New Orleans, ships of one thousand, eleven hundred, and fifteen hundred tons; on an average, one of these vessels carries thrice the burthen of the largest ships that entered the mouth of the river fifteen years ago. At the same time, your committee would respectfully observe that the large ships of the present day draw no more water, and, consequently, pay no higher rates of pilotage than their smaller and less capacious predecessors, hence the income of the Pilots has not increased in the same ratio with the commerce and tonage of the port. The amount of capital owned and invested by the Association in different kinds of property is $65,085; this property comprises six schooners or Pilot Boats, the cost of which was $5,000 each, twelve whale-boats, of $300 each; twelve yawls, $130 each; two launches, $100 each; Pilots' Hall at the S. W. Pass, $2,000; Pilots' Hall at the Balize, $1,500; Sail Loft and Carpenter's Shop, $1,500; Kitchen and Offices, $1,000; Look-out at the Balize, $1,500; Boat Shed and Wharf, $500; School House at the Balize, $2,000; thirteen slaves, (pull-away men) $15,600; Lookout and store rooms, S. W Pass, $500; Kitchen and offices, S. W. Pass, $900: Boatmen's House, S. W. Pass, $600; Boat Shed and Wharf, $500; Water Tanks, Cordage, Blocks, Lumber, Spars, &c., &c.. $485, besides a number of other items unnecessary to be here detailed, but all absolutely indispensable to the proper and efficient carrying-on of the business.

Your committee feel bound to observe that the land, or more correctly speaking, the marsh on which the habitations of the pilots are located, from its geographical position, and the nature of the atmosphere by which it is surrounded, is, without doubt, the most unhealthy region in the United States. Whilst your committee was at the Southwest Pass, in the depth of a winter marked by inclement cold in other parts of the country, and while a seat at the fireside was comfortable EVEN THERE, we found no rest from the sand-flies in the day-time; and in the open air when the weather becomes a little warmer, at the approach of spring, the muscitoes, sand-flies, and other insects still more annoying, must render these marshes almost intolerable to the human beings who, like the pilots and their families, unfortunately for themselves, are compelled to inhabit them. Accordingly, we find the mortality among the pilots exceedingly great. It appears from a very able report of a joint committee to the General Assembly,—of which Mr. Alex. C. Bullitt was the chairman,—that the number of pilots being forty-nine on the average, the number of deaths by drowning and disease, for six years ending with the year 1845, was sixteen, or one-third of the whole number!—and this was among the Branch Pilots, or men holding the State's commission.

In the eight years from 1846 to 1853, both inclusive, the mortality among the same class of men was twenty-six—the number of pilots being sixty-one on an average—that is, upwards of 43 per cent., or more than two-thirds in eight years! This is a mortality that is unprecedented in any place that we know or have read of, except where an epidemic, plague, yellow fever or cholera, prevails.

From these facts, it becomes as clear as figures can render any proposition, that an able-bodied man, in the vigor of youth and health, assuming the profession of Pilot at the mouth of the Mississippi river, is subjected to an equal chance of living or dying in a very brief lapse of time; and yet there are persons who would drive these men from their position to make way for others, no matter who they may be, whose characters, qualifications and fitness are wholly unknown.

Your committees would here remark that in other parts of the Union—New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore—the pilots live in far more comfort than ours do at the mouth of the Mississippi; while the Northern pilots encounter no greater hardships or dangers, and, in proportion to the expenses of living, are better compensated. In these Northern ports the the pilots live with their families in the city. They merely step from the wharf to the vessel which they are engaged to take to sea, and remain at the station, near the mouth of the bay or river till an opportunity offers of piloting an inward bound vessel up to the city; and this is the whole routine of their duty, with the exception of their making an occasional excursion, as our Mississippi pilots do, thirty, fifty, or sixty miles to sea in quest of vessels bound in. Hence, it is easy to perceive that the situation of the Northern pilots is infinitely more comfortable and pleasant than ours. The latter live on a mud bank throughout the year, unless while employed in their perilous avocation on the water. The former enjoy all the advantages and pleasures of home, in a populous city. Put the question to any one who knows the operation of the Northern and Mississippi pilot systems, which would he prefer to follow? Can it be supposed that he would answer in favor of imminent risk of life, having to pass his days meanwhile on a mud bank, exposed with his family to the ills of overflow and poisonous insects. Your committee have heard exclamations from ship captains and others familiar with the localities, that they would not exercise the profession of pilot at the mouth of the Mississippi for five thousand dollars a year, or for any compensation that could be named.

The compensation received by our pilots is not greater, generally speaking, and in some instances, less than is received by the pilots of the principal ports of England, and in proportion to the expenses of living and relative comforts, not near so great as those of the pilots of other ports in the United States.

The present members of the Pilots' Association comprise a body of seafaring men, sober, hardy, intelligent, correct and manly in their deportment, and eminently patriotic and public spirited in their disposition. At the commencement of the late war with Mexico, they called upon the proper authorities for a few pieces of heavy cannon, with which they might repel any attempt of the enemy's cruisers to enter the mouth of the river. They were regularly drilled and experienced at the big guns till they became proficient, and it is paying those brave seamen no compliment to say that any enemy that came under their fire whilst thus prepared and ready for him, would have been glad to get out of the way as soon as he could. With regard to the allegation against the pilots, that vessels under their charge sustain loss or damage from their carelessness or neglect, your committees have made careful inquiry into the matter, and are compelled to conclude that it is in a great measure or wholly unfounded. Your committees have heard of very few cases of loss or damage to vessels since the year 1837, when the present pilotage system went into operation, which, on good and credible evidence, they can believe were caused by ignorance or neglect of pilots.

In truth, your committees are of opinion that accidents of this kind are less frequent at the mouth of the Mississippi, in proportion to the number of vessels taken under charge, than at any other pilot station in the Union or in the world.

Respectfully, &c.,

CASIMIR LACOSTE,
Chairman of the Senate Committee.

HENRY M. SUMMERS,
Chairman of the House Committee.

REPORT

OF THE

STATE ENGINEER,

ON THE BAYOU LAFOURCHE.

STATE ENGINEER'S OFFICE,
Baton Rouge, Feb. 21, 1854.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened:

Gentlemen—I herewith respectfully submit a preliminary report of my Assistant, Mr. A. S. Phelps, appointed under resolution passed by your honorable body requiring an immediate survey of the Bayou Lafourche. Owing to the limited time allowed for this work, I consider the surveys only sufficient to indicate in all probability the best plan to be adopted to relieve the bayou, and the great and pressing necessity that immediate relief should be obtained. My opinions upon this subject agree generally with those expressed by Mr. Phelps, in the report, upon which I beg leave to make the following remarks:

The elevation of levees will not remedy the evil, and if it could, they would have to be raised from a point far above their present elevation in the lower section, on a direct inclined plane to Donaldsonville. The top of the present levees, now form two curves. From Donaldsonville down for the first twelve miles, the fall per mile according to Prof. Forshey's survey is more than seven times as great as it is from Thibodeauxville down to Lockport, near the place of the obstructions, filled up there by deposit, the fall immediately augments from that point down to the sea.

If the levees were raised, it would have to be done in such a manner that this curve or depression in the top of them would be taken out, which would require great elevation at the lowest point; and when executed, would so diminish the fall per mile in the bayou, that deposits would be made in its whole length; and finally end in raising the lower section of the stream as high as it is now at Donaldsonville, when there would be no current at all in the bayou.

Exactly the same results would be obtained in case the obstructions were removed. The whole fall from Donaldsonville to tide water cannot be more than about thirty feet; divide the fall by the whole number of miles in present length of bayou, say 120, and we have 3.05 inches fall per mile, which by any calculation based upon the dimensions of the bayou at Donaldsonville, could only give a current equal to from 1¼ to1¾ miles per hour, which would not, nor has it ever been fast enough to prevent the filling of the stream by deposit. The sea is too far off, by the course the water now takes, for so small a stream to transport its heavy load of sediment. This is the great cause, although accelerated by the obstructions thrown in by the order of Gen. Jackson, why this stream has been gradually filling up in past years, below the point where steamboat navigation had a tendency to keep it open.

There are really but two means by which the condition of this bayou can be permanently improved. One is to make a new mouth which will open the bayou to the sea level in so short a distance from the Mississippi River, that when the whole fall to the mouth, at the sea level, shall be divided by its diminished length, it will give sufficient fall and current per mile to keep the sediment in motion. A new mouth made at the outlet proposed, will, without much doubt, produce this effect. The other is to totally close the stream at or near Donaldsonville. A partial closure will diminish the current already too slow, and to cause it to fill up sooner than it would if let alone. Locks will produce the same effect more slowly, cost more money than any other plan, and not give navigation, unless placed some distance down the bayou, and then the levees raised from them up to Donaldsonville, to the same hight they are at that place. A total closure will increase the current in the Mississippi below, cause the loss of navigation in the bayou, and most of all, forever prevent the formation of new deposits on the low lands near the sea, which are now perfectly worthless. The continual flow of this stream into the proposed lake, would finally end in making good land of it, and in reclaiming much of the surrounding sea marsh, which would otherwise continue to the end of time, not only worthless, but the cause of disease and death.

I would therefore most earnestly recommend the adoption of the proposition of outlet, to be carried into execution in accordance with the plans to be made hereafter, from proper surveys; and I would even go so far with it as to turn the whole water of the bayou through the outlet, and permanently close the stream below, so that it should always remain a good canal, if it should, after sufficient surveys, be found practicable. I propose to go on and have the surveys completed under the instructions already given, that I may be able to answer, satisfactorily, all the queries contained in the resolution.

I am fully convinced that the immense amount of swamp and overflowed land now belonging to the State, which is at present perfectly worthless, would, after being saved from inundation by this improvement, shortly sell for more than enough to pay for it.

The attention of the Legislature was called to the great importance of this subject in the year 1847, by Governor Hebert, then State Engineer, when an enlargement of the bayou could be more easily have been effected than at present. No action having been taken in the premises at that time, the evil has gone on increasing ever since.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

GEO. W. MORSE,
State Engineer.

BATON ROUGE, February 20th, 1854.

To G. W. MORSE, ESQ., State Engineer:

Sir:—In conformity with your instructions dated the 27th ultimo, I have made a reconnoisance and partial survey of Bayou Lafourche and its levees, for the purpose of obtaining the information therein called for. Herewith you will please find one book containing the field notes of said survey, and fifteen diagrams showing the cross sections, velocity, etc., at the several points thereon designated.

By an inspection of these notes and diagrams it will be seen that said bayou has closed or diminished in its dimensions in the lower half of its length, to such an extent as to be unable to discharge through its own channel, the amount of water which freely flows from the Mississippi River through the upper half of its length whenever the water in said river rises above a point 10 feet below its highest water mark—This fact was most conclusively proved while I was engaged in making the survey, by the occurrence of five crevasses, on the 9th and 12th inst., in the vicinity of the point where the bayou has the least dimensions.

For the purpose of more clearly understanding the subject at a glance, I have prepared the following table containing a portion of the data which is exhibited more in detail in the field notes and diagrams.

* The Levees being at a great distance from the banks, it is proper that the discharging capacity of the Bayou below the top of the levees at this point, should be reduced to about twelve hundred square feet.

† In comparing the results from this cross-section, with those of others, allowance must be noted for time elapsed, and the rise during the time which was one foot nearly.

The cross section taken at R. R. Barrow's plantation, the second in the above table, it is believed, shows the minimum dimensions that can be found in the upper portion, or say within fifteen miles from the head at Donaldsonville, and is nearly five times greater than the dimensions of the bayou for a distance of eight or nine miles in length, commencing about 10 miles below Lockport, and extending from thence down. Whenever the water in the bayou reaches its highest point at Donaldsonville, by the greater declivity of its upper strata, the velocity there must necessarily be increased to an amount probably sufficient to carry as much water per square foot of its cross section there, in a given time, as can be discharged through the lower or diminished portion of the bayou, per square foot of its cross section, at its point of greatest velocity, or nearly so. In order to retain within its banks and discharge between them this amount of water, it will require either that the levees be elevated or the channel enlarged, so as to give a cross section equal, or nearly so, to that found in the upper portion of the bayou. Neither of these measures in my opinion, are practicable. In order to make the bayou itself capable of discharging the water flowing into its upper section during high water in the Mississippi, will require a very considerable enlargement for a distance exceeding more than fifty miles in length, through material composed of logs, tree tops, stumps, roots and sediment intermixed, extremely difficult to remove.

If the above conclusions are correct, it then becomes proper to inquire if there can be provided any other remedy for the evil. Three propositions have been suggested.

The first, which would undoubtedly be the surest, and could be executed at the least expense, would be to close the bayou at Donaldsonville, by a levee across its mouth. It is supposed, however, this plan will meet with great opposition from those residing on the Mississippi river, who fear it would operate so as to cause a greatly higher rise of its waters, or an increase of velocity dangerous to the river banks and levees. Although I do not agree with those who fear such a result; yet due deference to the opinions of those who are so vitally interested, prevents me from recommending this plan.

The second plan suggested is the construction of a lock at Donaldsonville, which shall admit only so much water as the bayou is able to discharge through its least dimensions, and large enough to admit of the passage of such steamboats as ordinarily enter it. This plan, without doubt, could be executed in such manner as would secure the country from overflow, and would not, at first, seriously interrupt the navigation; but in addition to the objections which might be urged against the first plan, and to which it is nearly equally liable, it is objectionable on several other grounds. First, the great expense of its construction and maintenance; and secondly, its effects upon the bayou itself. There can be no doubt that this plan, if put in execution, would cause the whole bayou to fill up, within a limited time, by the deposit of sediment resulting from its consequent diminished velocity.

The third plan proposed, is to dispose of the surplus water by means of an outlet. This being the measure, if any, it is supposed will be adopted, I have given to it the greatest possible attention, which the limited time allowed for this investigation would admit, and have thoroughly examined all the sections of the country necessary, in order to determine where this plan can best be executed.

On the right of the bayou no outlet can be made, sufficient for the purposes required, except by the construction of several extensive new channels, and a great enlargement of bayous of much length, before the surplus water could be discharged into any of the bays of the sea. This great distance would so considerably diminish the amount of fall per mile, as not to afford sufficient velocity to keep open the channels.

On the left bank of Bayou Lafourche an outlet can be made with great facility, amply sufficient not only to protect the country from overflow, but if desired, so worked as would prevent the injury resulting to the early growth of crops by the flowing of transpiration water through the levees, and thence through the ditches in the fields; and also requiring but little hereafter to be expended for the maintenance of the levees. The best point to locate it, taking all things in consideration, will be found about 6 miles above Lockport, and at a distance of about eight miles, discharging the water into Bayou des Allemands, at a point ten or twelve miles above Lake Ouacha or Salvador.

The cross section of Bayou des Allemands, shown on diagram No. 15, is equal to ten thousand five hundred and eight square feet, and is a tide water bayou, with a moderate current running either way, according to the tide. Lake Ouacha is a body of water about ten miles wide, and fifteen miles long, averaging about twelve in depth, and may, from the great capacity of its outlets, be considered, for this purpose, as equivalent to the sea.

In case it shall be determined to make the outlet as above suggested, no time ought to be lost in commencing the work, if it is desired to serve for protection from the high water of next season, as about three-fourths of the channel and levees to be made can be executed to the best advantage with a steam excavating machine, which will require some time to procure and have ready to put in operation.

A waste-weir on the bank of the bayou at the head of the outlet will be necessary, in order to govern the amount of water to be discharged through it; and it will be of the utmost importance in case this work shall be ordered, that it should be put in charge of a competent and experienced Engineer, or else there may be great risk of failure. Waste-weirs appear to be simple enough to the casual observer, but the observations of all engineers who have had much experience of their working, even on a small a scale as on canals, proves that the utmost caution and skill must be observed in their construction, or they will become undermined.

Digitized by Google

If properly constructed, they admirably perform the services required of them; require but little expense for maintenance, and can be easily governed so as to discharge exactly the amount of water desired, and no more. An outlet made without the security affored by a waste-weir, might very likely become unmanageable, by reason of the peculiar nature of the earth composing the banks of the bayou and outlet, and also by reason of the large amount of sedimentary matter contained in the water, which is liable to be deposited under certain circumstances. It thus might operate so as to cause damage by overflow, though in another locality, to an amount equal, or nearly so, to what might be expected to accrue in the absence of any improvement.

From the data as yet obtained it is not possible to estimate very exactly what will be the amount of money required to construct a channel, levees, waste-weir and bridge, such as may be suitable to the case. Some additional data are requisite, even before it can with safety be determined what dimensions should be given them. It is believed, however, that the sum of one hundred thousand dollars will be more than sufficient.

The resolution calling for this investigation requires that the causes of the formation of the obstructions found in Bayou Lafourche shall be reported on. The undersigned, from his residence and avocations, has possessed favorable means of observing the changes which have taken place in said bayou, during the last 26 years. According to his observations the bayou, during that period of time, has been gradually and greatly increased in its dimensions in the upper section, and very materially diminished in the lower section, and this change appears to be yet in progress.

The primary cause was the partial closure of the bayou about ten miles below Lockport, in the year 1814, by order of Gen. Jackson, in order to protect the country from invasion. This obstruction consisted of trees and logs thrown in the channel, which formed a nucleus for the formation of the middle banks which are shown on diagrams Nos. 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8.

The secondary and more effective cause results from the constant navigation by steamboats of the upper section only of the bayou since that time. They rarely pass below the points where the obstructions exist. In a stream of so small dimensions as this bayou, running through alluvial and loose earth, generally, the passage of each steamboat stirs up the mud on the bottom and sides considerably, and the velocity of the current being sufficient, the mud and earth thus loosened and put in motion, is transported to the lower section of the bayou, whose banks and bottom are left undisturbed, and it is there deposited. That this process, and other minor causes, have been in constant operation for many years is certain, and will eventually result in an almost or entire closure of the bayou between the point where the steamboat navigation ceases, and the point where the tidal currents are sufficiently active to prevent the deposits. This work has now progressed to such an extent as has required the levees between Donalsonville and Thibodaux to be made more than twice as high as were deemed sufficient twenty-five years ago. The best levees that can now be maintained, afford but an uncertain and precarious protection from overflow between Thibodaux and Lockport, and below this latter named town no protection whatever in times of extremest high water. If no remedy is applied to this case, the whole of the country below Lockport will shortly be abandoned by its inhabitants, (in fact very many settlements are observed already vacated,) and the limits requiring abandonment will gradually and surely move upwards until it nearly reaches to the town of Thibodaux, and that at no distant period of time. The amount of labor now required to augment and keep in repair the levees on the bayou as they are, under the present circumstances, costs more annually, than the amount which will be required to make the improvements proposed, and yet only afford partial protection from overflow.

It is not supposed that the improvements herein proposed, even, will answer the purpose for which they are designed forever; but it is believed they will protect the country from overflow for a considerable length of time, after which a closure of the bayou at Donaldsonville will become necessary, unless the outlet proposed shall be operated so as to form a continuance of the main bayou, or new ones be made.

I have been requested to state in this report what would be the probable effect of the proposed improvement, as it regards the public lands belonging to the State, known as swamp lands. By an examination in the Land Office, it was ascertained that the total amount of these lands affected by the onerflow of Bayou Lafourche, exceeds eight hundred thousand acres; the greatest portion consists of low prairies or marshes, which must remain nearly valueless until reclaimed by drainage. As near as can be judged, there is of these swamp lands about fifty thousand acres which would probably be sold under the provisions of existing laws, within a short time, if the overflow of the waters of the bayou can be arrested.

Hereto I annex two tables, useful for reference in comparison with the data in table A, foregoing, and which have been compiled from the register kept at Donaldsonville, by Mr. Gingry, who deserves great credit for the constancy and fidelity with which he has kept, for several years, a record of the rise and fall of water in the river and bayou at that place, and also of meteorlogical observations. If in addition to his register, the velocity at the different stages of water was known at given points where the cross sections of the river or bayou was also known, many useful results might be calculated therefrom; and it is to be hoped that provision may be made for collecting and preserving data of this kind.

STATE ENGINEER'S REPORT ON THE MOUTH OF THE PLAQUEMINE.

STATE ENGINEER'S OFFICE,
Baton Rouge, February 20, 1854.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, in General Assembly convened:

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with Resolution No. 264, approved April 29, 1853, I beg leave to submit the following remarks upon the subject of the Bayou Plaquemine. In order to place this subject in its proper light before your honorable body, I have sought information from all sources where I had reason to believe it could be relied upon, and therefore insert the copy of a letter, politely furnished me by the Hon. John Moore, member of the Senate, in which is detailed much valuable information, dated Feb. 12, 1854:

"In answer to your verbal inquiry in relation to my knowledge of the improvements made to the navigation of the Bayou Plaquemine, I have to say, that from 1804 to 1819 all such improvements were made by the people of Attakapas and Opelousas. A few stumps and snags were removed, and a cordell road was opened from the Indian Village to the Mississippi. I do not recollect, and have no means of ascertaining the cost.

March 3, 1819, an act passed authorizing the parishes in Attakapas and Opelousas to levy taxes, not exceeding the amount of the State tax, in each, and appropriate the same to the improvement of Plaquemine, by removing the stumps and snags in the channel, and making a cordell road from the park. Under that act about twelve thousand dollars were raised, and the work let out to the lowest bidder, in sections. The sum proved insufficient, and on the 14th February, 1821, the Legislature added an appropriation of six thousand dollars, payable in two yearly instalments. The whole amount expended was between seventeen and eighteen thousand dollars.

March 22, 1827, an act passed establishing a navigation company for the improvement of that stream, to be composed of the parishes in Attakapas, Opelousas, Rapides and Avoyelles. Lafayette, St. Landry and St. Martin consented, and became stockholders, and expended about twenty thousand dollars, principally at the entrance. The plan followed was the construction of piers, secured by piles, near the entrance in the main channel, to prevent the drift from entering, and to open and deepen a small canal that existed before the cession of Louisiana, entering the bayou from the river, below the piers. There was then an island between the canal and the channel, of considerable extent. The piers were swept away the first high water, and then a row of stout piles was driven in across the main channel. This work stood firm, and gave a free open navigation, and prevented drift from entering for several years, but the lower bank of the canal began to wash away rapidly.

Doubts arose as to the right of the State to authorize tolls to be collected, and the company abandoned the works.

April 2, 1832, an act passed authorizing the appointment of a State Civil Engineer. It was some time, however, before an appointment was made.

March 4, 1833, an act passed creating a Board of Public Works, to consist of nine members.

In the winter of 1833–'34, under the auspices of the Board and directions of Mr. Crozat, then Civil Engineer, Judge Baker acting as Assistant Engineer, works were again commenced at the mouth, in order, principally, to protect the town of Plaquemine.

Piles were driven across the canal near the lower end, and the lower bank protected by piles, fixed with plank intended to prevent the wash, and an opening was made through the piles in the main channel for the passage of boats, protected by piles above, according to the plan in your office made by Mr. Bruisson, Assistant Engineer. My impressions are that the cost was about twelve thousand dollars. This work was found to be a good protection to the navigation for several years, until some of the outer piles gave way, when the entrance was occasionally stopped with drift. I suppose that the exact cost will be found among the records of the Board, as well as of subsequent improvements.

Besides these works, a buoy or floating break-water was placed at the entrance to prevent drift from entering, (my impressions are by Mr. Bringier, the then Surveyor General of the State.) An appropriation of two thousand dollars was made for the pur. ose.

Digitized by Google

There was also an appropriation of about two thousand dollars made to clear out a raft that obstructed the navigation previous to the construction of the works at the mouth.

You have, no doubt, in your office, the records of all improvements subsequently made.

You will perceive that a great portion of the expenditures were borne, exclusively, by the inhabitants of Opelousas and Attakapas.

The great mistake made was in the opening and deepening of the old canal, to which may be attributed the sole cause of the extended width of the present entrance, and increased quantity of drift entering."

The resolution above referred to provides that the State Engineer shall report upon the following propositions:

"First: Upon the practicability of so closing said Bayou Plaquemine as wholly to prevent the entering of rafts and drift-wood in said bayou, and to permit the water to pass through, or such other improvement as he may deem best.

Second: Upon the best manner and probable expense of constructing said work.

Third: Upon the propriety of, and the benefits likely to result from said work, and

Fourth: Upon the danger of leaving said bayou open, and the possibility and probability of its enlarging its capacity, and diverting the Mississippi river from its natural course, and conducting its vast waters to the Gulf of Mexico, by the way of the Atchafalaya, or Fifth: The advantages that may result by keeping the said bayou open for navigation."

Some description of the bayou and river based upon the facts brought to light by our surveyors, is not only necessary to a proper understanding of the subject, but will afford the means of answering conclusively the fourth proposition.

The mouth of the bayou is situated at the end of a large bend in the river, where the main current passing near the outside, carrying the drift wood, brings most of it, especially when the wind is from the East, within the influence of the draft of water taken off by the bayou.

The mouth of the bayou is at present six hundred and fifty feet wide, while a short distance below it is only two hundred and fifty feet. This great enlargement of the mouth was, no doubt, caused by the opening of the canal on the side of the town, by the navigation company, and it now produces the effect of admitting much more water to enter the bayou than can be discharged below, in consequence of which, a considerable portion of it is obliged to turn and run back into the river again, on the lower side of the bayou. The amount of drift wood entering the bayou is nearly in proportion to the amount of water entering its mouth, and not in proportion to its capacity of discharge, for as the mouth receives a vast volume of water, the timber and all heavy floating substances going in with great momentum on its surface, continue down the bayou with the force already acquired, while much of the water turns and runs back again. The increase of the mouth must continue, unless prevented by substantial works, for the bank on the upper side will continue to wear off by the water entering, and that on the lower side, by its discharge of the surplus.

The bed of the bayou for at least 2200 from its mouth down, is composed of good clay, the entire depth of which, we have not positively ascertained; but by five borings at different points, 27 feet deep, we find always the same material, and by soundings in the river from the mouth out, we continually brought up clay to the depth of from 70 to 90 feet. The hole of water opposite the church, which was reported an unfathomable abyss, through into the lower regions of quick sand, is found by soundings, in low water, to be seventeen feet below the bottom of the bayou, with a clay bed. It is not my business to speculate upon the causes of its existence, but I presume it must have been filled with a deposit of sand which was washed out by the water. Our examinations did not extend beyond 2200 feet below the mouth of the bayou, but the same strata of clay appears to continue much further down.

The great depth and tenacity of this clay, together with the fact that the lakes which receive the waters of the bayou, have but a very shallow depth, must forever put at rest the fears heretofore entertained by some, that the Bayou Plaquemine would ultimately carry off the vast waters of the Mississippi through the Atchafalaya.

The whole question about this bayou is simply this: should we permit it to stop itself up? or shall we erect works at its mouth, that by their effect will prevent the entrance of drift, and leave it open?

Without the former course is soon adopted, it will not only close itself, but it will also close many of the important channels which act as drains for the lands of the interior parishes. Even now, while I am writing, great destruction of property is hourly expected in consequence of overflows, caused by the raft in Grand river, bayou Sorrell and the Plaquemines itself. To prevent this great evil, I have been asked to temporarily close the stream at its mouth, and pull the drift out below; but this cannot be done without great risk, for an accumulation of drift at the mouth would prevent the free discharge of water by the bayou, and in case of high water, might cause destruction on the river below, for which the State would be called upon to pay damages.

From the best information I could obtain from Capt. Kent and others, the drift wood had, on the 16th of this month, completely filled Bayou Sorrell from Lake Chicot to its mouth, and Grand River, to within three miles of the Village. In the Bayou Plaquemines, there are three rafts formed above the Grose Tete, together about two miles in length. These rafts are being removed by Captain Kent, and are carried below and lodged against the raft in Grand River. Should the drift run for three days to the extent that it was coming in last week, all communication to the interior will be cut off, and but a few days will be required to fill the Plaquemine to its mouth.

Now let us try and ascertain what would actually be the effect of closing the bayou.

The average low water width of the Mississippi round the bend is 2156 feet. The cross section above at the same time averages 151,455 feet, while below it is only 128,974; thus showing that the section above, in low water, is 22,461 feet larger than below. The fall in the surface of the water at the same time, when the bayou has no discharge, is 2.23 decimal inches from a point 2340 feet above the bayou to another 1600 feet below it; but in the high water of 1853, the fall in the surface was, from the same point above, down to the lower bank of the bayou 0.582 decimal inches, and there was no perceptible fall from there down to the lower point, showing that in high water the surface drops immediately at the mouth of the bayou nearly six decimal inches. I think, however, that this fall of the surface water does not continue across the river, but is only a fall in the side next to the bayou. It does not follow that the current of the water should be immediately retarded on this account, for coming down from above to the mouth of the bayou, with accelerated velocity, it is pushed forward for some distance by its own momentum, with nearly the same force. Hence, the diminution of the section below in proportion to the amount of water to be carried.

Assuming the low water width of the river as its fair average width of current in high water, and then multiplying this into the height at which the water rises above and below, and then adding in the low water cross sections, we shall have the sections above and below, as fair in one case as the other.

Thus:

2156 feet ⋈ 26 feet X 151455 = 207511
2156 feet ⋈ 25418 X 128994 = 183799

Difference betwn. high water sections, 22716

The velocity of the water above the mouth of the bayou was found, by the result of four experiments, to be 4.8 feet per second.

Whole discharge above at the time of the high water of 1853, was cross section 207511 ⋈ 4.8 current = 996052 cubic ft. per second.

The cross section of Bayou Plaquemine, two hundred and fifty feet from its mouth, is 7698 feet, current at the same time and place, 388-100 feet per second; discharge 29869 cubic feet per second.

Now if we deduct the discharge of the bayou from the whole discharge of the river above, and divide the remainder by the cross section below, we shall find that an increase of current of from 4.8 to 5.2 feet per second would be required to discharge the whole amount of water through the channel below the bayou. This difference of 4.10 of one foot in the current per second is not very great, and may come from the fact that it is almost impossible to arrive exactly at the truth, and then, it may be, that the current of the river below is faster than above; I believe, however, that it is very nearly the same, for no doubt, before the construction of levees there was a very fair contest going on in the river between the force of the current and the resistance of the banks, the former having always a little the advantage and causing natural cut-offs; but since we have added volume to the water by levees, and also made artificial cut-offs, we have added considerably to the force of current; and now, the proposition of closing the outlets, if carried into execution, will settle the affair. Rather than do this, we should make new outlets exactly sufficiently to compensate for our interference with the stream, by the construction of levees, and no more, unless we can afterwards shorten it, and bring the current back to its former velocity. I am greatly opposed to the adoption of any violent measures with regard to the Mississippi river, and the forcible closure of this bayou, I conceive, would be a measure of that kind.

It would be a repetition of the Raccourci Cut-off affair on a larger, or smaller scale, as may hereafter be proved; and the people of the town of Plaquemine will be the first to demand redress, although many are now willing to give their consent to it. I know that some old citizen will reply that we have been stopping outlets all along the river, since the time of his birth, and yet the river does not rise higher than before; but let him prove that the current is not stronger, and more destructive to the banks than in former times, and then I give up the point.

Digitized by Google

It is thought by many that if it were closed, the river would soon enlarge below, and fit itself to bear the additional burden which it would be obliged to carry, and such might be the case, but how would this be done?

The velocity of running water must increase with its volume, and if you scour out the river, and enlarge its volume of water, you certainly increase the current, and an increased current increases its length, by breaking down the banks around the bends, with which falls the levees. Exactly how much the surface of the water would be raised, or its velocity accelerated, I am not prepared to say, but I know that the stoppage of this outlet would increase an existing evil already too heavy to bear. This scouring power is badly named; it should be called a scouring and lengthening power, for under its influence caused by the construction of levees and cut-offs, there is at present more caving of banks than formerly occurred. Take away the levees and leave the outlets open, and this will, to a considerable extent, be prevented. Leave them standing, increasing as they do, the volume of water to be conveyed, and the banks will continue to give away until the stream shall have gained such an increased length by its windings, that the fall per mile will be just enough less than it formerly was, to give to the augmented volume of water the same velocity of current that the lesser volume had; and then, the contest between force of current, and resistance of land on the river banks will again become nearly equal, and the banks will, to a great extent, retain their position.

There is a constant effort in nature to attain this equality, which is, to some extent impossible, in consequence of the irregularity of the supply of water, and sedementary matter to be conveyed, and the fact that all matter must give away to the action of constant friction, however slight it may be. This is the reason why I say that force of current always had a little the advantage, and hence the natural cut-offs and eternally repeated overflows. In other words, I believe that the river is to be regulated, if at all, by its velocity of current: closing outlets constructing levees, and making cut-offs will increase it, and new outlets and additional length will diminish it. If the current is greater than the banks can support, their destruction and additional length of river will be the consequence. If it is too weak to transport its sediment, the channel will fill up with deposit, unless we make levees, cut-offs or stop outlets.

The river banks in front of the town of Plaquemine, and all round the bend, are now fast disappearing, because the current in the river is stronger than they can bear. If it were slow, like that of the Bayou Lafourche, they would not cave; but let this bayou fill up, and we shall find that we know at present only the beginning of evil. Not that the water would rise so much higher, but additional force would be given to a current already too strong, and the losses by the destruction of levees below would be more than enough to pay many times over for the erection of substantial works at its mouth, which would permit the water to pass off, and keep the drift wood out of it.

I am required to report upon the advantages that may result by keeping the bayou open for navigation. Those of your honorable body whose interests would be effected by the loss of the navigation through it, must be better judges in this matter than I am; but it appears to me that the closing it would have the effect of increasing the direct trade between several of the interior parishes and the northern cities; but if not so, the cost of transportation would certainly be augmented between them and New Orleans; but the disadvantages resulting from the loss of navigation can, in no way, equal the gain that would accrue, if the great amount of water which is thrown by the bayou upon the lands of the interior, could be kept off of them. This I conceive vastly the most important consideration.

My opinion then, being clearly in favor of keeping it open, not alone for purposes of navigation, but to prevent the action of the otherwise augmented volume of water upon the banks of the river below, it is only necessary now that I should discuss the several plans proposed by which this object is sought to be accomplished.

The first proposition contained in the resolution under which I make this report, was understood to contemplate the closing of the mouth of this bayou with a wooden structure in the form of piles driven across it, which would be far enough apart to admit the free passage of the water, and yet retain the drift wood. There are several great practical objections to this plan, which I will endeavor to demonstrate, the first one of which would be the certain prevention of all navigation through it; but in order to know its whole effect we must ascertain exactly where it should be located; whether on the clay bed at the extreme mouth of the bayou, or any considerable distance from that point.

Piles driven where they are subjected to the force of running water, and the shocks from drift wood, very soon become loosened

at the top of the soil, and the water washes out large holes around them, which are continually weakening their power of resistance. If we were to place this kind of work near enough to the current of the Mississippi to prevent any considerable lodgment of floodwood before it, it would, by receiving the continual shocks from drifts and rafts, be soon loosened at the bottom, cause the river bank at the mouth to cave off, and be, itself, soon destroyed.

If we place it further back, it would collect a solid mass of drift before it, composed of logs and small pieces of wood, bound together with the deposits from the river, which, unless the piling gave way, would prevent the natural discharge of the water through the bayou, and finally end in totally filling up its mouth as effectually as it could be done in any other way; and, besides, timbered constructions, exposed alternately to air and water, are of no lasting durability. They are now very expensive, and then they soon rot out, are carried away by the water, and not a vestige of them remains.

The effect, then, if this plan were adopted, it seems to me, would be, that if placed near the river, it must soon cause destruction of the clay bed at the mouth of the bayou which now aids in turning off the current of the Mississippi, and go off, a total loss itself. This was the result with regard to the old works of this kind. If placed further back, and not destroyed, would soon effectually close the bayou, which I conceive cannot be admitted.

The proposition to erect works again like those which were executed by the Board of Public Works in 1833 and '34, is subject to all of the objections enumerated above, with the exception of leaving the bayou open for navigation. I would not therefore recommend its adoption.

The improvement which I consider under all circumstances the best, and most worthy of adoption, is the erection of substantial brick walls that would confine the amount of water entering the mouth of the bayou to the quantity which can be discharged below, and thus recover from the fatal error committed by cutting the canal. The upper wall to act as a break water to turn off the strong current off the Mississippi, and the lower one to protect the banks of the bayou on the side of the town of Plaquemine. Besides these constructions, I would recommend a floating fender about four hundred and eighty feet long, to be placed above the mouth, with the lower end kept out into the stream by permanent paddles placed upon it, to be acted upon by the current of the river itself; so that the very force which propels drift wood against it, should force it out into the stream far enough not to be drawn within the influence of the current of the bayou.

The principles upon which the fender is to act, were fully explained and approved of by the Legislature of last year, and a condititional appropriation made for its construction, which, after our first survey of the bayou, I thought it unwise, at that time, to use.

I have the most unlimited confidence in its successful operation, after all the details of construction shall have been determined upon by actual experiment on a small scale. It will act upon the same principle as the flying ferry boats.

I have no doubt from an examination of Mr. Crozat's report, dated Jan. 13th, 1853, to the then Governor of the State, Mr. A. B. Roman, that he would have recommended masonry instead of piling, if he had believed that the foundation would have supported it; but, I understand from Mr. Moore, that he was there only in high water, and could not have made such examinations as would have been required for that purpose, and then the general report that the bed of the bayou had only a thin sheet of clay as a covering for the quick sand, decided the question with regard to the kind of structure to be placed upon it.

He says: "The great powers of the stream require an adequate resistance, and as we cannot obtain it from the weight of materials, we are compelled to depend upon their firm hold.

But, unfortunately, we have but weak banks for abutments and loose soil for support. This, together with the perishableness of the only material we have at present at our disposal, will evidently expose the work to occasional accidents and the trade to interruptions, unless the most vigilent superintendence is exercised."

We find clay of such depth and firmness that I entertain no fears with regard to the foundation, which it is proposed to make in the best form, of timber six feet below the present bed of the bayou, until the river shall wash away the clay enough to undermine it, which it will in a great part be prevented from doing by the sheet piling around it, and the wall which will turn off the current.

The advantages resulting from the use of heavy materials, such as stone or brick, are very great over those from the use of wood. If, in after years, our wall should be broken in part, it would, by its weight and permanency of position, still act as a means of turning off the current, and each and every brick would perform its part even laying at the entrance of the bayou. If we had broken stone or brick in the form of ruble, enough for the purpose, which could be thrown in at the proper place, a cemented wall would not be required; but under the circumstances the wall would be the least expensive. On the upper side of the bayou it is proposed to ram in a strong filling of clay to support the wall; and to pack the earth strongly against the wall on the side next the town. The whole to be constructed substantially as set forth in the following specifications, and further explained by the model of the river and bayou, and maps of reference retained in this office for your inspection:

SPECIFICATIONS AND ESTIMATES OF THE PROBABLE COST OF THE WORK.

Forehead or breakwater above the mouth of the bayou.

Excavation of 1900 cubic yds for the grillage, foundation and making embankment above the head at 25 cents per yard,	$500 00
1000 sq. ft. grillage foundation, 2 ft. thick, calculated 1 cubic foot timber per square foot, inclusive of workmanship at 25 cents per foot, - -	2500 00
325 running feet of sheet filling (coffer dam) 20 feet deep and one foot thick, double 6 inch timber 6500 cubic ft. timber at 15 cts. per foot, - -	780 00
Driving piles $5 per running ft.	1625 00
Brick wall for forehead or break water, containing 165,000 bricks, at $15 per 1000 including masonry, - -	24750 00
11000 cubic yds. of clay taken from the bayou to fill and ram into the head or break-water,	2700 00
Total cost of breakwater,	$32,855 00

Retaining wall on the lower bank to protect the town of Plaquemine.

Excavating 1200 cubic yds of clay, removing and ramming it behind the wall at 25 cts per yard, - - - -	300 00
6000 cubic feet gillage foundation, 1 cubic ft per sq ft, including workmanship at 25 cts per foot, - - -	1500 00
Sheet pilling in front of retaining wall 425 ft in length and 10 ft deep below surface of bayou bottom, double 3 inch stuff, 2125 feet material,	400 00
Driving the same, $2 50 per ft running measure,	1062 00
768,000 bricks for retaining wall at $15, including mortar and masonry,	11520 00
10,000 cubic yds of clay taken from the bed of the bayou and banks to fill and ram behind the wall, at 25 cts,	2500 00
Total cost of retaining wall,	$17,282 00

An approximate estimate of the cost of a fender to prevent the entrance of drift-wood or rafts, as follows:

9500 cubic feet lumber hewed square and formed to suit the purpose, at 75 cts per cub ft,	$7,125 00
Iron for bolts, chain, anchorage, &c,	3250 00
Total probable cost of fender,	$10,375 00
Retaining wall,	17,282 00
Forehead or breakwater,	32,855 00
Ten per cent for superintendence and contingencies,	651 20
Total cost whole work proposed,	$66,563 20

In case this plan should be adopted, I would respectfully suggest the propriety of having all the work done under contract, except the construction of the fender—to be let out in parts to the lowest bidder, who shall execute the work under the superintendence of this office.

I have further to remark, and it cannot be too often repeated, that the manner of constructing levees by taking the earth from the interior of the bank on the water side, and leaving holes to be filled, either with rain or river water, which, having no drain, is left to percolate through the bank into the river in low water, produces the most destructive effects upon the banks.

In the case before us the water in the mouth of Bayou Jacob was some eight or ten feet deep, and its surface 17-4 feet above the water in the river, near by. In passing from the higher to the lower level it carries out the foundation of the bank, after which the upper surface settles and slides down.

My apology for the uncommon length of this report will be found in the substance of the resolution calling it forth.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MINORITY REPORT

OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON

THE GENERAL SYSTEM OF FREE BANKING

IN THE STATE OF LOUISIANA.

The undersigned members of the Committee on Banks and Banking, to which was ferred the bill entitled "An Act supplemental to an Act entitled an Act to establish General System of Free Banking in the ate of Louisiana," dissenting from the marity of said committee, beg leave to make e following report:

That they cannot see any good reason for creasing the basis of the free banks, it being at present redundantly large for all the quirements of the trade and commerce of ie city and State. The act of consolidation the city of New Orleans authorized the suance of about eight millions of dollars bonds, for the payment of the consolidaon debt of the city and its municipalities. hese bonds, together with the bonds of the nited States and those of the State of Louiana, were adopted by the free banking law 1853 as a basis for banking. Under this w, up to the present period, only $1,229,000 the city bonds, and $281,000 of the State nds, have been deposited with the Auditor, on which security he has issued $1,510,000 bank notes, leaving some $6,800,000 of e consolidated city bonds still obtainable a basis for any future bank issues: an nount nearly as large as the whole present rculation of all the banks, chartered and e, of the city of New Orleans. An nount that will not probably be required r the future wants of banks.

Operating under this law for years to come, ever, where then the necessity of enlarg this basis, already so large? The unealed object of this bill is not, as it im- s to be, for the purpose of improving or ending the free banking law, but to use at law, by engrafting these bonds upon it, the purpose of bolstering their credit, and king them more marketable.

s it right? Is it prudent that the curcy, under our experimental system of king, should be indirectly tampered with rder to sustain the credit of bonds issued the benefit of this or that scheme? And re is the assurenee that the issuance of bonds may not be continued to an indefinite extent? The city has the power to issue bonds at any time her people and their municipal authorities may think proper; and if this thing is not nipped in the bud, our Legislature will be constantly called upon to admit fresh bonds, as security for the issuance of fresh bank notes, until both bonds and notes become valueless.

A distinguished gentleman of New Orleans, connected with banks and railways, says, in a letter which we are authorized to use, that when this supplemental act is passed, "An arrangement, I hesitate not to say, can be made, of an equitable character, with the roads and the banks established under the free banking law. to place at once from one and a half to two millions dollars of the bonds, which they (the banks) want as a basis for circulation; the sum to be paid for in monthly instalments, which might be small in amount for each, and, in the aggregate, nearly or quite sufficient for the current requirements of the roads."

Thus it is already contemplated under this bill to increase the bank circulation of the State by heaping credit upon credit.—The bonds, which are but a credit, are to be purchased upon credit, and immediately deposited with the Auditor, as securities for fresh issues of bank notes, before even the bonds are paid for.

The inflation of currency under such a state of things, would be alike dangerous to the moral welfare and pecuniary interests of our citizens, by opening the floodgates of debt and extravagance, with their attendant vices, and subjecting the industry of the State to the reaction that all experience has proven inevitably follows wild and extravagant speculation.

All of which is respectfully submitted

REPORT ON THE STATE LIBRARY.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, in General Assembly convened:

I have the honor to submit for your consideration the annexed statement, showing the transactions of the State Library during the year 1853, from which you will perceive that a considerable number of volumes has been added to the Library by purchase and exchange.

I would respectfully recommend that, in addition to the usual annual appropriation of one thousand dollars for the purchase of books, the Secretary of State be authorised to expend in increasing the Library, such sums as may be received from the sale of the Reports, Acts of the Legislature, and other books, the sale of which is provided for by existing laws.

The books in the Library are now placed in open shelves, originally intended by the Building Commissioners to be merely temporary. I would recommend the erection of permanent glazed cases, which are absolutely necessary for the proper preservation and security of the books.

It affords me much pleasure to commend the ability and zeal of the State Librarian in the discharge of the varied duties of his office.

My immediate predecessor earnestly recommended the speedy publication of the French and Spanish historical manuscripts which belong to the State. No steps have been taken by the Legislature to that effect. Forming, as they do, a complete documentary history of the State, you will at once perceive the importance of their publication, and I hope will pass the necessary law upon the subject.

Very respectfully,
ANDREW S. HERRON, Secretary of State.

REPORT

OF THE

LOUISIANA STATE LIBRARY.

Baton Rouge, January 20, 1854.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

Gentlemen—In conformity to law, I have the honor to submit to your honorable body, the annexed Statement of the Expenses paid out of the Contingent Fund of the State Library, from the 1st of April to the 31st of December, 1853; the corresponding book and vouchers of which are at the disposition of a committee for examination.

I respectfully represent that, the annual appropriation of $250, allowed by law, far from being sufficient, was exhausted in the space of nine months, together with an additional sum of $109 17, for which I have provided of my own fund, and there are still some few more accounts due, as well as the necessary expenses for which I will have to provide for the three last months of the present fiiscal year, and that it is imperatively urgent to increase the Contingent Fund of this Institution.

I remain very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY DROZ, State Libarian.

I am now enabled to congratulate the Legislature of the State on a most satisfactory condition of the public Treasury; after having urged in vain the Legislatures of 1850 and 1852 to take some steps to prevent the credit of the State being disgraced, the recommendations of this office were acted on by that of 1853; and the result is a condition of the Treasury which will enable this Legislature, without any additional taxation, to provide a sinking fund, adequate to meet its debt, and also to provide one, the interest on which will, in a few years, support public schools without a resort to taxation, and thus place them on a permanent foundation, unchangeable by any of those changes of policy which are liable to supervene under the irritation produced by yearly taxation.

The account of the public debt, submitted in this report, shows a debt by the State to the Free School Fund of $387,728 68
To the Seminary Fund of 140,627 96

These are funds of account merely, without any tangible or available representative. The Free School Fund increases at a rate under the Constitution which will, at no distant day, render the interest on the capital adequate to support the schools; but if the amount of that interest be raised by taxation, which it must be if the fund be not actually invested, the burden will be as great, and the system as easily overthrown, as if the amount were a gratuitous imposition on the people each year for their support.

The condition of the Treasury will now enable the Legislature to cancel at once the State debt, maturing in 1855 and 1857, instead of doing so by quadrennial instalments, as prescribed by Act No. 279 of 1853, to invest in some actual security, drawing interest, the surplus remaining on hand of the levee and drainage, or swamp land fund, and to dedicate one hundred thousand dollars annually to the purchase of securities intended to meet the State debt, and to represent the amount of trust funds which it has used.

The direct and collateral advantages of such a course, in economy to the State, by preventing the Treasury from being the object of combined interests for idle expenditure, and in inspiring confidence in the soundness of our legislation, cannot be overestimated.

Within the past two years, many schemes have had birth which are now in full tide of successful experiment, of the greatest public importance to the development of the wealth and prosperity of the State, all of which will be more or less injured or benefited in proportion as the credit of the State is considered bad or good.

The Legislature of 1853 acted on wise convictions of what means were necessary to retrieve the State from the embarrassments which they found it in. It is only for this Legislature to continue the same policy, so happily begun, and the financial position of the State will be unimpregnable under any ordinary contingencies.

I am gratified to have it in my power to report much more general promptness in the collection and settlement of taxes than heretofore. Few tax collectors of the past year are in default, and in most of these cases satisfactory excuses can be found for the delay.

The Sheriff of Point Coupée and Collector of Rapides died during the summer, Until within a short time no Collector had been appointed in the Parish of Vermilion, but the present Sheriff is preparing to undertake the collection. The present Sheriff of St. Landry, also, is preparing to undertake the collection of the taxes of that Parish, for which two years—1851 and 1852—are in arrear.

The great cost of the assessment and collection of taxes will not fail to strike the Legislature.

The total amount of taxes, State, Mill and Poll, levied last year, was about $650,000. To assess and collect this, has cost:

For assessment, - -	28,000
Commissions, - -	40,000
Deductions, - -	44,000
Total,	$112,000

Or, at the rate of seventeen per cent.; an enormous rate, unparalled anywhere.

The provisions of law, authorizing proof to be made by Collectors of claims for deductions, requires to be amended.

The deductions of last year of the Parish of West Feliciana, paying taxes of $15,729, was only $36; of Plaquemines, paying $10,400, was about $30; of St. John the Baptist, paying $9,000, was about $5; of Iberville, paying $19,000, was less than $100, while Jefferson Parish, including 4th District of New Orleans, paying $31,828, had a deduction list of over fourteen thousand dollars, while the 1st District of New Orleans, paying $87,000, had a list of less than $3,000.

It is obvious that where there is so great a variation in result, it can only be accounted for by the fact that the law is so defective as to allow the results of its action to depend almost entirely on the individual characteristics of the officer. With the honest, intelligent and zealous officer, these qualities will produce a better result than the most stringent law, which is only needed by those who have no other guide.

The act of 1853, concerning pensions, caused to come forward within a very short time after its promulgation, two hundred and eight claimants, who drew the whole amount of the appropriation, leaving probably about as many more to be paid, and the whole of the semi-annual portion due 31st December.

From circumstances attending the proof of many of the claims, (one individual a witness figuring in many of them,) I am not inclined to believe that the act of 1853, relative to the proof, has made much improvement on the previous act of 1852, which was as imperfect as possible. Thirty thousand dollars per annum is a moderate estimate of the amount which will probably be necessary to satisfy all the claims that will be made under the law.

Under the system which existed up to 1852, the claims seldom exceeded $6,000 per annum. They underwent the scrutiny of a committee of the Legislature and then of the body, and I am convinced that although some impositions may have been practiced, yet they were fewer than under any system that can be devised.

The 31st section of the act organizing the Treasury Department, requires the Auditor, whenever a claim shall have been allowed by law, for which he may not issue his warrant, to report the fact to the next session of the Legislature, with his reasons for refusing. In obedience thereto, I have to report that Mr. Avery Breed, Sheriff of Union, caused a claim to be presented for services in matters of a criminal nature, under act No. 3 of 1848, for the sum of $100, which I declined to issue a warrant for, on the ground that he was a defaulter to the State as Sheriff and as such indebted to the State in a much larger sum.

Messrs. Van Winkle, Butler and Gross, Swamp Land Commissioners, also presented a claim for $1590, drawn under the act No. 38, "to reclaim and drain the swamp and overflowed lands donated to the State," which as there was no specific appropriation made in the act, I declined to issue a warrant for; but on the 21st June issued to them a certificate that the claim was audited. As my refusal to issue warrants for claims originating in that act has been the subject of a correspondence between myself and said Commissioners, and as it has placed me in opposition to the implied intention of the Legislature as embodied in said act, I transmit herewith a copy of the correspondence, setting forth my reasons for so refusing at length. I will merely recapitulate in brief the substance of my grounds of refusal.

The Constitution, Art. 94, prohibits any money being drawn from the Treasury, except in virtue of a "specific appropriation made by law. This is binding on every Department of the Government, and every officer of the State, and particularly, specially and directly on the Department charged with the drawing of money from the Treasury. A specific appropriation means a destination of a specific sum, not an uncertain contingent sums, to special and named purposes. The Constitution, moreover, prohibits an appropriation for a longer term than two years. The act under consideration organizes a system of reclamation of swamp lands, fixes the amount of the salaries of officers, and provides for the making of public works, and certainly contemplates the expenditure of public money; but for the appropriation to pay, the act is silent. Did the act contemplate the expenditure and withdrawal from the Treasury of the whole amount of sales of swamp lands then in the Treasury, or of all to be received as well as of that on hand? The amount received during last year was upwards of $200,000, and then on hand about $80,000. To suppose that the Legislature intended to authorize the expenditure of this large sum on a new and experimental system, would imply in them an abdication of their constitutional duties little complimentary. Yet, if the act is held to appropriate one dollar, it appropriates the whole amount; there is no limitation in it. The constitutional provision may be made clearer by a reference to the reasons on which it is founded.

Previous to the Constitution of 1845 there was no such provision of law, the consequence of which was that stale claims, or fresh claims under stale laws, were constantly embarrassing the Treasury to the opprobium of all system in its finances or economy in its expenditures.

The idea of the 94th Article of the Constitution is, by requiring each appropriation of public money to come before each Legislature, to enforce notice of the purpose for which it is made; to require, in effect, by by each Legislature making an appropriation, a ratification and re-sanction of the law or claim which the appropriation is made to execute and carry out. It is, in effect, to enable the Legislature to have, at short and regular periods, knowledge of the claims existing, and control of the amount of them.

If the terms of the act authorize the prosecution of the objects expressed and patent on its face beyond two years, and they undoubtedly do; and if they be held to involve an appropriation, then the singular anomaly is presented of a law which is in full vigor in every line and word of its dispositions, yet being repealed in a vital part inserted by construction. It will be admitted that whichever of its provisions make an appropriation of money is repealed at the end of two years by the operation of the 94th Art. of the Constitution—which one then is it? or is it one, or many, or all? The truth is, they all stand, and the terms of the Act show that it was intended to establish a permanent and general system of reclamation of swamp lands, not limited to two, or twenty years; and the last resource of those who contend that an appropriation is involved in its terms, is to contend that the appropriating power of the State, the highest and most jealously guarded of all, has been exercised by implication, tacitly, under provisions that cannot be located or pointed to.

Several provisions of existing laws require the Treasurer and Auditor to keep an account of the amount of each separate appropriation made by law, the amount paid, and to report the unexpended balance at certain terms; prohibits the Auditor from drawing, or the Treasurer from paying when no specific appropriation has been made. These provisions fix and interpret the terms "specific appropriation," used by the Constitution, to be specific in sum as well as in object.

In conclusion, I will refer to the following construction put on this provision of the Constitution by my immediate predecessor, who organized this office, and I think I will have shown that my course is in consonance with the plain, expressed and easily understood terms of the Constitution; that it is fortified by the reasons conducing to the incorporation of this provision in the Constitution; that it is further fortified by the interpretation uniformly placed by all branches of the Government on this provision. That to have given a contrary decision would have implied that the Legislature intended to appropriate an enormous sum, $300,000, on an experiment; that the law had a tacit, silent, understood vigor for two years, that it could not possess, after that time, its terms being the same after, as well as before; finally, that a contrary decision would have been a violation of my oath of office, as well as a destruction of the barriers by which the Constitution and laws have separated the legislative power of appropriating from the executive power of paying actual appropriations.

Extract from the report of the late D. Woodruff to the Legislature of 1848:

"When this office first went into operation, on the 19th day of March, 1847, in order to prevent any sudden check or intermission in the course of the public business, the Auditor, in regard to disbursements, followed the same course which had been adopted in the Treasury Department up to that time. The financial affairs of the Government were in a state of transition from the old to the new system, under our present Constitution.

An important change had been introduced relative to disbursement of public money from the Treasury. The 93d Article of the Constitution declares that "no money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in pursuance of specific appropriations made by law, nor shall any appropriation of money be made for a longer term than two years." Doubts were entertained, even by members of the Legislature, as to the true meaning of this clause of the Constitution until it began to be investigated in this office. Even the pay of members of the Legislature had been drawn for daily, and paid without a specific appropriation for that purpose, until a decision was made, and, I believe, universally acquiesced in, that the true meaning of that clause of the Constitution required an Act of the Legislature, setting aside a specific sum of money from the general or other funds of the Treasury for the payment of all claims against the State, before they could be paid, although the amount of such claims might have been previously ascertained and fixed by law."

The laws of the Legislature of 1853, authorising the issue of bonds to several railroad companies, requires the Auditor, within thirty thirty days after he shall have received the several assessment rolls, to determine and levy such tax as will extinguish the accruing interest for the year. The rolls of only about thirty-one Parishes have been as yet received; and the provisions of those Acts may become impracticable, unless some more stringent requirements be imposed on the Assessors and Recorders for the lodging of the rolls in this office. Under the text of the law, the tax could not be fixed if the rolls of even one Parish had not been received, and the probability of some one or more not being received or made is too great to permit the levying of the tax, to be made dependent on the receipt of the whole. Probably the law would be better if the Auditor were authorized on the 1st February to take the last assessment roll of any Parish then in the office, as the basis of fixing the tax in the absence of the one of the year immediately preceding.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SWAMP LAND COMMISSIONERS.

Baton Rouge, June 16th, 1853.

Hon. Louis Bordelon,
Auditor of Public Accounts:

SIR—The undersigned, Swamp Land Commissioners, under the Act approved 30th April, 1853, desirous of entering fully upon the duties of their office, would be pleased to know whether you consider yourself authorized to audit warrants drawn by them in their said capacity, and respectfully submit for your consideration Sections 18 and 20 of said Act, on which they predicate their right to draw on the Swamp Land Fund. They are unanimous in the opinion that the Sections here referred to, constitute a specific appropriation, in conformity with Article 94 of the Constitution of the State.

Respectfully, your obedient servants,

(Signed,) S. VAN WICKLE, HUGH GRANT, J. W. BUTLER. } Swamp Land Commssrs

AUDITOR'S OFFICE,
Baton Rouge, June 17th, 1853.

To Messrs. S. Van Wickle, Hugh Grant, and J. W. Butler, composing the Board of Swamp Land Commissioners:

Gentlemen—Your note of the 16th inst., came duly to hand last evening, wherein you desire to know whether I consider myself authorized to audit warrants drawn by you on the State Treasury, in your capacity of Commissioners, under the Act of the General Assembly, approved 30th April, 1853, entitled "an Act to reclaim and drain the Swamp and overflowed Lands denoted to the State of Louisiana by an Act of Congress, entitled 'an Act to aid the State of Louisiana in draining the Swamp Lands therein,'" approved March 2d, 1849; and you submit to my consideration sections 18 and 20 of said Act, on which you predicate your right to do so.

You state, moreover, that you are "unanimous in the opinion that the sections referred to constitute a specific appropriation, in conformity with article 94 of the Constitution of the State."

Under the two sections of the law which you quote, I have no hesitation in saying that the warrants which may be drawn by you as Commissioners, may be "audited;" but whether these warrants can be paid, is, I presume, the main object of your inquiry.

The 94th article of our present Constitution, which is precisely in the same language as the 93d article of the Constitution of 1845, is in the following words: "No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in pursuance of specific appropriations made by Law, nor shall any appropriation of money be made for a longer term than two years. A regular statement and accounts of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published annually, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law."

The construction given to this article of the Constitution, from the establishment of this office, up to the present time, has been, that no money can be drawn from the Treasury except by a special and distinct appropriation, that is: a specific sum of money fixed by law.

The two sections of the law to which you call my attention, and upon which you seem to base your conclusion, read thus:

Section 18th. "Be it further enacted, &c., That all works done and expenses incurred under this Act, shall be paid for by the Commissioners, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the State, arising from the sales of Swamp Lands; provided that the funds arising from the sale of the swamp and overflowed lands shall be divided among the several districts in the following proportions: viz: to the First District, two-eighths; to the Second District, three-eighths; to the Third District, three-eighths.

Digitized by Google

Section 20. Be it further enacted, &c., That all expenses incurred under this Act, shall be paid by the Auditor upon the warrant of the Commissioners; provided that no warrant shall be paid unless signed by a majority of the Commissioners."

These two sections only provide the manner in which moneys to pay for "work done and expenses incurred," shall be drawn from the Treasury, and how those moneys are to be apportioned among the districts, and from what fund they are to be paid, which is very proper in view of an appropriation made or to be made. But I cannot see how they can possibly be construed to constitute an appropriation of money, in accordance with the provision in the Constitution. They recognise a claim against the State, but do not provide for its payment.

The 19th section of Act No. 18, entitled "an Act to establish and regulate the Treasury Department," approved 26th January, 1847, requires "That it shall be the duty of the Auditor to prepare, digest and report to the General Assembly, at the commencement of each session,

First. A full and detailed statement, &c.

Fifth. A tabular statement showing separately the whole amount of each appropriation of public money made by law, the amount paid under the same, and the unexpended balance, if any."

It is very evident that those who enacted this law, were fully aware of the requirements of the Constitution on the subject of appropriations, and knew that no appropriation could exist without a sum of money specifically stipulated therein; otherwise, how could it be possible to report to the Legislature "a tabular statement showing separately the whole amount of each appropriation," and the "unexpended balance, if any." Where is the "amount" specified in either the 18th or 20th section, upon which you predicate your opinion? and how can this law, which is binding upon the Auditor, be complied with, if your views be correct? As an evidence of the correctness of my position, I will call your attention to a case exactly in point. In 1848, the Legislature omitted to make an appropriation of the School moneys. The laws on the subject of Free Public Schools and on the revenue, levy a tax specially for school purposes, which is kept as a separate and distinct fund in the State Treasury, in the same manner, as the "Swamp Land fund." The law, moreover, fixed the mode of apportioning those moneys among the Parishes of the State; the mode of drawing the same from the Treasury by the Parish Superintendents their salaries; in fine, every thing requisite in detail to carry out the present school system. Many who were not familiar with the subject, at once labored under the impression that no appropriation could possibly be necessary other than the one contemplated by the existing law. The subject was fully and thoroughly investigated, and as the Legislature then met biennally, the Executive of the State, wishing to avoid a delay of over eighteen months in the payment of those school moneys, was brought to the necessity of convening the General Assembly in extra session, for the sole purpose of making an appropriation in the way directed by the Constitution. Whilst citing this particular instance, I refer you to the whole Legislature of the State on the subject of appropriations. Even the salary of an officer, though fixed by law, and the manner too of drawing the same, cannot be paid without an appropriation, as you will see by reference to the general appropriation bill which is passed at each session of the Legislature.

To remedy the evil as far as possible, in all such cases, when the law recognizes a claim against the Treasury, (as in the present instance,) and no appropriation has been made to pay the same, the 32d section of an Act already cited, entitled "an Act to establish and regulate the Treasury Department," provides "That in all cases where the law recognizes a claim for money against the State, and no appropriation by law shall have been made to pay the same, the Auditor shall audit and settle the same, and give the claimant a certificate of the amount thereof, under his official seal, if demanded, and shall report the same to the General Assembly with as little delay as possible.

As the matter at present stands, I am fully of the opinion that my authority cannot go beyond the limits marked out by the last quoted section of law, and that no money can be drawn from the Treasury by the "Swamp Land Commissioners," until the General Assembly shall make an appropriation in accordance with the 94th article of the Constitution.

It is not my province to say what the Legislature intended to do, but I must conform myself to their Acts as they are.

I am, most respectfully,

Your Obedient Servant,

LOUIS BORDELON, Auditor.

REPORT

OF THE

BOARD OF SWAMP LAND COMMISSIONERS.

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA,
Monday, January 2d, 1854.

his Excellency P. O. Hebert,
Governor of the State of Louisiana.

The undersigned have the honor to re- t that, agreably to the Act to reclaim and in the swamp and overflowed lands don- d to the State of Louisiana by act of ngress, entitled: "An Act to aid the te of Louisiana in draining the Swamp nds therein," approved March 2d, 1849, l in virtue of their commission, dated the day of June, 1853—they met at the of Baton Rouge, and having duly qua- d, organized, on the 15th day of June. 53, by appointing T. B. R. Hatch, Se- tary, and Col. S. Van Wickle, Presi- t; they made their by-laws and appoint- their Engineers as required by the law, :

Levi C. Pettees, for the First,
Vincent Kirland, for the Second, and
W. H. Peck, for the Third District.

The subject of considering the most im tant works first to be performed coming n before the Board, the Commissioners olved to apply to the Auditor of Public counts, Mr. Bordelon, in relation to the plies of money necessary for such opera- ns. He refused to audit their warrants he legal customary form, stating that the amp Land Bill, as now enacted, does not tain, or itself constitute a specific appro- ation in conformity with the ninety-fourth icle of the Constitution of the State; l the Commissioners were refused by the ectors of the Louisiana State Bank the disbursement of a warrant audited by him informally.

The presence of the epidemic and consequent long adjournment of the Court, prevented the Commissioners from complying with the advice of the Attorney General: by trying at the Auditor's legal domicil, Baton Rouge, to compel by mandamus, the due auditing of their warrants. Thus reduced to their own small resources for carrying out the intentions of the Legislature, expressed by the Act, their report on the present occasion can relate to little else than matters of preliminary import or preparation. In the 1st District, the Engineer, Mr. Levi C. Pettees, having fallen a victim to the prevailing epidemic, an assistant divided the same into Levee Wards and Draining Districts, as follows: The first comprising all plantations, the lands in rear of the same, and the banks of the Mississippi River, not otherwise protected in front, below the lower limit of the parish of Jefferson, containing the parish of St. Bernard, the portion of Plaquemines parish laying on the East side of the Mississippi, and as much of the parish of Orleans, as contemplated by the Act;

Second, comprising the parts of Jefferson, St. Charles, St. John Baptist and St. James parishes, on the East side of the Mississippi River;

Third. The parishes of Ascension and East Baton Rouge;

Fourth. The parishes of East and West Feliciana;

Fifth. Livingston and St. Helena, and the

Digitized by Google

Sixth, comprising St. Tammany and Washington parishes.

The like melancholy misfortune resulting in the 2d District from the late fatal epidemic, Mr. Lafayette Caldwell, successor to the deceased Engineer, V. Kirkland, made the following division of that district, viz:

The First Levee Ward and Draining District, bounded on the North by the 31st degree of latitude, on the South by the Bayou Plaquemine and Grand River, on the East by the Mississippi River, and on the West by the Atchafalaya;

Second. On the North by Bayou Plaquemine, Grand River and the Mississippi River, on the South by the Southern parish boundaries of Assumption, St. Mary and St. Charles, on the East by the Mississippi River and the Eastern boundary of the parish of St. Charles, and on the West by Grand River and Lake Palourde;

Third. To comprise that portion of the parishes of Jefferson and Plaquemines, West of the Mississippi River;

Fourth. The parishes of Lafourche Interior and Terrebonne;

Fifth. The parishes of St. Mary, St. Martin and Lafayette;

Sixth. The parishes of Vermillion and St. Landry, and Seventh. To comprise the parish of Calcasieu.

And in the Third District, the Engineer, Mr. W. H. Peck, divided his district as follows:

The First Levee Ward and Draining District, comprising the parishes of Carroll and Madison, fronting the Mississippi river, and the parishes of Caldwell, Morehouse, Ouachita and Franklin, in the rear;

Second. The parishes of Tensas and Concordia, on the Mississippi River, and the parish of Catahoula, in the rear;

Third. The parish of Avoyelles;

Fourth. All that portion of Rapides parish, on both sides of the Red River, to Bienville on one side, and Bayou Rapides on the other;

Fifth. All that part of the parish of Rapides North of Alexandria, on each side of Red River;

Sixth. The parishes of Natchitoches, Winn and Bienville;

Seventh. The parishes of Sabine and De Soto;

Eighth. The parishes of Bossier, Caddo, and Claiborne, and Ninth. Comprising the parishes of Jackson and Union.

A much more perfect description and arrangement of the foregoing subdivisions into Levee Wards and Draining Districts better adapted to the important end in view, may likely prove necessary and can only be undertaken when such reasonable portion of the Swamp Land Fund shall be made accessible to the Commissioners as can admit of having thorough exploration and surveys made and the required levees taken.

By the totol absence of funds, operations in the First District were necessarily limited to examinations, surveys and plans of the levees and banks of the Mississippi River, chiefly in the parishes of Jefferson and St. Charles, where the well founded fears of front proprietors and planters would justify, instead of making fine mere locations, to have the repairs of old and the erection of new levees in progress, as required in the vicinity of Carrollton in the one, and near the honorable P. A. Rost's and towards the famous crevasse locality in Bonnet Carré bend in the other parish.

In the Second District, the attention of the Board of Commissioners was directed to the proper location of the Grand Levee in the parish of Pointe Coupée; this not being performed, the constructive contract special Act of appropriation more properly under the supervision of the Commissioner and Engineer of that District. We refer therefore to their reports concerning it, by which will be found that a further appropriation is required to provide for the final payment to be made on completion of that levee, which there is every reason to expect will be accomplished in all this month. The undersigned therefore respectfully urge the necessity of granting the appropriation asked for.

The Bayou's of the Atchafalya River, acting as inlets, inundating large portion of rich lands, and the levees for closing them up were, after due inspection by the three Commissioners, directed to be executed when the stage of waters would render the work more practicable, and wheaever deemed most advisable by the Engineers of those Districts. Of these, the embankments for closing up Middle, Lake, "Picket's and West's Bayous, in the Second District, have been surveyed, estimated, publicly advertised and duly placed under contract. The survey to locate a levee across the Point Mauwar, in the parish of West Baton Rouge, has been partly made and will be finished and estimates prepared with all practicable despatch.

In the Third District, after the examination of Yellow, Crockett, Cowpen and Turner's Bayous, as aforesaid, on the Atchafalaya River, attention was more particularly directed to parts of the District where parties interested in the construction of works, advanced the means to make the necessary preliminary surveys and measurements, as for instance at the threatened Cut-off on Cole's Creek Point, where proper surveys, plans and estimates were prepared and advertisements made; but the expected bids were not received, by reason, it is presumed, of the epidemic then prevailing everywhere in the State.

From the mouth of Bayou Rapides to Dunn's Bayou, on the left of Red River, in Rapides parish, the Engineer of the Third District surveyed, measured and estimated a levee for construction of which the advertisements were made, proposals received and contracts entered into according to law.

Similar preliminary steps have been taken from the town of Campté to the mouth of the Sabine Bayou, within the parish of Natchitoches, with exception of not having in this case advertised said works, or entered into contracts for its performance.

Unfortunately, any further acts of the Commissioners seem altogether of too little moment to deserve notice by your Excellency, owing altogether, as already stated, to the construction the Auditor of Public Accounts deemed it his duty to put on the law under which they have had to act, a subject so well understood, that they believe it superfluous to do more here, than to urge the importance of its speedy consideration.

It becomes them, however, to advert to the inadequacy of the Swamp Land Bill, as at present enacted, to the reclamation of large bodies of rich overflowed lands, especially in the 1st and 2d Districts.

The best mode of providing the means for which will mainly depend on the collective wisdom of the General Assembly of the State and on your Excellency; but works to be accomplished for the purpose we believe, would combine levees with canals of drainage and draining machinery; and portions so drained ought not, we think, to be sold at a much less valuation than would be obtained by considering the cost of works erected and improvements effected, adding to the acquired value of the land, a sum per acre sufficient to cover such outlay.

Extravagance and precipitancy in expenditure of the Swamp Land Fund, for machinery and works of this kind, could be prevented by restricting the Commissioners or other officers provided by law, from undertaking but a limited area of land to be drained at one time, in each Swamp Land District requiring the use of machinery; and in every case to have the complement last improved, disposed of by sale, before another is commenced in the same Swamp Land District.

The average annual fall of rain, in other places, is given at 26 inches; we will set it down in this State as indeed reported to be 36 inches, making for one month 3 inches; but as a safe guide, we will suppose it in excess to be as great as 6 inches for a month's fall.

This will give 3 cubic feet to the square yard, or 14,520 cubic feet to an acre of surface in so extraordinary a month.

It will seldom be necessary to raise this water higher than 1⅓ foot above the natural surface of the marsh, and we must keep down the waters in the drains at least 1½ foot below the surface of the lands designed to be cultivated: so that the lift between the surface water in the drains and that of the out fall, would be three feet.

We may cause the main drains to be excavated as much as 7½ feet deep, and have the float boards of the wheel to dip as much as 5 feet below the water surface, or 6½ feet below the land surface in the marsh, and thus have the main drains one foot deeper than the sweep of the float boards to allow for the deposition of sediment and weeds and to facilitate the flow of water to the wheel, which in technical language would thus have 8 feet head and dip, making then a horse's power of the nominal rate of 33,000 lbs., raised one foot high in a minute, we have 4,125 lbs. raised 8 feet high in the same time, and a cubic foot of water weighing 62½ pounds, gives us 66 cubic feet of water, raised eight feet high in one minute.

Now 14,520 cubic feet in excess of rain water to the acre and a horse's power raising 66 cubic feet per minute, 8 feet high, will give 220 minutes, or three hours and forty minutes, to raise 14,520 cubic feet, or the water of one acre, and eighty horses' power the water of eighty acres, in the same time, and of nearly 262 acres in one day of twelve working hours, or upwards of 7,854 acres in a month of the heaviest rains. The rain due to a given month, may fall in a few days, but the drains would have capacity enough to act as reservoirs and contain what reduced portion of water the dried up ground could not absorb and the atmosphere evaporate, besides which, the steam engine could be made to work twenty instead of twelve hours per day, when necessary.

But few persons believe or are aware how small a quantity of mechanical power is required to drain a large tract of such land. No just comparison can be made with the drainage in rear of the city of New

Digitized by Google

Orleans, burdened as it is obliged to be with the Water Works Company's supplies and other feeders.

For many months in the year, the evaporation will be found greater than the fall down from the clouds. So that 9,000 acres to 80 horses' power would not appear too much allowance in place of the 7,854 acres calculated, and to effect the drainage of 9,000 acres, one engine of 80 horses' power, or two of forty, or one of twenty, and the other of 60 horses, could be erected according to the particular case; but in the aggregate not to exceed 80 horses' power until the 9,000 acres drained thereby would be disposed of or sold.

Lands so drained would be cheaply sold at fifteen to twenty dollars per acre, according to the location, and would not cost for main drains, machinery and buildings, at perhaps an extravagant rate, more than eight dollars per acre, or $72,000 for 9,000 acres, taking into consideration that main drains only would be executed, and that the work of smaller surface ones and clearings could be best performed by the purchasers when preparing for cultivation.

For carrying out the system in good working order, a draining tax calculated to meet expenses of repairs and superintendance, to be levied only on the lands drained or benefited.

The Board would have approached this important subject with greater diffidence, and might have confined their observations and recommendations to protection levees on the River Mississippi, with other rivers and bayous of the State, requiring such great expenditures that the public lands now available to the State, may not produce more than sufficient to guard against overflow. Were it not that the reclamation of Swamp Lands is contemplated in the Act of Congress, and provision is made in the State bill for borrowing money, and that by prosecuting a judiciously restricted system of drainage with machinery, as intended above, an amount would finally be accomplished to vastly increase the revenue of the State, making large additions from time to time to her taxable property, rendering lands now non-productive, the most valuable, and inducing, with an advanced state of cultivation, a greater salubrity of climate and atmosphere, increasing the population, and in effect reclaiming lands in lower Louisiana, to an extent to make her no less rich in resources than in progressive industry, and to constitute the whole State one of the first in the Union for wealth, public spirit and successful enterprise.

The Commissioners would further state that the Great Western or Opelousas Railroad, being a public work in which the State government and all owners of real estate are interested, they will pay particular attention to the requisition made upon them by the Directors of that road, regarding certain levees on the Bayou Lafourche, as soon as the Board will be placed in a situation to admit thereof.

They will also make the requisite examinations and surveys to enable them to judge correctly of the many suggestions and recommendations addressed to them by the published pamphlet of the State Engineer, especially those referring to overflowed lands and lakes in upper Louisiana.

And with sentiments of highest regard, they have the honor, most respectfully, to be

COL. S. VAN WICKLE,

COMMISSIONER SECOND DISTRICT SWAMP LANDS.

To His Excellency P. O. Hebert,

Governor of the State of Louisiana:

In compliance with the provisions of an Act of the General Assembly, entitled "an Act to reclaim and drain the Swamp and overflowed Lands of the State of Louisiana," approved 30th of April, 1853, I present you my report, as Swamp Land Commissioner for the Second Levee and Draining District.

I had the honor to receive my commission on the 4th day of June, bearing date of the first.

On the 14th same month, gave my bonds and qualified. On the 15th, met Messrs. Hugh Grant and J. W. Butler, Swamp Land Commissioners for the First and Second Districts, at Baton Rouge, and proceeded to organise under the Act creating the Board of Swamp Land Commissioners. We remained in session until the 22d of same month, during which time we visited and fixed the location of the Grand Levee of the Parish of Point Coupée, and also examined several bayous located in said Parish, and serving as outlets to the Atchafalaya River, viz: Middle Bayou, Lake Bayou, West Bayou, and Rickett's Bayou. Said bayous, during the annual high waters, overflow a valuable section of country, embracing a large quantity of swamp and public lands, situated and lying between the Atchafalaya and Mississippi Rivers.

By a unanimous vote of the Board, it was resolved that the bayous be closed.

The duty then devolved upon me of appointing an Engineer for my District, and in conformity thereto I commissioned Vincent Kirkland, of the Parish of West Baton Rouge.

In order to expedite and further the work already laid out, and which was essential in its completion to the protection of a number of the wealthiest Parishes, not only of my District, but of the State, the Board of Commissioners found it necessary to draw upon the Auditor of Public Accounts, for means to prosecute their plans. That officer positively refused to audit our drafts, upon the ground that no specific appropriation had been made as required by Article 94 of the Constitution.

After every effort to obtain the necessary means for the proper conduct of these works had failed, my operations in connection with the duties imposed upon me, were very much limited.

The season was fast advancing, when it became my duty, under an Act of the Legislature, approved April 28th, 1853, appropriating thirty thousand dollars out of the Swamp Land fund, for the completing and rebuilding of the Grand Levee of the Parish of Pointe Coupée, to try and forward the construction of this important work.

The advertisements were made as required by law. The sale of this work took place on the fifth (5th) of August last, on line of said Levee.

An offer of this work was first made in sections of about three hundred (300) feet each. Six of these sections were sold at an average of seventeen and a quarter (17 1-4) cents per cubic yard, Mr. John Toy being a contractor. No bids were made for the remaining sections under twenty-five (25) cents per cubic yard. (They were, however, subsequently all adjudicated to John Toy, at twenty (20) cents per cubic yard.) He furnished his bonds by notarial act, (passed before W. G. Bozeman, Notary Public,) which bonds were approved by Vincent Kirkland, Engineer of the Second (2nd) District.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Toy, in conformity to his contract, commenced operations upon the Levee immediately after the adjudication of the contract, with every promise of being enabled to complete the work within the prescribed time. But in consequence of the appearance of the epidemic, which was at this period spreading terror throughout the State, and the imminent peril attending the concentration of so large a body of men as would have been necessary to complete an undertaking of such magnitude, in a vicinity which at that time was suffering from the disease and pestilence, would have been perilous in the extreme, both to the laborers and to the country. Meanwhile the time for fulfilling the terms of the contract expired, and the work was still in an unfinished condition.

The Engineer, Mr. Kirkland, while in the execution of his duties, contracted the yellow fever, and died on the 29th of September.

My own health became so much impaired and enfeebled, that I was confined in a sick room for more than two months.

In the face of so many adverse circumstances, the work was suspended until about the first of November, when the contractor was enabled to collect a small force upon the line of operations: yet notwithstanding every exertion was made, he could not obtain more than seventy (70) or eighty (80) laborers, at any one time, up to the fifth (5th) of December, when his bonds were forfeited by the limit of his contract.

On the eighth (8th) of November, I appointed L. Caldwell, Esq, Engineer of my District, to succeed Mr. Kirkland.

The season had so far advanced, and the time for the annual rise of the river so nearly approached, that a crisis had arrived when this work must be completed at any cost, to avert the calamity of an overflow.

Availing myself, therefore, of the power conferred upon the Commissioners by section twenty-sixth (26th) of the Act "to reclaim and drain the Swamp Lands, &c.," upon the recommendation of the Engineer of my District, I proceeded to let out the Grand Levee in separate and distinct sections, at the rate of twenty five (25) cents per cubic yard, to contractors, whose energy and perseverance would seem to insure the completion of the work in time to meet the high waters of the Mississippi River.

In consequence of the great difficulty of securing the services of men, prepared with the necessary implements, to prosecute the work on their own responsibility, I found it necessary to employ men to whom I furnished an outfit, in the way of wheelbarrows, spades, provisions and buildings, all of which articles it was agreed should be at the expense of the contractors, (except the lumber for buildings,) and the price of said articles to be deducted from their contracts, in making a final settlement with them. By these means I was enabled to employ upon this important public work, in the course of ten (10) days, some three hundred (300) laborers; and there is at this time every prospect of its entire completion in ample time to resist the waters when they may rise.

If the original contracts for this work could have been made, as was expected, at an average of about twenty (20) cents per cubic yard, the appropriation of thirty thousand (30,000) dollars would have been nearly sufficient for its completion. But owing to the prevalence of the epidemic, and the high rate of wages, as well as our inability to procure, even at the ruling rates, a sufficient force for our purposes, it was found necessary to enter into new contracts, at an advanced rate of twenty-five (25) cents per cubic yard.

This, in connection with the necessity for the better securing of the Levee now finished, of making of an inside ditch for the purpose of carrying off the transpiration of water, and also as there should be some provision made for the building of a Point Road, as the authorities of the Parish declare their inability to execute this work, for want of means: it will be necessary that a further appropriation of twelve thousand (12,000) dollars be made. This further appropriation I deem indispensable to the more perfect completion of this great work, a work on which the safety of nearly the whole of the south-western part of our State depends. For the full statistics of this work, I refer to the Report of L. Caldwell, Engineer, on file in the office of the Swamp Land Commissioners.

The lands upon which the Levee is situated belong to the Parish of Pointe Coupee by donation from the General Government of May 26, 1824, for the purpose of enabling the Parish to build and keep in repair said Levee.

I understand that the authorities of said Parish are desirous of transferring said lands to the State, under the general system of levying and draining, which I have reason to hope the State is about to adopt. I would respectfully suggest, in case an arrangement can be made with the Parish, that the State accept the transfer.

The greater portion of these lands are in a high state of cultivation, and would afford, by renting or sale, a sufficient fund to keep the roads and levees in repair.

The State being compelled to build and keep in repair these improvements, it is but right, in my opinion, that the means there-or this purpose should be placed in the hands of the party held responsible, and upon whom so large a portion of our State rely for protection against their great enemy, water.

As soon as the appointment of Mr. Caldwell was made, his attention was directed to the unfinished work on the Grand Levee, the surveying, estimating and location of points for closing up the bayous heretofore mentioned, situated on the Atchafalaya, and for a levee across the Point Manwar, situated in the upper part of the Parish of West Baton Rouge, on lands that have been principally abandoned by their proprietors.

This Parish had built at great expense a levee across this point, which for a time will afford security not only to her own citizens, but to Iberville, and others; and the attention of the Commissioners having been called to this fact by the Police Jury of said Parish, it was ordered: that a survey and location of this be made, and reported at the next regular meeting of the Board. It was not necessary that immediate action should take place, as the Front Levee now existing is a sufficient security for the present. But as it is situated on a bank that is caving, it is liable to be destroyed. Should a new levee be ordered across this point, which I think will be indispensable in a short time, I would suggest that an effort be made by the State to secure these lands that have been abandoned to the Parish.

As soon as the surveys and location on the bayous heretofore mentioned, were made, the work was advertised to be let, according to law.

The sale took place on the tenth (10th) and twelfth (12th) of December, under the supervision of the Engineer of this District. I am informed that the work was let at an average of about twenty (20) cents per cubic yard.

For this information and the subdivision of the District, I refer you to the report of the Engineer, on file in the office of the Commissioners.

There is an evident ambiguity in the present law relative to the duties of the Engineers and Commissioners, and in evidence I cite the fact that many of our worthy and intelligent citizens have so interpreted this law, that as they view it, the Parochial authorities are relieved of all responsibility, and have applied to the Engineer to locate and supervise their private levees.

I construe the law as confining us entirely to the reclaiming and draining of swamp and overflowed lands.

I would gladly interpret the law as my fellow-citizens view it, believing that it would accelerate the building, as well as placing the levees in a position that would render them more secure, and make the system more complete. I would recommend that all levees throughout the State be placed under the control of the Engineers and Commissioners. I would not relieve the front proprietors of the responsibility now resting upon them, to make and keep in repair all their front levees; but when completed, they should receive a reasonable compensation for all sacrifice and for work done, the price of work to be fixed by the cubic yard.

Should this recommendation be adopted, I am satisfied that it would result in a greater unanimity of action, which is necessary to the better carrying out of this great system, which if adopted, would require an additional aid as to Engineers; and I would therefore suggest that the Commissioners be authorized on receiving applications from any individual or individuals to locate and supervise the making and construction of any levee in his District, he shall have the power to employ any competent Engineer to make the same, and report the result of his work, which shall define the base, height, and location, with the number of cubic yards of earth required for the construction of said work, with his reasons concerning the necessity of said work, to the Commissioners of the District, which shall be laid before the first meeting of the Board of Swamp Land Commissioners; and if the work be ordered, the Commissioners of the District shall immediately take the necessary steps to have it made. The Engineer so employed to be paid for his services at the legal rates.

I would also call your attention to that clause in Act No. 328, section 16, which enacts:

"That the Engineers, and in the event of their absence, the Inspectors, are hereby empowered, within the several levee wards, to call out to work on the levees therein, in case of a crevasse or threatened crevasse, all the male slaves above the age of fifteen, and under sixty, or so many thereof as may be deemed necessary, whose owners reside on the same side of the river or bayou, within seven miles of the threatened danger; provided that this shall not apply to any person living on high lands, that is, lands not alluvial, &c." The clause that I wish particularly to direct attention, is that part which prescribes the bounds of the requisition of the authorities empowered to act in case of danger. The limits by this Act is to seven miles. Beyond this they cannot go.

It must be known to your Excellency, that there are points after points liable to be broken, where it would be impossible to raise a force even of one hundred men, when the exigencies of the times would require three times this number within the limit, thereby depriving the authorities of that assistance necessary to save perhaps a large and productive back country from all the horrors of an inundation.

I most respectfully suggest that the words "within seven miles" be so amended that no difficulty may arise to cripple the efforts of the authorities in preventing or closing up any crevasse as soon as possible after occurring.

I would also recommend to the careful perusal of the honorable members of our Legislature, the Report of the Senate Standing Committee, of the 21st March, 1850, on Levees, Drainage, &c., which clearly and fully shows that the State is possessed of ample means to redeem from overflow, and secure all our public lands, if said means are judiciously applied, and leaving a sinking fund sufficient to enable us for all time to keep these works in repair. In the report to which I allude may be found a summary marked D. D. D., upon which I found my opinion. I would also call attention to the Report on State Levee Districts South of Red River, which is to be found in same Reports, page 36, marked P.

I will suggest what in my opinion appears as the best means to be applied.

There has been so much said on this subject by eminent and professional men, that I feel my incapacity to add anything to the multiplicity of facts already produced upon this interesting subject Yet having been more or less connected with these works for a period of thirty five years, it may be expected that I would give my views relative to that which has for so long a period attracted my attention.

My experience compels me to adopt the conclusion, that we should not depend upon levees, but as auxiliaries.

I fully concur with the opinion of the talented and able Engineer, A. D. Wooldridge, Mr. Ellet, Hugh Grant, Civil Engineers, (who is at present the able Commissioner of the First Swamp Land District,) also of Col. Long, who was connected with the General Government survey, as well as the other eminent Engineers of our own State, who agree that we must adopt some other means of safety than those upon which we are now depending. That the means now used are insecure and inadequate, experience has but too truly demonstrated. It is now with fear and trembling that the citizens of a large portion of our State witness the annual rise of the Mississippi, not knowing at what moment the labor of years may be swept away, and all their plans for the future dissipated.

This insecurity so universally acknowledged, should awaken our State to the obligation resting on her.

Her citizens who plant and expend large amounts of wealth upon her soil, should receive her fostering care. Her whole energies should be directed to securing them means and furnishing that aid without which they have no security for the future. Upon the prosperity of her citizens depends her own existence. By private outlays, and in the face of obstacles that would have disheartened almost any other people, they have raised their State to the high position she now holds, and this should be a powerful incentive, when she has abundant means to relieve from this great responsibility and loss, those to whom she is so deeply indebted.

The means now in use, as I have above mentioned, being insufficient, I will recommend a general system of outlets. I would improve the natural ones now existing, and make such artificial ones as the necessity of the case may require to carry off the surplus water. We all agree as to the necessity of these outlets, but differ as to their location.

In my opinion there should be none constructed lower down than Morganza. That portion lying between the Atchafalaya and Morganza, nature appears to have defined as a proper place for this work. The capacity of the Atchafalaya River, since the removal of its rafts, will afford sufficient outlet, and greatly tend to our relief. It has been doubted whether the Atchafalaya is able to carry off any additional water that may be thrown into it; and I am well aware too, of the jealousy with which her citizens, and all the Parishes of the south-western part of our State, look upon any work that may be done to increase its waters. I would relieve this apprehension by stating that we have a sufficient data by which this stream can be made to carry off double or three times the amount of water that now flows through its channel, by means of the opening and improving of its natural outlets, and making a few artificial ones into the Gulf. Here then would I recommend the first operations, that the Atchafalaya may be ready for any additional water that may be thrown into it.

By opening the outlets to which I have alluded, and receiving the surplus waters of the Mississippi, the south-west not only relieves those portions of our State in the delta of the Mississippi, but she also removes the cause of great loss to herself consequent upon crevasses that may occur.

Should the State increase the power of the Atchafalaya to three times her present capacity to disgorge into the Gulf, and throw into its channel but twice its present amount of water, there certainly could be but little cause for fear or opposition to this measure. And this is all that is asked.

Had it been found impossible to improve the Atchafalaya or its outlets, that a greater quantity of water could be passed through its channel, I would not advise this measure. But the reverse has been clearly proved to be the fact. Our most eminent Engineers, after careful surveys, and from all the evidence that could be collected bearing upon this subject, give us their opinion that this river can be improved as to afford the means of relief to those who have labored so strenuously to obtain it.

For further information I take pleasure in referring to the able report of Hugh Grant, Esq., Chief Engineer, which is to be found in the report of the Senate Committee, of 1850, to which I have before made reference.

Had the Board of Commissioners not been crippled by these unfortunate circumstances to which I alluded in the early part of my report, their attention would have been specially drawn to these outlets, and some action would have been taken by which I would have been able to have furnished the probable estimate of the cost of these works, and also a more complete report upon this subject.

As to the location of the outlets on the Mississippi, I would recommend that one be located about seven miles above Morganza, known as Raccourci, or Tunica Bend. Commencing about the centre of the Raccourci levee, and following a low portion of land that intersects with many bayous, that would lessen the expense of excavating, and falling into the Atchafalaya about 35 miles from its confluence with the Mississippi River. Not only would this location tend much to lessen the labor, but the expense of right of way would be comparatively small to that of any other point, the State already owning the greater portion of the lands through which it would pass. It would also act as a drain for a portion of country that is now subject to inundation.

I think commencing at a point instead of a bend of the river in that vicinity, the tendency to the suction of rafts and driftwood into its channel, would be thus sufficiently obviated by its remoteness from the main channel or deep river bend. It would be fed by the old river made by the Raccourci cut-off, as well as by Mississippi proper.

Lake Moreau, located near the head of the Raccourci cut-off, has been recommended as a suitable point for a minor outlet, as is represented to be already partially formed by nature. I will however defer my recommendation relative to this point, until a thorough examination can be made.

Should the situation be found an eligible one, I will advise that measures be taken to render it available.

I would also recommend a suspension of the sale of those lands belonging to the State, that are subject to overflow, until they may be improved. By our improvements, the value of these are so greatly enhanced, that they become objects of great importance as means of revenue.

The State making outlays to render these lands valuable, should realize by direct income some of the benefits conferred These lands when improved and brought into market, should be sold by the proper authorities at auction to the highest bidder. This would give them to the actual settler, and not place them in the hands of speculators, who enter large bodies of overflowed lands at the Government price, whenever they find the attention of the Commissioners directed towards their improvement.

This system of reservation and sale of these overflowed lands until improved, would result as before stated in an increased revenue, returning to the State a part of the means expended in reclaiming them. It would also increase the population and wealth of the State by actual settlement, reasons sufficient to my mind to render the recommendation proper.

Should the authorities not be able to dispose of a sufficient number of acres to furnish the necessary funds to continue the improvements, a result hardly within the range of possibilities, I think that a resort to the means provided in section nineteenth (19th) of the swamp land law, where the Governor is empowered to meet the wants arising from the happening of any extraordinary event, would be preferable rather than continue a system that precludes the State from the benefits that would accrue in the shape of a large and increasing revenue.

I would further recommend the building of three boats, to be so constructed that in case of crevasses they could be used as pile drivers or tenders, and in low water to be used on different streams of the State for the improvement of the same, either under the direction of the Engineers, or the Commissioners.

Experience has taught us that when crevasses occur, the great difficulty is to obtain

Digitized by Google

earth and the necessary material to close them, and they are often abandoned, when by the assistance of the means such as I have recommended, the great loss consequent upon their occurrence could be removed.

I am of opinion that this measure has been already recommended by our present able and efficient State Engineer.

It was my intention to have visited every Parish in my District, and to have made a personal examination of such points as had been recommended by the citizens, for improvement. But circumstances entirely beyond my control, I regret to say, deprived me of this pleasure.

Feeling a lively interest in the success of the great Internal Improvement system, which I hope our State is about to adopt, and being assured that the means now under her control, if properly directed, will insure to us what I have so ardently desired, it affords me great pleasure to assure your Excelleney of my continued confidence and support, hoping that by your experience you will be enabled to recommend to our next Legislature such laws as they in their wisdom may enact to meet this great emergency.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) S. VAN WICKLE.

REPORT OF THE

ENGINEER OF THE 2D DISTRICT SWAMP LANDS.

Office of Engineer 2d District Swamp Lands.

WEST BATON ROUGE, LA., December 20, 1853.

In conformity with the rules laid down by your honorable Board in the by-laws by which I am governed, I herewith submit you a brief report of my operations during the short time in which I have had the honor to serve upon the Engineer Department of this District.

On the 1st of August, 1853, I was appointed by Mr. Kirkland, Assistant Engineer for the 2d Swamp Land District, and immediately entered upon the duties of my office, and performed the labor required thereby, until the death of Mr. Kirkland, who fell a victim to the yellow fever, from exposure whilst in the active discharge of his official duties, September 29th, 1853.

This unexpected accident deprived the department of the Engineer just at a moment when his services were most needed, and my illness from a severe attack of the same fever, together with your feeble health at the same time, left us almost entirely helpless for awhile; but the prevalence of the epidemic, which scourged our land at a season when our active exertions could be most advantageously employed, effected every department alike, and the work laid out for an early commencement, was thus unavoidably delayed until the advance of the season passed upon us.

In this condition we were placed, when my selection to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Kirkland, was made by you, November 8th, when I took charge of the official papers left by him; and have since endeavored to perform the duties of the office to the best of my ability.

Under your instructions to me, dated November the 8th, I proceeded to the Grand Levee in the Parish of Pointe Coupée, to finish the engineering left incompleted there, and to supervise the construction of the levee.

On November 24th, I repaired to the Atchafalaya River, where I surveyed the localities and leveled the sites for dikes, or levees to be placed across Lake, Middle, Picketts and West Bayous, near their junction with the east side of the Atchafalaya River, and returning there upon the 10th of December. I let out the same work on the 10th and 12th to the lowest bidder, in accordance with advertisement made by you concerning the same.

On the 19th of December, I made a partial survey of Point Manoir, in the Parish of West Baton Rouge, in company with yourself, and since that time, when not engaged in the superintendence of the construction of the Grand Levee, I have been constantly employed in office duties.

I have already formed and divided the District over which my office extends, into Levee Wards and Draining Districts, in conformity with the requirements of the 11th section of the Act, and submit the same for your concurrence, as follows:

District No. 2 of the Swamp Lands is subdivided as follows:

Levee Ward and Drainage District No. 1—Bounded on the North by the 31st degree of latitude; South by the Bayou Plaquemines and Grand River; East by the Mississippi River, and West by the Atchafalaya River.

Levee Ward and Drainage District No. 2—Bounded on the North by Bayou Plaquemines, Grand River, and the Mississippi River; South by the southern boundaries of the Parishes of Assumption, St. Mary and St. Charles; East by the Mississippi River, and the eastern boundary of the Parish of St. Charles; West by Grand River and Lake Palorde.

Levee Ward and Drainage District No. 3—To be composed of the Parishes of Jefferson and Plaquemines, West of the Mississippi River, with their boundaries.

Levee Ward and Drainage District No. 4—To be composed of the Parishes of Lafourche Interior and Terrebonne, with their boundaries.

Levee Ward and Drainage District No. 5—To be composed of the Parishes of St. Mary, St. Martin and Lafayette, and bounded with their lines.

Levee Ward and Drainage Distriet No. 6—To be composed of the Parishes of Vermillion and St. Landry, with their boundaries.

Levee Ward and Drainage District No. 7—To be formed by the Parish of Calcasieu.

The construction of the Grand Levee has engrossed much of my time, and I have co-operated with you as far as possible in removing the many obstacles and vexatious causes which have been thrown in our way to prevent the completion of this great bulwark of defence against the waters of the Mississippi River.

These obstacles, though at one time most formidable, have been entirely surmounted, and we can now congratulate ourselves upon an assurance of the completion of the Grand Levee before the rise of the river shall render the country in danger of an overflow.

My predecessor having surveyed and located the Grand Levee, estimated the work as containing 161,412.30 cubic yards, independent of the centre ditch required beneath the levee, and also the road and its ditches, to draw off transportation of water. For these, however, I have subsequently estimated the centre ditch of five feet width on the top, eighteen inches in the bottom, and four feet deep, measure 3,503.13 cubic yards.

The road, to be ditched and graded heavily, is to be contracted for by linear measure; but its contents are estimated at 7,166.39 cubic yards. This should be constructed as early as the work upon the levee will allow.

The first sale of this levee, in accordance with the provision of the Act, was made August 5th, 1853, at the Grand Levee, and the various sections therein were bid off separately and adjudicated to the lowest bidder, Mr. John Toy, at an average price of 19 3-4 cts. per cubic yard, which brought the cost of the levee proper to $31,217 13, not including the centre ditch and road, the estimate for which as extra work amounts to $2,866 55: 20 cents per cubic yard, bringing the whole cost of the Grand Levee to $34,083 68.

The contractor proceeded at once to arrange matters for an immediate commencement of the work, but the yellow fever made its appearance along the river coast, and sweeping over the Parish of Pointe Coupée with desolating fury, it hovered for weeks in the very vicinity of the Grand Levee, so that it was impossible for any body of men to be brought in the neighborhood of the work. Thus operations thereon were delayed until late in the season, when the scarcity of men, the extraordinary rise in the price of provisions, and materials for labor, rendered it almost impossible for the contractor to comply with his contract; but in the face of such difficulties, he prosecuted the work with what force he could with great exertions collect together, until the expiration of the limited time allowed him to complete this contract on the 1st of December, 1853.

At this time the work not being completed, the contract was declared forfeited and reverted back to this department; and I made an estimate and measurement of the work as already done, so that it might be again sold and prosecuted under your own immediate management. The measurement of this work amounted to 18,043 cubic yards, which at the average cost per cubic yard, amounted to $3,486 25, leaving an amount of 154,118.88 cubic yards to complete the levee, including the extra work of the ditches and road. An immediate arrangement was entered into with several parties, by which the work could be pushed forward most rapidly, but at an advanced rate, for it could not be sold for less than an average of 25 cents per cubic yard, which will increase the cost of constructing the Grand Levee over the first estimate of $34,083 68 to $7,932 29; so that it will require $42,015 97 to construct the work.

The appropriation of $30,000 towards this work, made during the last Legislature, then falls short $12,015 97, and I would most earnestly recommend that this amount be obtained if possible to secure the labor already expended upon this important work, an appropriation which may save millions of dollars to the State.

A careful survey of the confluence of the four bayous mentioned above, with the Atchafalaya River, convinced me of the great benefits to be derived from closing them, an act by which the State would reclaim a large body of land overflowed by the waters of that river, which could be confined to its channel without injury; and in compliance with your instructions, I located and laid off the ground for levees across the mouth of these bayous, and subsequently after the delay of the usual advertisements, I sold the construction of the levees to the lowest bidder, adjudicating them as follows:

Middle Bayou was sold to Mr. J. A. Miller, Parish of Pointe Coupée, at nineteen and three-fourths cents per cubic yard.

Lake Bayou was sold to Mr. E. S. Gordon, Parish of St. Landry, at twenty cents per cubic yard.

Digitized by Google

Picketts Bayou was sold to Mr. E. S. Gordon, Parish St. Landry, at twenty cents per cubic yard.

West Bayou was sold to G. B. Miller as agent for others, at nineteen and one-half cents per cubic yard.

The two first to be completed before the first day of March, 1854, and the two latter next summer, and herewith I enclose you these contracts as signed and delivered in form.

The full employment of my time upon more pressing business of this department, did not allow me to make a complete survey of the Bayou Latenache at its junction with the Atchafalaya River, but from what I have seen, and the best information gleaned from unbiased sources, I am convinced that a large body of swamp and overflowed land may be reclaimed and fully drained, by closing this bayou, as well as others in that vicinity, if a proper drainage of rain water can be had either naturally or artificially. I would therefore suggest that a careful instrumental examination be made of the swamp land lying below the Bayou Latenache, as early as the season will allow.

There are other points requiring urgent attention, by their means of remunerating any outlays that we may place upon them, and to throw into our treasury rich returns; but I would respectfully call your attention in particular to the Bayou Choctaw, emptying into Plaquemine Bay, in the Parish of Iberville, which bayou by being properly cleared out for a few miles, would reclaim to us and bring into market at once a large body of land now nearly worthless, and would materially benefit one of the most important portions of this State. A survey and estimate thereon could be made at any time, and the result I am certain would justify an expenditure for such an improvement. In making surveys for improvements by which the State reclaims large and fertile portions of her overflowed lands, I am the more fully convinced day by day of the great importance of a temporary reservation from market of such lands as are about being improved, and until such improvements are made, so as to render such lands of great value, when they can be thrown into market and sold by auction to the highest bidder.

Thus the actual settler and cultivator is put upon a footing with the speculator, and the State is more properly remunerated for her expenditures in the reclamation and improvement of waste and overflowed lands, whilst the increased revenue accruing from such a step would enable her to prosecute the most enterprising measures for reclaiming to herself a rich domain.

Since my appointment to this office I have received several communications from owners of private lands, requesting me, as Engineer of this District, to survey, lay out, and build for them new levees, where the old levees require removal, upon the banks of the Mississippi River; but as my time has been entirely occupied upon more important duties connected with this office, I have not been able to attend to them, and even had I possessed time to do so, the uncertain and vague interpretation of the language of the Act, would naturally prevent my action in the premises without great assurance. The language of the Act does not in my opinion clearly define my position and duties, except when called to act in cases of emergency; and rather than commit an act not clearly approved by the letter and spirit of the law, I deem it most prudent and advisable to refer the matter to the consideration of your honorable Board of Commissioners, and await your instructions for future directions. I herewith transmit a copy of a letter addressed to me by J. L. Lobdell, Esq., of the Parish of West Baton Rouge, whose legal attainments render his opinion of great weight.

I would suggest and recommend that the 15th section of the Act be so amended as to leave the time for the completion of contracts under the requirements of said Act, to the discretion of the Board of Commissioners and the Engineers of the several Districts, as the fixed time at present specified therein, often renders the making of contracts impossible.

I would also call your attention to that part of section 16 relative to our authority to call out aid from persons living within seven miles of a threatened crevasse, and which authority may often be rendered of little service in sparsely settled districts where such assistance is most likely to be urgently needed.

The prosecution of the various duties incumbent upon this office have been greatly embarrassed by the refusal of the Auditor of the State to advance the funds required, therefore his eccentric opinion leading him to believe that there had been no specific appropriation made by the Legislature to carry out the provisions of the Act to reclaim and drain the swamp and overflowed lands; but neither my predecessor or myself have allowed this action upon the part of the Auditor to retard the work of our office when we could prevent it, and though deprived of our salaries, we have cheerfully advanced the means from our own found, and upon our responsibility, whenever called upon, to forward the pressing and important duties which have frequently devolved upon us.

The greatest economy has been practised, and though greatly in need of the services of an assistant, I have endeavored as far as possible to perform the duties of both offices myself, and have been obliged to furnish the same with the constant use of my own instruments.

This office being destitute of instruments required for the proper surveys and examinations to be frequently made hereafter, I request permission to purchase such instruments and drawing materials as are actually needed by the Engineers.

Before closing this report I would ask your kind indulgence in excusing its length and any omissions that I may have made in thus throwing together for your supervision such remarks as the hurried moments allowed me to perform this duty would permit.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN S. LOBDELL, ESQ., TO L. CALDWELL,

CONCERNING THE BUILDING OF HIS LEVEE BY THE STATE.

BAYOUS, Parish West Baton Rouge, }
Friday, 11th Nov., 1853. }

Mr. LAFAYETTE CALDWELL—Dear Sir: I have just been informed that you have received the appointment of Engineer of Levees in this District, in the place of V. Kirkland, lately deceased, and having endeavored heretofore to get the proper State and parish officers to determine the locality, extent and dimensions of the new levee, to be made on the upper part of my plantation, back of and behind that part of the front where the crevasse occurred in May last, by the caving of the bank and levee, which had been delayed in consequence of the death of Mr. Kirkland, and until another Engineer should be appointed in his place. I will now again renew my request that my new levee be located, its extent and dimensions fixed, and all other proceedings be had required by the laws, and here give you a copy of my note to the Inspector of my District:

"To Mr. JAMES DEVALL, Inspector—28th September, 1853—My Dear Sir: I wish to bring to your notice the necessity of preparing to make the new levee on the upper part of my plantation, back of and behind that part of the front where the crevasse occurred in May last, by the caving in of the bank and levee. Knowing that it is contemplated that all new levees and repairs of old levees are in future to be paid out of the proceeds of the swamp lands donated to the State for that and other purposes, and believing that the Act of our last Legislature intended and did direct the manner in which those new levees and repairs of old levees should be made, I now request, in conformity with the provisions of that Act, that you notify Mr. V. Kirkland, the Engineer of this District, to determine the locality, extent and dimensions of said new levee, and let out the making of said levee in conformity with law. You will readily perceive the importance of acting in this matter without delay, in order that the levee may be made and secured in time te protect not only the swamp lands in the rear, but also the plantations of the neighboring planters, as well as my own plantation. Your early attention to this will oblige yours."

Mr. Devall came up last week, and laid out the route of the new levee, but as you are the proper officer, under the law, to do this and other formalities, I would prefer your making the location, &c., without delay, as it is time to have the levee under way. It is probable I may bid off the making of it, and if so, will be willing to receive the warrant of the Commissioners on the Auditor, or any other reasonable arrangement.

I am very sincerely yours,
(Signed,) JOHN S. LOBDELL.

MINORITY REPORT

OF THE COMMITTEE ON

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS AND LEVEES.

THE undersigned, one of the committee on Internal Improvements and Levees, to whom was referred the memorial of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company, and the New Orleans Opelousas and Great Western Railroad Company, begs leave to Report that he cannot give his sanction to the Bill reported by the majority, favoring the prayer of petitioners.

The undersigned regrets that the few moments allowed to prepare this report precludes the possibility of submitting his views at length, or in such form as the importance of the subject demands.

The bill reported by the majority provides, that the city of New Orleans, in her corporate capacity, may subscribe for two millions of the capital stock of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company, and for one million, five huudred thousand dollars of the New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad Company, for which she shall issue her bonds, payable in twenty years, drawing six per cent. interest, which bonds shall be received by said corporation in lieu of the tax subscription voted by the property holders of the city upon their real estate.

The undersigned concurs with the majority, that to grant the prayer of petitioners, would facilitate their operations, and also remove much dissatisfaction that now exists, on account of the heavy burthens resting upon the tax payers of New Orleans; but the undersigned is also aware that the people in other portions of the State have burthened themselves in like manner to forward those great enterprises, and have no hope of relief, but through their industry and economy, and are totally unprepared to submit to any further demands at present. Under this view of the subject the undersigned, as one of the representatives of the people, cannot see the propriety of this Legislature extending further aid at the present moment to corporations, or of attempting to relieve the citizens of New Orleans from the consequences of their own deliberate act. It is true the eventual liability of the State would not be increased, but its immediate liability would.

The bill reported by the majority provides that these bondswhen issued shall be received by the corporations as cash, consequently the State will be called upon at once for her bonds, amounting to one-fifth, or $700,000, and this legislature to discharge the agreeable duty of passing an act taxing the people $42,000 more to meet the interest on Railroad bonds for the year 1854, which, added to the tax already imposed, will swell the amount to $92 350 00, in the shape of interest, improvement tax, &c., and for one I am unwilling to increase taxation for this or any other purpose.

The people of this State have gone to the extent of their ability to the aid of these valuable works; many of us have subscribed liberally as individuals, and others in their municipal capacity.

We have calculated to a dollar the extent of the demands against us, and the resources to meet those demands, and find that anything more at present would be burthensome in the extreme, but give us time, and we will not only discharge what we have already promised, to facilitate the improvement of our State, but will, as we become able, extend that aid.

There is one other objection to the bill presented by the majority, that has greater influence upon the undersigned than any other, which is, that this issue of three millions five hundred thousand dollars worth of bonds by the city, together with the seven hundred thousand dollars of State bonds, will be immediately converted into Banking capital. It is true that the clause, authorizing that, has been stricken out of this bill, but only for the purpose of incorporating it in another.

Digitized by Google

The undersigned does not pretend to doubt the eventual payment of these bonds nor would he be understood as expressing theleast doubt that all the parties would act in good faith, but simply to make his solemn protest against the strong disposition that prevails in this House in favor of expensive paper currency. Twenty years experience has convinced the undersigned that it is dangerous to the interest of those whom he has the honor to represent.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. W. McDONALD.

REPORT

OF THE

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATORS.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana:

The Board of Administrators of the Charity Hospital, respectfully submit the following annual statement of its affairs to your honorable body:

That during the past year the charities and care of the Hospital have been extended to 13,759 sick or disabled persons, of which number 12,383 were of foreign birth, 1,306 natives of other States of the confederacy, 120 of unknown nativity, and only 228 natives of Louisiana; that during the same period the cost of maintenance has been $54,534 68, the disbursements $69,805 62, and the amount received from passengers through the operation of the tax $53,482 51; that heretofore, while every annual statement has shown a heavy debit account against the Hospital, being for the year of 1852, $11,001 94; for 1851, $23,853 45; for 1850, $22,360 82, we are happy to state the cheering fact, that for the year just ended (1853), this large arrearage has been reduced to a cipher, leaving it for the first time since 1842, altogether free from encumbrance or debt. Doubtless much of this change and improvement is due to the contract system for supplying the Hospital, recently adopted by the Board of Administrators, and the commendable zeal and energy of the present Treasurer, in reviving and diligently prosecuting sources of revenue, which had been allowed to dry up, and in buying, whenever he was required to do it, in the cheapest market, such supplies as were not subject to contract.

It is the opinion of the Board, that this favorable change in its fiscal affairs might be made permanent, and thus relieve the State from all farther demands upon its treasury and our citizens at large from an equivalent taxation, except what may be required for the repair and preservation of the property. This opinion is predicated upon the fact that the change made by the Legislature at its last session, in the tax on passengers, will be fully adequate to meet all its expenses, except those just alluded to. It is not known whether in accordance with the suggestions of our predecessors, in reference to the tax, the State has taken such measures as will place its legality beyond the power of the parties who pay it, to contest it; if not, the Board would urgently press this matter upon the attention of the Legislature, as one of the very highest importance. Should this resource be materially curtailed, or the right to levy and collect the same be put at issue before our federal court, it would sensibly involve the ways and means of the Hospital and require the loss sustained through so untoward an event to be made good out of the State Treasury. It is needless to dwell longer upon what is self-obvious and so directly appeals to the interests of the State and its representatives.

In connection with this matter and directly germain to it, is a suggestion we venture to bring to your notice, that in legislating to to preserve the resources upon which the Hospital mainly depends, would it not be fit and expedient to establish such a system of quarantine as will exempt both our city and Hospital from the manifold expense of providing for, nursing and burying a large class of immigrants who bring to our shores both want and disease? Such an establishment founded by authority of the State, at localities remote from our city, under wise and enlightened direction, would diminish the mortality already burdensome to this Institution, and prevent the introduction of certain forms of disease into our city, whose habitudes are alike unknown to our clime and people. Reference is here distinctly had to the class of Fevers known as typhus or ship fever, of which annually a large per cen'um is introduced into both city and Hospital, and which, like a slow consuming fire, gradually extends itself into the immigrant hovel and boarding-house, and from thence, as from perennial sources, supplies no inconsiderable item of sickness, pauperism, widowhood and orphanage, to be relieved from the charities of our people and State. A well digested scheme of quarantine, it is confidently believed, would prevent all the attendant evils upon the introduction of this disease into our midst, as the uniform experience of civilized communities settles the fact that no one form of disease is more amenable to such wholesome discipline than ship fever.

Without placing in a similar category the late epidemic, whose dreadful devastations are still fresh in our memories, but concerning the origin and communicable nature of which, enough doubt is felt by some of the profession and a large portion of our non-professional citizens to entitle it to a fair and rigid experiment, it is conceived that, when a disease, like ship fever, of known contagious properties, and of which the introduction among us annually, is a well settled fact, may be prevented by such regulations, it becomes the bounden duty of the highest authorities of the land at once to devise such, and spare the dark record our indifference is registering against us. It is plainly one of the highest functions of government to make ample provision for the security and promotion of the public health; and this, which is an implied obligation of all governments, irrespective of its forms, becomes a paramount duty among those, which represent, in their essence and nature, the great fact of their derivation from the public will.

While we advocate the policy of making quarantine a measure of relief to our city and Hospital, by shutting out access to both of certain designated classes of disease, it may be well to enquire into the feasibility of making it at the same time a self-sustaining institution. This, we are of opinion, can be readily done. The great difficulty in the way of establishing a rigid and useful quarantine (and one not severe and exact in its requirements, would be worse than useless) is the expense it will involve. The purchase and preparation of suitable localities and the erection thereon of proper buildings for the accommodation of the sick, will require in the beginning a heavy outlay. This once incurred, and the State become vested in the property and its improvements, the process of making it, to a great degree, if not wholly, a self-supporting institution, is neither difficult nor impracticable.

For example, as quarantines are designed to operate only against sick immigrants and foul ships, let the State require that all such pay over at the quarantine grounds, to an officer to be designated by law, the amount of the tax due and collectable of such ships and passengers. This sum, it is believed will at the close of the year, be found quite adequate to meet the current expenses of the officers and men necessary to enforce its regulations. If the average experience of the past five years can furnish any grounds for an opinion, it is deemed decisive of this matter; inasmuch as during this whole period one-fifth of the immigrant passengers to our port were properly subjects of quarantine regulations. That this opinion is not a loose or random one, we refer to the present and previous reports from the years 1849 to 1853 inclusive, in which it will be seen that the average receipts from the passenger tax in this term of five years is $52,132 53, of which a deduction of one-fifth for sick or invalid passengers, the number deemed subject to the operation of your quarantine, would yield an annual income of $10,426 50, a sum believed to be approximatively correct and necessary for the support of the institution. This amount, it is true, will abstract from that which goes into the treasury of the Charity Hospital, but it should be remembered that while this is happening with the funds, a similar and compensatory process is happening with those, who would go into it as sick and become its dependent inmates. You will in this way keep out of the Hospital and consequently out of the city, a large class of sick, infected with a communicable disorder, and to nurse, provide for, and finally to bury, whom in the city requires immense care and increased expenditure. Were this the proper place for such details it could be shown, with all the exactness of numerical proof, that the introduction of one ship load of invalid immigrants into the city involves larger expense to the community than ten vessels freighted with ten times the number of healthy and vigorous persons. But, be this as it may, it must be apparent that in the end nothing will be lost to the Hospital by keeping out of its wards the immigrant sick and deducting the equivalent for his support elsewhere—out of what he is required by your laws to pay as the condition of your hospitality. It surely will matter nothing, whether these simple duties be rendered here or elsewhere, while as to the expense and policy of such a measure, it could be justified on the clearest grounds of expediency and self-interest.

From the report of the House Surgeon the Board is informed that, beside the sick, who are the proper recipients of your charity, the hospital is burdened with the support of two hundred pensioners, or infirm paupers, who, inadequate to the support of themselves, and in the absence of suitable asylums for such an unhappy class, have no alternative between the city workhouses and the hospital. Their presence in the latter is attended with considerable expense, and gives rise, not unfrequently, to occasions in which the governance and discipline of the house require an example to be made by the summary dismissal of the more seditious among them. This has occurred within the experience of the present Board, and it has been constrained by a sense of pity and commisseration to restore the unfortunate delinquent, under conviction that the claims of humanity were stronger than the ingratitude which, at times, it seems capable of exhibiting. The fact, however, of so large a number of paupers annually dependent on the charities of our hospital, is one too significant to pass without receiving a notice at the hands of the Board. It is believed to be no unfair index of the existence in our midst of a more prevalent pauperism than is generally acknowledged. As yet no successful effort has been made by either city or State Government to take cognizance of this class by making provision for them in Asylums or Alms Houses, and bringing them under such subjection as will make their support the least burdensome to society. Beyond what has been done by the associated benevolence and enterprise of some of our citizens, our growing commercial capitol has no one public edifice consecrated to the relief, support, training, and moral care of our adult poor population. Its Orphan Asylums and Widows' Home are noble indications of the prevalence of an enlightened philanthropy, but the relief they give is necessarily confined to a limited number, leaving unprovided a large class, who, homeless and friendless, drift through society until crime or disease drive them into your workhouses or hospitals. And all this occurs, too, in a city which, by its annual contributions to the treasury of the State of more than a quarter of a million of dollars, has disabled itself from making such provision as the necessity and humanity of the case demand. Besides the infirm poor, the same authority mentions as inmates of the hospital five insane, and twenty-three blind persons, all of whom are misplaced at such an institution. Did the Board feel itself warranted to suggest the means of relief by which the good aimed to be accomplished by the establishment of such institutions, could be secured without either an additional tax or the restitution of any portion of that which is at present levied, it might call the attention of the Legislature to one single item in its ordinance defining the kinds of property and pursuits subject to taxation, and which, we are informed on the authority of the State Tax Collectors, has never been enforced, which, if revised and put in such form as to facilitate its collection, would be adequate in a few years to meet all the expenses necessary to construct and put in successful operation one, at least, of these benevolent institutions. But as this is a matter foreign to its nature and functions, it contents itself with a bare allusion to it, hoping that the wisdom and philanthropy of that body will impel it to some active exertion in behalf of this unhappy class.

On reference to the tabular statement of the diseases which have been treated in the Hospital during the past year, and which are annexed herewith, it will be seen that the number of yellow fever cases amount to 3212, against 2811 in the year of 1847, the last fatal and wide spread epidemic year; the number discharged 1487, against 1584, and the deaths, 1890 against 895 for the same season; a fact proving what few will be willing to contest, a greater malignancy and a wider diffusion of the fever of this season. Another view of the same fact shows us, that while our public charity institution received and cared for 3212 sufferers, a voluntary association of citizens, according to their own report, had the exclusive care and management of 11,088 patients, of whom 2942 died and 8146 were discharged. But exclusive of the bearing of this fact on the unwonted malignancy and general prevalence of the fever of 1853, the mind is forced to the belief that great and severe disasters, like our recent affliction, show the liability of government, unless strictly administered with reference to the growing necessities of its people, to be outstripped by the zeal and energies of voluntary associations. And were anything more needed to demonstrate this, it can be found in the anomolous condition in which this Association finds itself at the close of its arduous labors. What this is, its own statement will show for us. After being charged with the care and management of its 11,088 patients, and expending liberally of the large and handsome amount of $228,927 32, so generously donated by the spontaneous sympathies of our sister cities. to relieve the heavy hand of sickness and death pressing upon our people, its labors are blessed at the close of this scene, with a handsome balance which it has found useful and lucrative investment for. Who can doubt that it was the duty of our authorities to have done what this association did ? to have displayed the same alacrity, energy and devotion ? or who can hesitate to say that, having been alive to this exigency, and having met it in the same spirit and zeal, it would not have been its bounden duty to have made such a disposition of the surplus bounty, which would then have been its own, as to have built alms houses and such other suitable charities, as the gift-moneys were designed to aid and promote ? Comment is unnecessary, so surely and swiftly do constituencies outgrow their governments, whenever the latter become oblivious of the high ends for which they have been instituted.

Accompanying this report, the Board feel it their duty to transmit a letter from an Architect of standing and competent judgment, from which it will be perceived that numerous and important repairs will be needed during the current year, in order to preserve the usefulness of the Hospital, but which will require a sum too large for its present revenues to meet. It is hoped that the earliest attention will be given to this subject. It gives the Board pleasure to bear witness to the continued good order, system and care which characterises the internal economy and administration of the Hospital, a large portion of which is justly attributed to the admirable judgment and exact and punctual habits of the Sisters of Charity. There is much, however, that might be suggested in the way of amendment, but as this more properly belongs to the jurisdiction of the Administrators, it will be foreign to our duties to notice it here. There is but one subject more to which the Board would respectfully call the notice of the Legislature. It will be observed that during the year, there were born in the Hospital 159 children. Now it is not generally known that there are no wards assigned for maternity uses outside the wing in which are collected all the female patients of the house. Looking to the interests and welfare of society, in having well instructed accoucheurs, and to the direct relations, such an institution would have, on medical education, in your State College, it becomes a question of the first importance for you to consider the propriety of instituting a Maternity, where all the poor who may desire the skill and aid of educated attendants, could have access in that critical and important epoch. Such an institution should be erected on a separate lot of ground, and built with reference to its objects. As an adjunct to the Hospital, it would become a powerful incentive to medical education, and collect annually classes of students, whose admission to, and use of its advantages for a small fee, would, in a very short space of time, refund the original cost of its erection.

A. FORSTER AXSON, V. P

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2d, 1854.

To the Board of Administrators of the Charity Hospital of New Orleans:

Gentlemen—I have the honor to submit to you the following report and estimate of the cost for erecting the new additions, and making all the necessary alterations and extensive repairs required throughout the premises known as the Charity Hospital.

The present old brick building now occupied for dead houses and dissecting rooms, and the adjoining narrow wooden building known as the Cottage, are both in a bad condition, and altogether insufficient and unsuitable for the purposes for which they are used. I would recommend to have them taken down, and cause new and suitable buildings to be erected in their place, according to plans and specifications which I intend to prepare and submit for your approval.

The main centre building fronting towards Common street, is in a state of dilapidation, and will require extensive repairs, to be made without delay.

The rear galleries, the roofs and gutters are very bad, and I must say unsafe and dangerous should they remain much longer in such a condition. Most all the lower flooring, and, I have no doubt, a great many of the floor joists will have to be made new; the plastering, both inside and out, need extensive repairs, coloring and whitewashing; the wood work, usually painted throughout the building, should receive two coats of best white lead and oil, mixed with such plain colors as may be chosen.

The offices on Common street, require to be repaired, cleaned and painted; and a new addition suitable for an out door consultation office and students' room, erected adjoining one of them.

The other buildings on the premises (not herein mentioned) will require more or less repairs, cleaning and painting.

The cost of erecting the new additions, and for making all the necessary alterations and extensive repairs throughout in the most careful, substantial, and good workmanlike manner, agreeably to my views and rough estimate, will be in the neighborhood of Forty Thousand Dollars. It may be necessary to remark that, should the buildings be left for another year or more in their present condition, the cost will no doubt far exceed that amount.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Very Respectfully,
Your Obedient Servant,
HENRY HOWARD,
Architect.

N. B. In some instances the number of discharges and deaths will exceed the number of admissions, and vice versa. This proceeds from the patients having several diseases, at the time of their entrance, and therefore of their being discharged cured, or dying of a different disease from that which they are subsequently treated and finally discharged.

I may also mention that when the discharges or deaths exceed the number of admissions, it may be owing to the number of patients who are remaining in the hospital, at the end of the last year, who have since mostly all died, or been discharged, and vice versa. When the admissions exceed the number of discharges and deaths, it is owing to the number of patients still in the hospital, who have neither died nor been discharged.

In the above list of diseases I have inserted the words nothing and uncertain. The former explains thus: many of the patients admitted have been discharged, there being no ailment requiring an admission. It may also be worth mentioning that often it happens that children who are in good health, have to be admitted, their mothers being at the time very sick, and vice versa.

Uncertain. It occurs often that patients are brought in and die before they have reached their wards, and unseen by the attending physician, and their ticket subsequently signed as uncertain. It also happens that patients have absconded the premises, and having left their ticket in the ward, and in the impossibility of ascertaining what ailment they had when admitted, the word uncertain is therefore written down in place of the disease.

(Signed) H. VENDERLINDEN, Clerk.

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE

VICKSBURG, SHREVEPORT AND TEXAS RAILROAD.

MONROE, La.,
September 26, 1853.

To the Stockholders of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company:

GENTLEMEN—In pursuance of the requirements of the 15th section of the Charter, the President and Directors of the Company beg leave to make a Report of the "operations and business of the past year, and of the financial affairs of the Company." In performing this duty, we would first remark, that the prevalence of a fatal epidemic has materially retarded our operations for the last month, and perhaps may continue to delay our progress for some weeks to come.

The Charter of the Company was adopted in Convention at this place on the 5th day of July, 1852. By the 4th section, the "corporation was to go into effect and be organized as soon as shares of Capital Stock to the amount of $250,000 were subscribed." On the 24th January, 1853, (more than $250,000 having been subscribed,) the Company was organized by the election of a Board of fifteen Directors, who, at a meeting held the next day, proceeded to elect officers and fixed the salary of the President at $2,500 per annum; that of the Treasurer at $500; and that of the Secretary at $1000—payable in quarterly instalments.

Under resolutions of the Board, the President addressed a memorial to the Congress of the United States, asking a grant of land to aid in the enterprise, and also a memorial to the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, requesting amendments to the Charter, and, likewise, State aid. The application to Congress was too late to be available at the last session; but the Directors entertain a strong conviction that at the approaching session a grant of lands will be made, which will be suitable to the magnitude and importance of the work.

The application to the Legislature of the State was entirely successful. The restrictions imposed upon works of Internal Improvement, by the old Constitution, were removed; the Charter was greatly amended, and a law was passed, authorizing a subscription of $800,000 in the Stock of the Company.

The private subscriptions of stock amount to $521,250, distributed as follows, viz: the city of Vicksburg, $111,550; parish of Madison, $55,250; parish of Morehouse, $41,825; parish of Carroll, $2,200; parish of Ouachita, $109,800; parish of Jackson, $53,825; parish of Bienville, $47,750; parish of Claiborne, $58,725; parish of Bossier, $7,500; parish of Caddo, $30,525; and the parish Caldwell, $2,300.

In addition to the State and private subscriptions, the parish of Caddo, in its parochial capacity, has subscribed $100,000, payable in five years, and the parish of Ouachita $150,000, payable in ten years. The city of Shreveport has also subscribed $30,000 by her corporate authorities.

It is due, in this connection, to state that the Police Jury of Ouachita denies the legality of the subscription on the part of the parish, and the subject is now before the proper judicial tribunal. A recapitulation shows the following amount of Stock Subscriptions, viz:

State subscription, - -	$800,000
Private do. - -	521,250
Parish of Caddo, - -	100,000
Parish of Ouachita, -	150,000
City of Shreveport, - -	30,000

The receipts into the Treasury of 5 per cent., which is required at the time of subscribing, amount to $15,752 50; and the disbursements of the Company, from the commencement of the enterprise to the present period, amount to $10,175 80, (as will be perceived by the report of the Treasurer, hereto annexed) leaving a balance on hand of $5,576 70.

The difference between the 5 per cent. on the whole amount subscribed, and 5 per cent. received into the Treasury, is thus explained: The late subscriptions in Vicksburg, Morehouse, Ouachita, Jackson, Bienville and Claiborne have not been paid in full into the Treasury, in consequence of the prevailing epidemic; and the 5 per cent. on the original subscriptions in Caddo and Claiborne, from some cause unknown to the Directors, is still unpaid, although repeated applications have been made to the commissioners to have the same adjusted. The Directors entertain no doubt that these amounts will be settled and paid up within a very short period, nor have they any doubt that the late subscriptions will be collected in due time for the necessities of the Company.

The Convention which adopted the original Charter, appointed an Executive Committee composed of the following gentlemen: H. L. Douglass, of Caddo; Richard Featherston, of Madison; John Ray, James H. Stevens, and James P. Crosley, of Ouachita. This Committee was required to transact all the business necessary to accomplish the objects of the Convention, and first and especially to cause to be executed a preliminary survey of the route. On the 9th of August, 1852, the Executive Committee contracted with P. J. Tournadre, Esq., a competent engineer, who, with a suitable corps of assistants, explored and surveyed the route according to agreement, and to the satisfaction of the Board of Directors in office at the time of receiving his report on the 2d May, 1853.

As the report of the Engineer has been published by order of the Board, it is not deemed necessary to recapitulate its contents, except to state that the whole length of the road, from the Mississippi to the Texas line, is 207 miles; and that the estimate of the cost of construction and preparation for business, is $3,153,342, or an average of $15,233 per mile. [See Engineer's Report.]

On the 2d day of May, 1853, the Board of Directors elected Mr. Tournadre, the Chief Engineer of the Company, at a salary of $300 a month, during the continuance of his services.

The Engineer has completed the work of locating the road from Shreveport to the Texas line, and contracts have been made to open and clear the track seventy-five feet on each side. He has also located about fifteen miles west of the Ouachita river, and is now ready to commence the location of that section between the Mississippi and the town of Richmond. These operations of the Engineer have been performed under resolutions of the Board in May last, instructing the President to commence work on the sections west of the Mississippi, Ouachita and Red rivers, so soon as the sum of $150,000 should be subscribed and designated by stockholders to each of those three sections, respectively.

In the opinion of the Board, the Company may safely undertake to commence actual work, with a confident belief that a sufficient sum has been subscribed to complete these three sections of twenty miles in extent each, and also that a commencement of operations will inspire confidence in the final consummation of the whole enterprise, whereby a large accession of stock subscriptions will be secured.

The Board of Directors have not applied to the State for a payment on its subscription, because, from the small amount of payments actually received into the Treasury, the pro ra'a payment by the State would scarcely justify an issuance of the Bonds of the State; and because the necessities of the Company have not, as yet, required more money than they have at command.

As soon as it may become necessary to pay contractors, the application should be, and of course will be made, for a payment on the part of the State.

Which is most respectfully submitted.

N. D. COLEMAN,
President.

Office of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company.
MONROE, Sept. 26, 1853.

To N. D. COLEMAN, Esq., President:

Sir,—To enable the Directors of the Company to comply with the 15th section of the Charter, I beg leave to present the following Tables, marked "A" and "B," showing the financial condition of the Company.

The whole 5 per cent. received into the Treasury, being the payment required upon subscribing, amounts to $15,752 50. The whole disbursement, up to date, amounts to $10,175 80—leaving a balance in the Treasury of $5,576 70. See Tables annexed.

Very respectfully,
JNO. RAY, Treasurer.

MONROE, La., January 1, 1854.

Office of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company.

MONROE, La., Jan. 10, 1854.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana:

In pursuance of the 10th Section of an Act of the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, entitled an Act to provide for the manner of giving the aid of the State to Railroad and Plankroad Companies, approved April 28, 1853: the President and Directors of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company, beg leave to make the following Report:

At the date of the passage of the beforementioned act, the private subscriptions of Stock in said Company amounted to the sum of ($285,000) two hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars. Since that period the private subscriptions have been increased to the sum of five hundred and forty-four thousand six hundred dollars ($544,600), which is distributed as follows, viz: Vicksburg, $111,550; Madison parish, $66,300; Morehouse, $41,825; Carroll, $4,500; Ouachita, $109,800; Jackson, $53,825; Bienville, $47,750; Caddo, $30,525; Caldwell, $2,300; New Orleans, $10,000; Claiborne, $58,725; Bossier, $7,500.

The parochial and city subscriptions of Stock are as follows, viz: the parish of Madison, $100,000, payable in five years; the parish of Ouachita, $150,000, payable in ten years, and the parish of Caddo, $160,000, payable in five years; to which must be added a subscription of $30,000 by the corporate authorities of the city of Shreveport, making the sum of ($380,000) three hundred and eighty thousand dollars.

It is proper to state, that the President of the Board of Police, for the parish of Ouachita, denies the legality of the subscription, by that parish, and the question is now before the proper judicial tribunal. It is also due, to state that the police jury of Caddo, has passed an ordinance, resubmitting the subject of a parish subscription to the landholders, and although the election was to be held or was holden on the last day of December past, the result has not been communicated to the Board.

If these two parish subscriptions shall be held good, a recapitulation shows the condition of the Stock subscriptions, as follows, viz:

Private subscriptions -	$544,600
Parish and city subscriptions	380,000
State subscriptions - -	800,000
See Act.	$1,724,600

The Engineer of the company has furnished surveys of the route, and finds the distance from the West bank of the Mississippi river, opposite to the city of Vicksburg, to the Texas line, to be a fraction under two hundred and seven miles, passing through the parishes of Madison, Carroll, Morehouse, Ouachita Jackson, Bienville, Bossier and Caddo.

The Engineer has also located and staked out for contracts, twenty miles, extending from Vicksburg to Richmond, the seat of justice in Madison parish. Twenty miles, extending from Shreveport to the line of xas, and about fifteen miles extending m the Ouachita river westward.

Contracts have been made to open the ck of the road from Shreveport to the xas line, and opening ten miles of the d on the section between Vicksburg and hmond, and the work is progressing.

The company has advertised for contracts open the line and embanking the whole tion between Vicksburg and Richmond, ; as yet, none have been closed, except as ore stated.

For a more particular account of the con- ion of the Company, as well as for a speci- statement of the receipts and expendi- es, the Directors beg leave to refer to ir First Annual Report, a printed copy which, is hereunto appended, marked A, l made a part of this Report.

That Report was made on the 26th day of September last, since which time, collections have been made by the commissioners, of the five per cent. payments, but not yet reported to the Board. The only expenditures since that period, consist in the payment of salaries to the officers and the expenditures of the Engineering Department, for which amounts, the Directors refer to the statement of the Treasurer.

The Company has not needed money, as yet, therefore no money has been borrowed, nor has any application been made for an issuance of the Bonds of the State.

In conclusion, the Board of Directors confidently hope, that in a very short time, they will have under contract, the section from Vicksburg to Richmond, and that from Shreveport to the line of Texas.

Which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE

ON THE

NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON AND GREAT NORTHERN AND NEW ORLEANS, OPELOUSAS AND GREAT WESTERN RAILROADS.

To the Hon. W. W. FARMER,
President of the Senate, and

Hon. J. M. SANDIDGE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives:

The Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives who were directed by joint resolutions to make an examination of the condition of the two great Railroad Companies in the city of New Orleans, viz:

The New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad, and the New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad, have performed the duty assigned to them, and ask leave to report.

The committee, clothed with full powers by the resolutions creating them, proceeded to prepound to each of the companies above stated, the following interrogatories, requiring answers to same, and also a submission of their books. And the committee are gratified to be able to state that these requisitions were met by most prompt and obliging compliance on the part of both the companies:

1st. The surveys: by whom, and when made? Their cost? Whole expense of same, including incidental disbursements appertaining thereto.

2d. The location of depots. What governed their selection and location? Their cost? What would have been the comparative cost with locations for same upon other points in the city? Could or could not the Jackson road have crossed the New Orleans canal with equal, or greater public benefit?

3d. Actual condition of the roads? What section, or sections, if any, may be considered finished? What test, if any has been made as to its capability of bearing up weight? If such test was made, what was the result? What sections are unfinished? How much of the roads are now under contract?

4th. Financial affairs of the Road: State the selling of all Bonds; to whom? Whether all the formalities required by law have been complied with? Whether any of the officers or directors have been under advances to the company? If any, what officers? What amount was so advanced? And have any charges on said advances been other than such as are usually made?

The answers to the foregoing interrogatories were promptly made; the Committee have compared them with the books of the companies and find them correct. The data from which they are made is of record in said books, viz:

The letter book, the book registering the sessions and acts of the Board of Direction, and the several books of accountability—all of said answers are annexed hereto in appendix form, and are respectfully submitted.

The Opelousas Road Company have furnished by way of replies, six documents, viz:

No. 1—Surveys.
No. 2—Depots.
No. 3—Condition of Road.
No. 4—Financial Statement.
No. 5—Company's Bonds.
No. 6—State Bonds.

These documents were compared with the books of the company, and were found to be correct. The road is in very good progress and the committee are entirely satisfied with the excellent management of its Board of Directors.

The replies of the Jackson Railroad Company are accompanied with a report and general statement of its affairs, herewith annexed in the appindix, by its President, James Robb, Esq., some portions of which require special notice from the Committee.

In answer to the first interrogatory, the Engineer of the Company is brief, but refers to the report made to the Legislature in January last, from which with other data the following information was gathered:

In the spring of 1851, in anticipation of legal organization, provisional arrangements were made, and about 300,000 dollars paid in, 5 per cent. of which was collected to defray expenses of preliminary surveys and reconnaissances, under the direction of W. S. Campbell, Esq., who had been elected Chairman of Committee on Surveys; various routes were examined, amounting to about three hundred miles, with a view of determining the best, and a definitive location was made under the direction of the said Chairman, to the Pine Hills, a distance of about forty-seven miles.

The professional services of Mr. Campbell were at this time rendered gratuitously. He receiving no compensation whatever for them.

These large disbursements for surveys, location of road, depots and their incidental expenses, at first sight may appear extravagant. The Committee, however, are of opinion that, in considering the difficulty of the different routes proposed in the beginning, and the very many lines run, leveled, and otherwise examined. They are merely such as experience in like operations renders entirely reasonable. There has been from the first a conflict of opinion in reference to the line of road to be adopted, and it was important to find a preference upon certain positive basis, which in the judgment of the Committee, has been done.

Documents A, B and C, are answers to the second interrogatories, and show conclusively that the best judgment has been given of the proper location for the main depot. In the estimation of the Committee, none other could have combined the same advantages; and they are confident that they will be concurred with by any who are willing to be informed on the subject. The principal cotton presses (as well from position, as from their amount of business.) The proximity of the great bulk of the ocean and river shipping. The peculiar curve of the water line, or river bank, making the main depot nearly central to a semicircle of about three miles, (the shortest radius of which would be to the foot of Canal street,) besides the utter impracticability of crossing the Orleans Canal, with a railroad whose train must be estimated to extend to something like from 1,500 to 2,000 feet, all are causes the most cogent for the selection made. Their explanations are unnecessary to those who have known that in every case, (in our own country and elsewhere) where depots have originally been situated in cities, or very near to their suburbs, they have been decided to be nuisances, and have been removed to more remote points. In the city of Boston, the main depots of the roads are so remote as to create a necessity for a peculiar sort of labor providing an honest living for thousands—it has been estimated that the drayage and porterage alone from those depots are more productive than the whole business of the city of Memphis.

Documents D, E, F, G, I, J, K, relate to the financial condition of the company. They are specific in details, and exhibit the various financial operations of the company from the time of its Creation to the day of this examination; the Committee have given to this subject the fullest examination, and as the agents of the State, feel authorised to report that the most efficient supervision of the interests of the stockholders has never been lost sight of.

It will be seen by these documents, that the President of the Company, James Robb, Esq., has advanced largely to the company, and that his exertions have, more than any other auxiliary means, (until the protecting hand of the State came in support) kept up the progressing accomplishment of this great enterprise.

This gentleman is, in the estimation of the Committee, entitled to high commendation, indeed, for his untiring energy and zeal in forwarding by the application of private means, to an enormous amount, a work of public utility in which, if he be more largely interested than others, results only from a fostering spirit towards an improvement to which he gave origin and life, and for the accomplishment of which, he is willing to make sacrifices.

LOUIS G. DeRUSSY,
Chairman Senate Committee.

JAMES H. CALDWELL,
Chairman House Committee.

2d. The location of depot, &c.—What overned the selection and adoption of same? 'heir cost?

3d. The present condition of the road—What sections are yet to be finished? What ections may be considered finished, and if o, what test, if any, has been made in reerence to its capability of bearing up? and vhat is the result?

4th. The condition of the financial affairs of the road—Selling of all Bonds? to whom, ıt what rate? How much of their proceeds ıave been expended? How much on hand?

The following interrogatories were added, on motion of Mr. Kenner:

And whether all the formalities required by law with regard to publication, &c., have been complied with?

Whether any of the officers or directors of the Company have been under advances to the Company, if any, what officers; what ımount advanced, and whether the charges on said advances have been such as are usually made?

SURVEYS.

In December, 1851, and April, 1852, the first surveys were made for the Road, by A. S. Phelps and Major Blanchard, under the directions of the Executive Committee.—Those surveys embraced an examination of several different routes between Algiers and Berwicks Bay, a distance of eighty-two miles. The cost of these surveys amounted to $3,500.

After the organization of the Company, the surveys were renewed in September, 1852, under the direction of Mr. Gibbes, the chief engineer, by Mr. G. W. R. Bayley and A. S. Phelps, assistant engineers. By the 1st of April, 1853, the experimental lines and actual location had been completed as far as Washington, one hundred and sevety-three miles. Experimental lines had also been run as far as the Texas line, striking the Sabine at Logansport and at Darnell's Ferry. The location was under the immediate direction of Mr. Bayley, and the experimental surveys under that of Mr. Phelps.

The total number of miles surveyed amounted to over one thousand, and was accomplished at an aggregate cost of $25,500, including the necessary instruments and an outfit of two wagons, four mules and two small boats.

(Signed) J. H. OVERTON,
President.

DEPOTS.

Land for two depots has been purchased, one at Algiers to suit the business of the 2d and 3d Districts, and the other at Gretna to suit that of the 1st and 4th Districts.

The first has a front on the river of 375 feet, and a depth of 24 arpents, containing about 46 square arpents, and was purchased for $20,000.

That at Gretna has a front of 4 arpents and a depth of 40 arpents, and was purchased for $39,600.

(Signed) J. H. OVERTON,
President.

CONDITION OF ROAD.

The road from Algiers to Washington, one hundred and seventy-three miles, and a branch of road to Breaux's Bridge of nineteen miles, has all been put under contract. Little or no work has been done above Berwick's Bay, and most of the hands now employed on the road, (500 in number) are engaged on the first sixty-five miles, the whole of which has been cleared and the quarter part graded, twenty-six miles of track has been laid, much of it over swamps and prairies.

Heavy trains have been passing over the greater part of the track for the last four or five months, testing it fully, and the road stands fully as well as could be expected, and that too, under the weight of very heavy engines—from 18 to 25 tons.

(Signed) J. H. OVERTON,
President.

On the 28th of July last, the Board of Directors resolved to issue one thousand two hundred and fifty Bonds on pledge of the Tax subscription of the City of New Orleans, due in 1854, 1855, 1856, 1857 and 1858, two hundred and fifty Bonds payable in each of those years. The accompanying advertisements No. 1, was published in the papers of New Orleans and New York, in June.

In August the Board withdrew the Bonds from market, on account of the unfavorable state of the money market, but authorized their agents, Messrs. Lanfear & Fallon, to purchase Iron at market price, with the Bonds at par. Those gentlemen did purchase 8,000 tons of iron at $49 12 per ton, free on board, in Wales, to be paid in the Bonds at par, due in 1854 and 1855, with interest at 6 per cent. from the day of delivery in New Orleans. The Bonds to be handed over to cover each shipment after arrival.

The Board have changed the rate of interest of the Bonds due in those years to 6 per cent.

Three cargoes of iron of the above contract are now being delivered, and the Bonds are preparing for their payment.

The series of 1856 and 1857, have been issued, a part disposed of as per annexed statement, under special resolutions of the Board.

$1,250,000 Bonds of the New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad Company.

Sealed proposals will be received until the 15th of September next, at the office of Hewitt, Lees & Co., in the City of New York, for the purchase of 1,250 Bonds, of one thousand dollars each, all dated 1st August, 1853, and payable at the office of the Company, in the City of New Orleans, as follows, to-wit :

250	Bonds of $1000 each, on	1st Aug.,	1854.
250	"	"	1855.
250	"	"	1856.
250	"	"	1857.
250	"	"	1858.

Said Bonds bearing interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum from date, interest payable semi-annually, at the office of the Company, in New Orleans, with coupons for same attached. Said Bonds are issued by order of the Board of Directors, the proceeds of which to be expended in the construction of the road.

The New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad Company was organized 1st May, 1852. Its present capital, by Act of Incorporation, is $6,000,000. Its Charter provides for the construction of a trunk railway from the City of New Orleans westwardly, to some point on the boundary between the States of Louisiana and Texas, favorable for its extension across the latter State to the Pacific Ocean.

The entire line or first division of road to Washington, in the Parish of St. Landry, 173 miles, with a branch of 20 miles in addition, is now under contract with parties of the highest responsibility, and is to be entirely completed by the first of January, 1855.

The rails are already laid for 20 miles, and 66 miles will be finished and in operation on the first of January next.

The cost of the division to Washington, complete with equipments, depots, &c. &c., will be $3,300,000.

The tributaries to the division of the road under contract, and to the probable line of its extension to the limits of the State, are the Bayous Lafourche, Terrebonne, Black, Téche, Vermillion, Courtableau, Bœuf, Robert, Rapids, Cotile, Red and Sabine Rivers.

The Parishes traversed by it, embrace portions of the deltas of the Mississippi and Red Rivers, and the magnificent prairies of the Attakapas and Opelousas, forming the finest planting and grazing region of the South.

Besides other and abundant resources, both for travel and transportation, they produced last year 126,309 hhds. of sugar, and about 7,580,000 gallons of molasses, being more than one-half of the entire crop of the State ; export annually about 40,000 head of live stock, and about 300,000 bales of cotton reach this terminus by the present channels of commerce tapped by this line of road, or grown in the country penetrated by it.

The subscriptions to the Capital Stock of the Company now amount to the sum of $4,243,600 as follows, viz :

Individual subscriptions,		$1,063,000
Municipal Corporations, payable part in five and part in six annual payments, viz :
City of New Orleans,	$1,500,000
Parish of Orleans,	75,000
" St. Mary,	156,000
" St. Martin,	103,775
" Lafayette,	33,400
" St. Landry,	115,625
" Natchitoches,	250,000
" DeSoto,	100,000
		$2,334,400
		$3,397,400

At the last Session of the Legislature the State of Louisiana subscribed one-fifth of the capital stock of the Company, viz :— $1,200,000, payable, however, only in the same proportion as other subscribers ; consequently the actual State subscription at this time is $846,200, making our present available subscription amount to the sum of $4,243,600.

The Bonds now offered for sale are secured by special pledge, according to law, of the subscription to the capital stock made by the City of N. Orleans, viz : $1,250,000, due 1st June, 1854 to 1858, inclusive, $250,000 per annum ; and the interest on said Bonds is secured by pledge of unmatured instalments of the Parishes of Orleans, St. Mary, St. Martin and Lafayette, amounting to $300,240.

The Board of Directors in offering this loan to the public, do so with full confidence that the security offered is of the most undoubted character. No mortgage of any kind now exists upon the property of the Company, and the Board do not contemplate to issue any bonds secured by mortgage upon the road until the line to Washington is completed and in working order, a distance of 173 miles, and then the amount of funds to be raised by mortgage will be but a very moderate amount compared with the actual cost and value of the road, and will be employed in its further extension.

The subscription of the City of New Orleans is payable annually, by a tax levied on the whole landed estate of the City, authorized not only by an act of the Legislature, but approved by the tax-payers, and declared legal and constitutional by the Supreme Court of the State. The security therefor, for the payment of said subscription, is the entire landed estate of the City of New Orleans, amounting to one hundred millions of dollars. Payers of this tax receive an equal amount in the stock of the Company.

For all further information in regard to this loan, apply to Messrs. Hewitt, Lees & Co., New York, or at the office of the Company, New Orleans.

REPORT

GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

The following enquiries were propounded to the Great Northern Railroad, viz:

1st. The surveys. By whom and when made? Their cost? How far they extend? Whole expense of same, with such incidental disbursements as appertain to them, such as boats, carts, &c.?

2d. The location of depots, &c. What governed the selection and adoption of same? Their cost? What would the same have cost if made upon some lower point of the city? Could or could not the road have crossed the Orleans Canal with equal or more benefit? The situation of the several cotton presses and ocean shipping in reference to the said location?

3d. The present condition of the road.—What sections are yet to be finished? What sections may be considered finished, and if so, what test, if any, has been made in reference to its capability of bearing up, and what is the result?

4th. The condition of the financial affairs of the road. Selling of all bonds. To whom, at what rate? How much of their proceeds have been expended? How much on hand?

Additional interrogatories by Mr. Kenner.

And whether all the formalities required by law with regard to publication, &c., have been complied with?

Whether any of the officers or directors of the Company have been under advances to the Company; if any, what officers—what amount advanced, and whether the charges on said advances have been such as are usually made?

Report of the President of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company to the Joint Committee of Investigation appointed by the Legislature.

To the Joint Committee of Investigation:

Gentlemen,

I respectfully refer you to document A. as containing the views that governed the directors in the selection of the site for the main depot, and as detailed in the first annual report to the stockholders on the 5th May, 1853. If the Company were compelled to purchase below the New Orleans Canal the grounds necessary for its main depot, the cost would be very considerable, perhaps four or five times the sum expended and to be expended on the site already selected. In the report of the Chief Engineer, accompanying, he expresses full concurrence in the views submitted to the stockholders, not only as to the impracticability of the road crossing the canal, but the large additional expenditure to be incurred in the constructing, maintenance and superintendence of drawbridges.

Documents B and C contain a statement of the situation of the various cotton presses and ocean shipping in reference to the location of the main depot.

Document D contains a resolution of the Directors instructing the President to issue 300,000 of notes, bearing eight per cent. interest and payable on the 1st July, August and September, with a pledge of the real estate tax of 1853 as security.

This issue of notes was partly used as security for the advances of Messrs. Jas. Robb & Co. and Mr. Slidell, and have since been cancelled.

Document E contains a resolution passed at a meeting of stockholders held on 22d January, authorizing the Board of Directors to issue bonds on a pledge of the real estate taxes, and a resolution passed by the Directors on the 2d May, directing the issue of $1,500,000 bonds, payable in 1854, 1855, 1856, 1857 and 1858, bearing eight per cent. interest, with instructions to the finance committee to advertise for the sale of $600,000 of this issue. The advertisement was duly published in the Courier, Bee, Delta and Picayune, from the 12th of May to the 1st of June, and is as follows:

Office of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company.

NEW ORLEANS, May 12, 1853.

In conformity with the following resolutions, adopted by the Board of Directors of this Company on the 2d inst., proposals will be received by the undersigned, at the office of the Company, No. 45 Carondelet street, until Wednesday, the 1st day of June, 1853, at 12 o'clock, M, for the purchase of the whole or any portion of six hundred of the bonds of $1000 each described in said resolution, 20 per cent. payable on the 1st day of June, 1853, and 20 per cent. on the 1st day of July, August, September, and October following.

Resolved, That this Company issue 1500 bonds for $1000 each, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, with coupons for the interest attached, said bonds to be signed by the President, countersigned by the Secretary, and made payable as follows: 300,000 on the first of August, 1854, fixed, and the like sum on the first of August, 1855, 1856, 1857 and 1858, and that to secure the payment of said bonds a pledge be made of the tax levied by the city for subscription to the stock of the Company, the tax falling due in each of said years being separately pledged for the series of bonds maturing in the same year.

Resolved, That proposals be advertised for the sale of 600 of said bonds, the purchaser having the option of selecting bonds of the series which they prefer.

Resolved, That the Finance Committee be charged with the immediate execution of the foregoing resolutions.

(Signed) H. S. BUCKNER, J. P. HARRISON, THOMAS HALE, } Finance Committee.

Mr. Buckner, as chairman, verbally reported that no bid had been made, or any proposition been received to purchase the whole or any portion of the bonds offered for sale.

On the 8th of June the Board of Directors received a bid from Messrs. A. M. Nathan & Co. to purchase $600,000 of the real estate tax bonds, payable in 1857 and 1858, at 90 per cent.

Document F contains their letter and the resolution of the Board of Directors accepting its terms.

The financial condition of the Company at this period, besides many other considerations affecting its welfare and interests, suggested the necessity of a sale of its securities. Commissioners had been appointed to proceed to London to provide by negotiation for a large sum, in addition to its subscriptions, sufficient to construct the road to the Tennessee river, and in order to present its affairs in the most favorable aspect, it was indispensable not only to be able to show that all its matured engagements had been met, but that means were secured to insure the prosecution of its works under existing contracts, and it will not be supposed that the exhibition of the affairs of any company without these requisites, and overdrawn with its banker for a sum exceeding three hundred thousand dollars, would otherwise operate than to totally destroy all chance of success in obtaining the loan of capital in foreign markets.

These important considerations, coupled with the failure of the Company to receive any bid whatever for the real estate tax bonds advertised by the Finance Committee, called for aid from some quarter, and as there was every reasonable ground for concluding that no person or persons would take the responsibility of extending it to the Company on a scale commensurate with its wants, Messrs. A. M. Nathan & Co. received instructions from Messrs. James Robb & Co. to make the bid to purchase six hundred thousand dollars of the real estate bonds of the Company, which bid was accepted by the directors. These instructions were given by Jas. Robb & Co. under the supposition that the purchase would be assumed by non-resident parties, with whom they had corresponded respecting the sale of the Company's securities. This expectation was not realised. The purchase was declined by said parties, and the bonds left on the hands of Messrs. James Robb & Co.

At a meeting of the Directors, held on the 31st October, 1853, they were informed of the foregoing, and the circumstances under which the bid of Messrs. Nathan & Co. had been made, and Messrs. James. Robb & Co. offered the Board the privilege of cancelling the sale and receiving back the bonds on the terms at which they had been sold. A committee was appointed to confer with Messrs. James Robb & Co., which resulted in the adoption of the agreement contained in Document G, and the cancelling and surrender of $150.000 of the real estate tax bonds at 90 per cent., the price at which they had been sold.

The dealings between the Company and those in any way connected with its service, as directors or officers, with the exception of its transactions with Messrs. James Robb & Co., are confined to a loan of $20,000, received by the Company from Mr. John Slidell in April last, which was repaid in July, August and September, with eight per cent. interest, and to an arrangement made for the endorsement of the paper of the Company by Directors, as will appear by resolutions of the Board contained in Document H.

The Bank account of the Company was opened with Messrs. James Robb & Co. on the 12th of November; 1852, and I respectfully refer you to Document I for its details, which is certified by the Secretary from the books and records in the office of the Company.

Document J contains a statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Company to the 15th instant, a statement of its financial resources for the current year, and of subscriptions to its capital stock. The resources of the Company will be modified and altered according to the action of the Legislature, the City Council of New Orleans, and its voters, in the proposition to substitute city bonds in lieu of the real estate taxes.

This measure, if successful, will prove one of great relief, and insure a final prosecution of the works of the Company and the realization of important and speedy results, not only affecting favorably the interests of the State and the stockholders, but the public welfare, which otherwise may be indefinitely postponed.

Document K contains a copy of the resolution of the Directors directing the President to purchase 20,000 tons of railroad iron, and his letters addressed to Messrs. R. Wilson, Hallett & Co, of Liverpool, with the resolution of the Board of Directors confirming the order and guarantee.

All of which is respectfully submitted in answer to the interrogatories proposed by the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana.

(Signed) JAMES ROBB, President.

New Orleans, Feb. 20, 1854.

STATEMENT OF CHIEF ENGINEER,

In Answer to First Question.

The surveys extend from New Orleans to Nashville, and embrace the final location of the road to Chickasaw, on Tennessee river, a distance of 408 miles. The expenses include the usual outfit for field operations, such as tents, camp wagons, mules, boats, &c

Second Question.

The objections to crossing the New Orleans Canal with our tracks, independent of the cost of drawbridges and expenses incidental to them, are insuperable, as such a location would be either ruinous to the canal or to the trafic operations of the road, for either the trains must wait for the passage of the steamboats and sailing vessels, thereby throwing them out of time, and deranging the whole system of running, or the canal would be blocked up continually with boats and craft waiting for the passage of the trains.

Third Question.

From the following table it will be seen that the road bed is prepared for the reception of the superstructure for the entire distance to the State line (87½ miles) with the exception of about five and a quarter miles of swamp crib-work between the city and South Pass Manchac, filling the temporary crib-work between the North Pass and the Piney Woods, and completing the graduation of about five miles at the State line, and that the track has been laid for a distance of twenty-four miles.

Progress of Work under contract from the city of New Orleans to the State line, 87½ miles.

Sections 1 to 3, Thos. C. Bates & Co., road bed finished and track laid.

Sections 3 to 11, Coleman & O'Shaughnessy, road bed finished and track laid half-way.

Sections 11 to 14, Coleman & O'Shaughnessy, road bed two-thirds finished.

Sections 14 to 19, George G. Kirk & Co., all crib-work four-fifths finished Sections 19 to 22, G. B. Parsell & Co., road bed two-thirds finished.

Sections 22 to 24, Cornelius Sweeney, road bed finished.

Sections 24 to 27, Cornelius Sweeney, road bed finished.

Sections 27 to 30, Charles Wuinsch, road bed nearly finished.

Sections 30 to 36, Waters, Hoey & Keeling, road bed three-fourths done and one mile of track laid.

Sections 36 to 87½, Thos. C. Bates & Co., from sections 36 to 39, including North and South Passes, piling and crib-work complete and track one-half done.

From 39 to 45½ to be embanked. Temporary crib-work and temporary track laid.

From 45½ to 82, graduation all finished, and eight miles of track laid, with the ties delivered to the Company for the remainder of the distance on the roads.

From 82 to 87½, graduation one-half complete.

The pile bridge over the North Pass Manchac has been completed and subjected to a test sufficient to prove beyond the possibility of a doubt its ability to support the heaviest trains that can be passed over it without yielding in the least to the weight, as 300 tons of iron rails were piled on a distance of 100 feet of the bridge (30 tons to every 10 feet) and suffered to remain on it for eight or ten days, without the slightest settling being perceptible from this great weight.

The South Pass Manchac pile bridges will sustain a greater weight than the bridge over the North Pass, having two additional brace piles to every bent, placed 10 feet apart. All the piles are driven for the South Pass bridge except the brace piles, also about half the caps and stringers are on.

No difficulty is anticipated with that portion of the road crossing the swamps and prairies on crib-work. The portion that has been tested by the locomotive at the North Pass has yielded much less to the weight than was expected.

Grading forces have been placed on the road for a distance of about 20 miles above the State line.

The graduation of the division between

Digitized by Google

Jackson and Canton, embracing a distance of 23¼ miles, is about two-thirds complete.

The work of graduation has been commenced in Monroe county, Miss.

(Signed) JAS. H. GRANT,
Chief Engineer.

ENGINEER'S OFFICE,
New Orleans, Feb. 20, 1854.

DOCUMENT A.

Extract from the First Annual Report of the President and Directors of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company.—May 5th, 1853.

The Directors have purchased ten squares of ground situated on the upper line of the New Canal, for a main depot. The price paid is fifty eight thousand nine hundred and thirty four dollars and fifty-three cents, being less than six thousand dollars for each square. The expenses of filling up these grounds is estimated at seventeen thousand five hundred dollars, based on the calculation of seventy thousand cubic yards of earth, at twenty-five cents per yard. The location of the depot has been a subject which the Directors have duly considered, and their action in the premises has been taken with entire reference to the wants of the Company and the public interests.

The shortest distance from the site selected to the river is at the upper end of Canal street. It is also equi-distant from the points of the landing of the shipping in the First and Second Districts, and from the Lower Cotton Press in the Third District, and the upper limits of the city. No selection could have been made more central to the entire city, and no one District, in its commerce and trade, is more favored than another by reason of this selection. But apart from this, other considerations had to be taken into account suggestive of difficulties of greatly increased expenditure in the purchase of land, and the impracticability of crossing the canal without subjecting the Company to great cost and inconvenience.

If the Directors, in obedience to a spirit of sectional interest, had sought to establish the depot of the Company at the intersection of Canal and Claiborne streets, the outlay would have been increased fourfold in the cost of the land, which in that vicinity is distributed among numerous proprietors and claimants, besides the expense of opening a portion of Claiborne street through private property, which has been estimated by commissioners appointed for this purpose at one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

Important as these facts are, they are insignificant in comparison with the cost and inconvenience of crossing a canal of considerable traffic, and whose chief basin is located within the limits of a large city.

The business and wants of the Company, when the line of road is opened to the Tennessee river, will require a number of tracks in the vicinity of its depot, and the slightest attention to the fact that the constant arrival and departure of trains and cars would establish a conflict with the vessels navigating the canal, should convince the most prejudiced mind of its insuperable difficulties, without taking into account the expense of maintaining and superintending bridges and draws, which it would be no exaggeration to estimate at an annual cost to your Company of forty thousand or fifty thousand dollars—a sum too considerable to be expended on improvements of doubtful utility or convenience.

New Orleans, November 2, 1853.

Gentlemen—We are informed by Messrs. R. Wilson, Hallett & Co., of Liverpool, that freight engagements have been made by them for the shipment of 3600 tons of railroad iron, for the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company, purchased under our guarantee, and for the cost of which settlement will have to be made with us in all this month. As the amount will be considerably in excess of the available cash means of the Company and its payment cause a suspension of its works for many months, we are willing to undertake the engagement on the basis of the following arrangement, besides providing such sums as may be needed to meet the monthly estimates and expenditures, not available from the Company's resources.

That the Directors shall consent to receive from us one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the Real Estate Tax Bonds of the Company, due in 1858, and place the same to our credit at 90 per cent, and deliver to us in exchange one hundred and sixty five thousand dollars ($165,000) of the six per cent. bonds of the State, with the condition that their sale shall be advertised in this city and New York for sixty days. In case of their sale, the proceeds to be paid to us, otherwise, if no sale is made at the expiration of sixty days, then we are to take the bonds in payment of our advances, and give the Company credit for them at par.

In consideration of the foregoing, we are to receive interest at 8 per cent. on our advances, and such a commission as may be directed and deemed proper by the directors.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servants,

P. S. If the receipts of the Company fall short of the sum necessary to cover our advances, on the conditions within stated, up to the 1st May next, we agree to receive in final payment of any balance, then due, the tax bonds of the Company.

Resolved, That five thousand tons of iron ith the necessary spikes, chairs, &c., be at ice contracted for, deliverable to the Comany, one thousand tons on the first of March ext, and the rest in equal portions, in the onths of April, May, June and July.

Resolved, That if a contract can be made r a further supply of fifteen thousand tons, n terms equal, or nearly so, to those on hich the contract for five thousands tons all be made, it is the opinion of this oard that such contract should be made.

Resolved, That the President pro tem. e requested to correspond with James Robb Esq., now at the North, and communicate to him the above resolution, with a request that he shall make contracts in behalf of the Company, on as advantageous terms as he can, for five thousand tons, at all events, and for the other fifteen thousand tons, if practicable.

Resolved, That Mr. Robb be further requested to contract for two engines, deliverable, one in April and the other in May next, according to specifications to be furnished by the engineer.

Gentlemen:—I enclose a specification for five thousand tons of railroad iron, which I have to request you purchasing on the most favorable terms, for account of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company, conditioning for the delivery of the same to you for shipment as follows, viz: in June, 1,000 tons; July, 1,000; August, 1,500; September, 1,500, and your effecting insurance on the cargoes in London.

On receipt of the bills of lading and invoices, addressed to the above Company in New Orleans, it is understood that remittances will be immediately made to cover you, in first class bills on London; your commissions on the above not to exceed that usually charged by the merchants of your city, on such business.

We may conclude to send out an Inspector to examine and approve the iron, when delivered.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) JAMES ROBB, President.

Messrs. R. Wilson, Hallett & Co.,
Liverpool.

Gentlemen: I addressed you, on the 16th inst., and herewith enclose, a copy, with duplicate specifications and plans for railroad iron, which you are therein requested to purchase for account of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company.

On perusing my letter of the 16th inst., I find I have awkwardly expressed myself about Insurance; as this is a matter we can arrange hereafter, I will leave it open for future instructions.

I do not deem it important that you should close a contract for the iron immediately, unless your information be such as to render it necessary for the interests of the Company. Our object is to make all the gain we can in price, and at the same time secure the delivery of the iron at the dates enumerated.

Very respectfully,
Your obt. servt.

MESSRS. WILSON, HALLETT & Co.,
Liverpool.

Gentlemen:—I have been treating with some parties in New York, for 5,000 tons of iron rails, and not having come to terms with them, I have to request your purchasing the above quantity, according to the patterns and specifications enclosed in my letter of the 16th ult., and to ship the same as follows, viz: 1,000 tons in January, 1,000 tons in February, 1,000 tons in March, 1,000 tons in April, 1,000 in May, (5,000 tons.) I think it very possible you may find it difficult to obtain deliveries as early as the above dates, but in this matter, I have to request your meeting our wishes as early as possible.

The insurance we can make in New Orleans, on more favorable terms than can be made in England, and we desire that the insurance shall be left to us and to be managed with your Mr. Hallett.

You can exercise your discretion as to the mode of shipment, and if any advantage can be secured by despatching the iron in small cargoes, it will be agreeable to us, if lower freight may be obtained in this way, and the price of insurance will probably be less than on vessels where the total cargo is composed of iron. Remittances of bills on London will be made for your reimbursement of the cost of your purchases of railroad iron, according to the conditions stipulated in my letter of the 16th ult.

It is of the utmost consequence that there should be no defect in the quality of the iron, and I particularly invite your special attention to this matter.

Very respectfully,
Your obt. servt.,

Accompanying this Report, I beg leave to submit the Annual Report of the Directors to the Stockholders in May last, also a general Report from the Chief Engineer, Jas. H. Grant, and myself, made to the Board of Directors on the 23d November last. By reference to the Annual Report to the Stockholders, your honorable bodies will find that the total expenditure of the Company on the 31st March last, amounting to $254,424 33, and by reference to the Report of the 23d November, that it had increased to $1,196,662 82, since that date, this item is shown by the present Report to have augmented $213,307 62, making the total expenditure $1,409,970 44.

I respectfully invite the attention of your honorable bodies to the report of the Chief Engineer of the 23d November, as containing a statement of the number of miles of road under contract, and the progress made towards the completion of that portion of it lying within the limits of the State of Louisiana. Since the date of that Report, the work has steadily progressed, and the Contractors have resumed active operations on all the unfinished sections, which have at no time been suspended since the commencement of the work, except during the interval of the prevalence of the epidemic. The track laying commenced at the main depot, and from the North Pass Manchac is progressing at the rate of one mile per week from each point, and up to the present time the Assistant Engineer reports about twelve miles of finished tract on the two divisions, and there is a reasonable hope that the entire road can be opened to the State line not later than next July. Satisfactory arrangements are now in progress with Messrs. Benson Grant & Co., to prosecute the work on their contract for the graduation and masonry of forty-five miles of the Company's road, North of the State line, and there is a reasonable expectation that the division between Jackson and Canton may be prosecuted without interruption, until final completion. In consequence of the completion of surveys, the Engineer service of the Company has been very much reduced, and is now composed of James H. Grant as Chief Engineer, at a salary of five thousand dollars per annum, and George H. Hazelhurst as Chief Assistant, at twenty-five hundred dollars per annum. The Company have one resident engineer on the line of the road, whose salary is fixed at two thousand dollars per annum.

The surveys of the road were commenced in May, 1851, and only recently completed. They embrace an examination of the country between New Orleans and Nashville, a distance of five hundred and forty miles; and a location between New Orleans and Chickasaw, a distance of four hundred and nine miles.

The most diligent care has been taken to explore the country in every practicable direction, that the final decision of location might be founded on a result of comparison of the different routes, as combining shortness of distance with cheapness of execution; and the maps, profiles and drawings, now in possession of the Company, while they possess great value, will remain as evidences of the skill and ability that have directed and executed so important a branch of the Company's service.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

JAMES ROBB, President.

NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON AND GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company, held on the 24th instant, the following report was read, and its publication ordered:

To the Directors of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned has the honor to lay before you a report from James H. Grant, Chief Engineer, which will inform you of the progress made in the surveys and location of the Company's road, and the condition of its work, with an estimate of the cost of completing the same from the city to the State line. I also beg leave to submit the annexed statement, from the Secretary, of receipts and expenditures.

The estimates of the Chief Engineer exhibit $1,027,099 as the sum necessary to complete the road from the city to the State line, and to meet this expenditure, the means and resources of the Company available within the period when needed, are deemed sufficient.

The resources of the Company, over and above the cost of the road to the State line, amounting to about two millions of dollars, will be applicable to the grading and construction of the road from thence to the Tennessee river, and there is a reasonable expectation that the citizens of Mississippi on the line of the road, with proofs in favor of its ultimate completion, will have every motive to accelerate its progress by increasing their subscriptions; and I would respectfully recommend the early adoption of a plan best calculated to effect this purpose. With the means secured to grade the road from the State line to the Tennessee river, a distance of three hundred and twenty-two miles, there is no reason to distruct our ability to command, when required, on the faith of the works of the Company, the means necessary to procure the iron and complete equipment.

The undersigned, with Mr. Slidell, appointed as your Commissioners to negotiate the mortgage bonds of the Company, with a view of providing a sufficient fund, in addition to resources already secured, to complete, at an early period, the entire road from New Orleans to the Tennessee river, proceeded to London in July last. On our arrival in that city, we ascertained that owing to the advancing rates of interest, caused by the apprehension of a serious deficiency in the harvests, and the probability of political troubles, calculated to disturb confidence among capitalists, it was quite impracticable to effect the sale of new loans. Finding this unfavorable state of affairs, we deemed it advisable to defer placing the bonds on the market for sale, and what has since transpired, in respect to the general depreciation in the value of public stocks and railroad securities, will, I hope, be deemed a sufficient and satisfactory reason for the postponement of negotiations, which we are not without encouragement to renew on the appearance of a favorable change in monetary affairs. If the Company had been prepared to sell its bonds a few months earlier, I am entirely satisfied that the basis of their security and the promises of the scheme, would have ensured success. Now that its works are more advanced, and in a few months the section between the city and the State line will be finished and in operation, with over two millions of dollars of expenditure, there is still more reason to regard success as neither equivocal nor doubtful, on the revival of confidence and a demand for stocks of acknowledged security.

If we look to the history of improvements commenced in other States of the Union, the progress we have already made will compare favorably with any similar enterprise. We have before us a certainty of being able to complete nearly ninety miles of road on or before the ensuing July, besides having overcome in its construction, difficulties, by many deemed insurmountable, but now ascertained by the Chief Engineer to be of no serious importance.

While daily experience is demonstrating that natural channels of commerce are inefficient in competition with those of an artificial character, and is suggestive of the necessity of counteracting the powerful efforts made to impair our commercial superiority, we have derived from the late afflicting epidemic fresh motives to animate our zeal, and to persevere in the prosecution of the works of the Company. Aside from the immense commercial importance they possess, the convenience and facility they will afford to our citizens and those of the interior States cannot be overestimated in value, when, with the connections of our road with others completed and in progress under the fostering aid of the States of Tennessee and Virginia, Washington City may be reached in two days, at a speed of twenty-five miles per hour.

In the present condition of the Company, the progress made in its works, and the remaining resources for their extension, we have everything to hope and no cause for discouragement.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES ROBB, President.

NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON AND GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD.

ENGINEER DEPARTMENT,
New Orleans, Nov. 24, 1853.

JAMES ROBB, Esq. President.

Sir—In compliance with your request, communicating the wishes of the Board of Directors, that I should submit to them an accurate statement of the condition and progress of the works of the Company under my charge, I respectfully report as follows:

SURVEYS, LOCATION AND CONTRACTS.

The entire line of road from New Orleans to Nashville, a distance of 540 miles, has been carefully surveyed, and a final location made of 409 miles between New Orleans and Chickasaw, on the Tennessee river, intersecting the Memphis and Charleston road in Bear Creek Valley, 400 miles from New Orleans; 256½ miles have been placed under contract, viz: 87½ miles from New Orleans to the State line, 95¾ miles from the State line to Jackson, 23½ miles from Jackson to Canton, and 50 miles from Aberdeen south. The entire line of road is free from any engineering difficulty, and the route will compare favorably with any in the Union; not only with reference to the gradients, alignments, facility and cheapness of construction, but in the elements of travel and traffic necessary to insure a certain and profitable return on its cost.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK.

The graduation, cribbing and piling of near seventy miles, have been constructed between this city and the State line, sixty-two of which are ready for the reception of the cross-ties and iron rails. The track laying has been commenced at the main depot, also between the North Pass and the "Piny Woods," and from the latter point it is progressing towards the State line. The bridges at the North and South Pass Manchac are in a state of forwardness, and will be speedily completed in a substantial manner. In regard to this portion of the work of the Company, I am entirely satisfied that the plans adopted for crossing the Passes are attended with no practical difficulty whatever, and that the structures will be permanent and safe for the passage of your trains. The same remarks apply equally to the cribwork in progress of construction across the Swamp Prairie, and the whole series of swamp between the city and the "Piny Woods," will be passed without encountering any material engineering difficulty.

COMPLETION OF THE ROAD TO THE STATE LINE.

The agreement as to the time for the completion of the contract of Messrs. Thos. C. Bates & Co., from the South Pass Manchac to the State line, a distance of fifty-one miles, will enable them to deliver it in a finished condition on or before the 1st of July next, and the state of forwardness of the work between the city and the South Pass is such as to insure its completion within the same period of time. This being done, there are no obstructions in the way of having the entire road, from the city to the State line, in operation, with a daily train of cars running, on and after the 1st of July next.

COST OF FINISHING TO STATE LINE.

The following is an estimate of the expenditure necessary to cover the cost of completing the road to the State line:

Thos. C. Bates & Co., balance of their contract,	$295,619
Contracts from Depot to South Pass,	178,500
Expenses for laying track,	56,500
Iron rails, chairs and spikes for 87½ miles, less amount received and on hand	471,987
Engineering and superintendence	25,500
Total	$1,027,999

Plans for the main depot buildings have not been prepared, and it is not deemed advisable to commence their erection until the road is completed to the State line. The temporary building constructed on the Company's grounds will answer all purposes for the present. Any further expenditures at this time for that purpose would be premature and uncalled for. The Company have received 3,700 tons of iron rails, and have advices of the further shipment of 3,300 tons expected to arrive in December and January, making in all 7,000 tons, which will iron the road for a distance of 65½ miles. The remaining 3,000 tons due on the contracts for 10,000 tons made by Messrs. R. Wilson, Hallet & Co., of Liverpool, are deliverable in February next. Three locomotive engines have been purchased; also a sufficient number of barthen cars to transport the necessary materials for laying the track.

OPERATIONS IN MISSISSIPPI.

In Mississippi, between the State line and Jackson, a portion of the clearing for the road way is opened, and on the division between Jackson and Canton, embracing a distance of 23½ miles, about one-half of the graduation is finished. From Aberdeen south, the work has been commenced, and for the present will be prosecuted to the extent of collections made from the subscribers in Monroe county.

The foregoing is respectfully submitted as a general out line of the operations of the company up to this time, defering to the period of the annual meeting of the stockholders the detailed report made up from plans, maps, profiles and notes belonging to surveys and location, exhibiting the progress of the work, rolling stock on hand, description of location, grades and curves, and a careful estimate of the entire line to Chickasaw, on the Tennessee river, including a complete equipment of engines and cars.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. GRANT, Chief Engineer.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE

APPOINTED TO

APPORTION

THE REPRESENTATION OF THE STATE.

The Committee appointed to divide the State Senatorial Districts, and to apportion the representation among the several Parishes and Election Districts, submit the following report.

The census returns from the several Parishes and Election Districts of the State, with the exception the Parishes of St. Charles, Rapides, Caddo and Vermillion, have been filed in the office of the Secretary of State.

The estimated population of those Parishes from which no returns have been received, was ascertained by adding to their population in 1850, as shown by the United States Census taken that year, the average ratio of increase, which was ascertained to be four per cent per annum, or twelve per cent. for three years.

The population of the several Parishes from which returns have been received, and the estimated population of the others, is shown by the statement annexed marked "A."

To divide the State into Senatorial Districts, your committee deducted the population of the city of New Orleans, say 153,007, from 585,312, being the total population of the State; and divided the remainder by 27, which gave 16,011 as the Senatorial ratio.

They then divided the State into twenty-one Senatorial Districts, giving thirty-two Senators, as set forth in Statement.

They then proceeded to apportion the representation among the several Parishes and Election Districts, and for this purpose adopted seven thousand (7,000) as the representation number giving eighty-eight members to the House of Representatives.

Statement C, annexed, shows the number of Representatives to which each Parish and Election District will be entitled, with its population, and the fraction over or under the representative number.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

U. B.P HILLIPS, Chairman.

REPORT OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

BATON ROUGE, January 19th, 1854.

Hon. JOHN M. SANDIGE, Speaker of the House of Representatives:

Dear Sir—Agreeably to the provisions of the Act of the Legislature of the 23d April, 1853, I have the honor to present my official report.

ISAAC E. MORSE, Attorney General.

From the period of my election to the office of Attorney General, and particularly from the passage of the Act of the Legislature of the 23d April last, defining more minutely the duties of that office, I have given as much time as could be spared from the active duties of the office to a careful examination of the defects in our present system of criminal jurisprudence, and if I shall succeed in bringing to your notice some of the most striking errors and omissions, I will be content with making some few suggestions, being fully satisfied that the intelligence of the two Houses of the Legislature will be better able to discover the proper remedies.

I presume it will be admitted that crimes in general, but certainly those of the higher order, such as murder, felonious killing, and deadly assaults with dangerous weapons, have fearfully increased in our large cities at least within a few years. The youngest of your body must recollect how startling used to be the cry that a murder had been committed; newspapers multiplied all the horrid details with wonderful minuteness; the likeness of the man who had done a deed of blood was exhibited as something of a most extraordinary character; but at present it is of so common occurrence that it hardly rises to the importance of a paragraph, and the names formerly used to express the character of the crimes have become softened down, and we hear no more of murder, assassination, &c., &c., but often read of "unfortunate rencontres," "melancholy affairs," "painful incidents," &c., &c. With all our admitted progress in science and civilization, it would be a painful admission to make, that we are not a law abiding people, and that we are growing more lax in morals, or that the increase of crime is the consequence of the degeneracy of the age. It would form a strange commentary upon our public school system, and the general diffusion of knowledge, the increase of churches, charitable institutions, and other benevolent societies which are constantly springing up in every direction throughout our country, if this fearful increase of crime must go hand in hand with all these boasted evidences of a moral and religious people. Some other reason must be discovered, and though it is not absolutely possible to account for it altogether, yet we may safely say that one of the strongest reasons for this apparent recklessness of human life, is attributable, in a great degree, to the delays, the difficulties and uncertainty of punishment of persons guilty of crime—a speedy and certain punishment, even a slight one, would have the effect of diminishing crime.

Let me illustrate this by reference to the offence of dueling. You need not be told how common, nay, almost universal, this custom was in Louisiana only a few years since. Scarcely a week passed in New Orleans that did not witness the open violation of the law, which made killing in a duel murder, and yet how many of our best citizens have we had to mourn, victims of that practice.

We have not grown much wiser or better within the last few years, and yet the disfranchising operation of our Constitution has almost entirely put a stop to this practice.

The habit of carrying concealed weapons is the cause why so many homicides occur—often from the slightest provocation. Possibly a legislative enactment might reach that case without the necessity or intervention of a trial. If every hasty expression, or even a blow in a moment of passion, will justify the taking of human life, it would be better that men should wear arms openly, and meet on equal terms. The subject of dueling is only alluded to, to show that the Constitutional disqualification, from its certainty, and the impossibility of evasion, or relief by the Legislature, has entirely done away with this fashionable and gentlemanly practice, and as the desire for office appears to be on the increase, it might be thus made instrumental in terminating some other not very reputable habits.

Assuming that the uncertainty of punishment is the principal cause of the increase of crime, it becomes our duty to examine and ascertain what modifications can be made in our present system of criminal jurisprudence, to make the punishment of crime, if possible, more certain. One thing in which I am sustained by all Judges and members of the bar who have had much experience in criminal affairs, is the necessity for a Code of Practice in criminal cases, instead of the vague and uncertain practice of the common law, to which we are referred in the 33d Section of the Act of 1805, and which is at variance with the spirit of the 117th Article of our present Constitution.

Should the Legislature determine to frame a Code of Practice in criminal cases, "divested of unnecessary prolixity, and changing what ought to be changed," as required by the Act of 1805, the system of pleading and practice might be greatly simplified, as in our civil practice; and as no man ever lost his property, or suffered any serious inconvenience by any clerical or technical error, so there is no reason to believe that any person would suffer in life or liberty, by sweeping away all useless and ridiculous formalities.

The necessity of a speedy trial is of much more importance for the punishment of crime, than for the benefit of the accused. Any unusual delay in the trial of a person accused diminishes the means of the State in procuring testimony, and when prolonged, changes the feeling of horror of the crime into a sympathy for the accused. In cases of mistrial, or after an appeal to the Supreme Court, should a second trial become necessary, it is almost an impossibility to procure the attendance of the witnesses on a former trial, from the migratory character of our population, and particularly of those who are witnesses of the commission of crimes generally; and it is astonishing how the recollection of witnesses fades away in a short space of time: the sympathy of the public extends to jurors and witnesses, and the officers of the State, in endeavoring to bring in a second trial, are looked upon rather as persecutors than prosecutors.

There should be some means devised for perpetuating testimony, and if a person has had an opportunity of meeting the witness face to face on a former trial, or before committing magistrate, it seems to me that the requirements of the Constitution are fulfilled, and I can see no good reason why testimony taken on a former trial should not be used, should the witness die or absent himself beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, upon a proper showing of such facts.

Continuances are often applied for on account of the absence of witnesses, and the court is often compelled to continue the case, or to require the prosecuting officer of the State to admit as a fact what the prisoner expects to prove, instead of admitting that the witness would swear so, which might be safely done in many cases where other witnesses present could disprove it. In the case of the State vs. Brette, tried at Opelousas, and reported in 6th Annual, Judge Preston held that the amendment of the Code only applied to civil cases, and we are again thrown back upon the common law. Perhaps it would be as well to enact that no motion for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment, should be entertained upon any informality or irregularity to which the defendant has once pleaded.

A very large proportion of the time of the First District Court in New Orleans is occupied with trials of cases of assault and battery and petty larcenies which, if some prompt means could be devised for their speedy trial, would save an enormous expense. A law authorizing the Recorder of the several districts to try all such cases summarily might be so framed as to obviate any constitutional objections.

I have not deemed it necessary to enter at length into an argument in favor of the adoption of a Code of Practice in criminal cases. This subject will require the serious consideration and discussion of the Legislature, and every possible view of the subject will be presented, and more light will be thrown upon it than could be given in a report of this kind. If I could for one moment believe that any of these cumbrous and verbose formalities of the common law were at all necessary to secure the rights of persons accused of crime, absurd as many of them seem, I would be very cautious in recommending the total abolition, or even a modification of them.

Living under a simple form of government, in an age so peculiarly utilitarian and progressive, it may be that my prejudices against the formalities and fictions of the common law are in some measure unfounded, and if so, I hope that the pride of consistency, with me, will never outweigh the love of justice.

The penal statutes in regard to embezzlement, swindling and breach of trust, I think demand some modification. They are often used as a means of coercing the payment of debts in ordinary commercial transactions, and the services of the officers of the State are frequently invoked to enforce the collection of money. In many of our sister States the grand and petit juries are authorized, where no crime appears to have been committed, or probable cause shown, to make the prosecutor pay the costs; whether a similar provision in these or other cases might not be advantageously made is a matter for our sound discretion. The objection that persons would not prosecute in many cases has some force, and, on the other hand, charging an innocent person without sufficient grounds, with the commission of crime, would seem to require at least the penalty of the payment of costs.

The Act of 1805, adopting the forms and proceedings of the common law, "divested of unnecessary prolixity and changing what might to be changed," leaves it entirely discretionary, with the judge to consider what are prolix and unnecessary, and the natural consequence is that the criminal practice and pleading varies in every district, and with every judge.

Whether any of the useless and absurd forms of the common law are at all essential for the protection of persons accused of crime, is a matter of conjecture; the fact is, that hundreds of persons in all parts of our country, annually escape the penalties for the commission of the highest crimes after a trial and conviction, from the omission of the words "then and there," or others deemed to be sacramental, or the failure to repeat "said and aforesaid," a sufficient number of times in an indictment.

There is another subject which requires some additional legislation, I allude to the cases of persons accused of crime, who may be found to be insane; among all nations, even the savage, great tenderness is felt for the condition of persons deprived of reason, and while no one so heavily afflicted, is ever deemed morally or legally responsible, still the safety of the public requires that they should be protected from injury from such unfortunate persons. Whenever a jury is satisfied that any prisoner is really insane, upon their finding all such persons should be, by order of the Judge, sent to a proper and safe asylum, and there to remain until discharged by order of the Executive, whenever he shall become satisfied that they are restored to reason. What means the State has at Jackson for the safe keeping of such persons, I do not know, but a humane care for such unfortunate beings, might be exercised with a due regard for the safety of others.

These are among the most important matters to which, in obedience to law, I have deemed it my duty to present to your consideration, the details, amendements of existing laws, and other remedies, are properly and wisely assigned to you, with these views and recommendations, I leave the subject in your hands, fully satisfied that it is in your power to frame a system of criminal jurisprudence from which the dust and cobwebs of time may be brushed off without injuring or defacing the structure and making the Criminal Code of Louisiana an honor to our own, and a model for our sister States, whose shield will be a protection for all, and whose sword shall be the safeguard of the good, and the terror of the bad.

Tabular statements marked A, B, C, D, E, accompanying this report, will show the amount of labor performed since the 23d of April last, making, after an allowance for adjournment during the epidemic, until the close of the year, little more than five months.

Besides the cases contained in the schedules, I have appeared for the State before the committing magistrates, in many cases in which I thought the ends of justice required it, and have assisted the District Attorney in cases where he desired my services, and I cannot close this report without bearing testimony to the valuable aid I have received from Mr. Tappan in the capital cases which belong peculiarly to the Attorney General. Among the 20 cases tried, in which the prisoners were defended by some of the ablest members of the bar, sixteen were convicted, two acquitted and one mistrial, and one nolle prosequi were had.

REPORT

OF THE

BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE LOUISIANA PENITENTIARY.

To His Exc llency, P. O. Hebert,

Governor of the State of Louisiana.

Sir—We, the undersigned Directors of the Louisiana Penitentiary, have the honor respectfully to report, that we entered upon the duties immediately on our appointment, and have held regular monthly meetings, and called meetings since.

That we were petitioned by the Selectmen of the city of Baton Rouge, to grant to them the use of fifty feet of ground, on the rear of the Penitentiary grounds, for a street: which we granted, until such time as the Legislature would meet and act upon the same.

We found that the prisoners had scarcely sufficient time allowed them at meal time to eat, not being more than about ten minutes. We increased the time to one hour at 12 o'clock.

We required that a record should be kept of the punishments inflicted upon convicts; and that a copy of the same be furnished at the monthly meetings of the Board of Directors, and that no punishments should be inflicted, unless adjudged by the Captain of the guard, and Clerk of the Penitentiary; that no guard should use harsh language to the prisoners, or even menace them with threats of punishment—their duty being simply to inform their superior officers of delinquencies and misconduct.

These, with other necessary changes, we made in the rules for the government of the Penitentiary.

We appropriated sixty dollars in payment for a box of books for the use of the convicts, furnished by Miss D. L. Dix.

A convict by the name of Jules Moret, (alias,) under sentence of fourteen years and three days, for the crime of publishing forged orders, who was received at this Penitentiary on the 22d February, 1841, and escaped 4th November, 1842, was retaken and returned on 21st July, of this year, for which an expense of $48 50 was incurred for his recapture and expenses for conveying him back to the Penitentiary; the said Moret declaring himself not to be the man. We gave him every opportunity to disprove his identity, and he utterly failed; leaving no doubt in the mind of every member of he Board of his being the man.

It being the duty of the Board of Directors to elect State officers for the government of the Penitentiary, for the year commencing on 1st October last, we elected the following, viz:—William Hubbs, Clerk; J. A. Williams, Physician; A. E. Goodwin, Chaplain.

We make the following statement in regard to the old accounts and notes due the State, and placed in the hands of Amos Adams, Esq., for collection, viz:

Amount given in the hands of Amos Adams, Esq., for collection,	$5,084	71
Amount collected by him and paid over,	1,056	31
Leaving uncollected a balance of	$4,028	40

A small portion of said balance of $4,028 40 uncollected, Mr. Adams states he will be able to collect this winter; but a great part of which will be lost to the State, as the claims are against insolvents.

The following is a statement of account of the Board of Directors with the Lessees:

Amount received by the Lessees from Amos Adams as before stated,	$1,056	31
Amount of the valuation of old materials used from the old building, in the new cells,	449	44
Amount charged to Lessees,	$1,505	65

Amount appropriated by the Board in payment of Miss Dix for books,	60 00

A negro boy by the name of Joseph, having arrived at the age of ten years, the issue of Angeline, a slave condemned to the Penitentiary for life, was handed over to the Sheriff of the Parish of East Baton Rouge, to be sold. The said boy brought the price of eight hundred dollars, the net proceeds being seven hundred and eighty dollars and sixty-five cents, which was duly paid over to the State Treasurer, to be placed in the school fund, agreeably to law.

Agreeably to the Act of the Legislature, approved 28th April, 1852, we authorised the construction of another story upon the north building, and to be covered with a slate roof. The said work is now in progress of construction, and will shortly be completed.

The new Cell Room, with two hundred additional cells, has been completed, and received by the Board of Directors, agreeably to the plan laid down by the Legislature, for which an appropriation of forty thousand dollars was made; the Lessees having furnished their account and vouchers for the same, amounting to forty-one thousand three hundred and forty-one dollars and eighteen cents, exceeding the amount appropriated by one thousand three hundred and forty-one dollars and eighteen cents. We hereby suggest that your Excellency will refer the same to the Legislature, that the said Lessees may be reimbursed the said overplus.

It was contemplated, and so prescribed by the Legislature, that the white convicts and colored, work separately. We think it desirable that they do so, but the Lessees deem it impracticable by the present arrangement of work shops and yard; that it cannot be effected without a change is made in their employment, or in said arrangement.

We would here call the attention of your excellency to the fact of slave convicts who have been heretofore pardoned by the Legislature, were taken possession of by their former owners, without any expression thereto by the said Legislature, and think, without any just title on their part—they having relinquished their title to the State.

For a full and minute statement in regard to the convicts, we will respectfully refer your Excellency to the Clerk's report herewith transmitted, and marked as follows, viz:

Schedule A. Being a statement of prisoners now confined in the Penitentiary, their term, crime, and when received.

Schedule B. Being a statement of prisoners discharged, their term, crime, and expiration of sentence.

Schedule C. Being the names of prisoners who have died, their term of sentence, crime, and date of death.

Schedule D. Being the prisoners who have been pardoned by the last Legislature, their crime, term, and date of pardon.

Schedule E. Prisoner pardoned by the President of the United States, his crime, term, and date of pardon.

Schedule F. Being a recapitulation of Schedules A, B, C, D and E.

Schedule G. Being the ages of prisoners now confined in the Penitentiary.

Schedule H. Statement showing the crimes of those now in prison.

Schedule I. Statement showing the Parishes from which the convicts now in prison were sent.

Schedule J. Statement showing the States and countries of which the convicts now in prison are natives.

Schedule K. Statement showing the occupations of the convicts now in prison, before their sentences.

For the general health, treatment, and condition of the convicts, the Board refers you to the report of the Physician, herewith transmitted and made a part of this report.

For the moral and religious instruction of the prisoners, we will respectfully refer you to the Chaplain's report, herewith transmitted and made a part of this report.

This being the last year of the present lease of the Institution, it may not be amiss for the Board to express an opinion in regard to the re-leasing of the same. Your Board are decidedly opposed to the system of leasing the labor of crime in our State to a company, whereby creating a monopoly, and enriching a few to the detriment of many, and at the same time changing the spirit and intention of the Institution from a place where punishment for crime is meted out; but that the criminal may have the opportunity of reformation, where even-handed justice may be dealt out, where the force of example, instruction, and advice of officers connected with the Institution may have full and proper effect; and not where dollars and cents is the controlling interest, either in the scanty allowance of food and raiment, or the low price paid to the officers and guard employed in the Institution. The great importance of every office connected with the Institution, and having proper and competent men assigned to the various stations, is not in general fully understood, and can scarcely be appreciated by the public at large, who have no adequate means of obtaining the proper information to enable them to judge of the capacity and qualifications required in this branch of the public service. Those who are entrusted with the care and direction of this Institution, are called to perform not only the ordinary duties of public officers, but they are charged with the additional and responsible task of controlling, governing, correcting, improving and elevating the erring man committed to their care; and by their example, and the influence of their personal character and authority, endeavor to prepare them for a life of industry and respectability when they shall again enter society, at the expiration of their terms of sentence. To discharge this duty acceptably, requires a peculiar adaptation by nature and cultivation, which few men possess, and in which many would utterly fail, who are nevertheless fully competent to conduct any ordinary business or pursuit. Could it be expected that men possessing the requisite qualifications of a warden, or even a guard, could be had for the prices of fifteen or twenty dollars per month—for which service is now paid by the Lessees—especially in a country like this, where common labor commands from $1 to $1 50 per day?

We are fully of opinion that the Institution can amply support itself under good and efficient State officers, continuing the employments now carried on in the establishment, which has been a source of great profit to the Lessees, having sixty looms in operation, manufacturing about 2,000 yards of coarse cottons daily; machines for manufacturing batting, which is very profitable. Should the cotton machinery be increased to an extent sufficient to employ all the convicts in prison, we have no doubt it would afford quite a large revenue to the State.

We think it a plain proposition, that the labor of 283 hands for their food and clothing, including sufficient salaries to officers and guard, would be remunerative, especially here in this country where labor is so well awarded. There is ample room to increase the number of looms and cotton machinery to the extent to employ nearly all the convict labor, without the construction of any additional building, with but little trouble, and with but the expense of procuring the looms, spindles, and attachments thereto. Could that be the case, and but one branch of business, (say the manufacture of coarse cotton and woolen goods,) the discipline of the prison could be more easily kept up, and the convicts less exposed, with less chance of making their escape.

As it has been customary for the Board of Directors to recommend a few of the convicts for pardon every year, for good and meritorious conduct; as an incentive to good conduct, and a stimulant to those remaining, we therefore recommend the following, viz:

Wm. Ryan or Riley, who was sentenced August 2d, 1845, for robbery, for 10 years. He was recommended by the former Board.

Mat. J. Edwards, who was sentenced Nov. 13th, 1846, for life, for entering a house to commit felony.

Thomas Crawford, who was sentenced July 28th, 1849, for 5 years, for counterfeiting.

Isaac Vanbibber, who was sentenced September 11th, 1847, for 7 years, for stealing a slave.

Jackson, (a slave,) sentenced 27th September, 1850, for life, for arson.

Harry, (a slave,) sentenced 5th March, 1849, for life, for assaulting a white man. This Harry saved the life of Capt. Parry, the predecessor of the present Captain of the guard, when in imminent danger by a revolt of the convicts.

We would most earnestly recommend that the entire report of the Penitentiary should be published in pamphlet form for distribution, and that a hundred copies of the same be left with the Clerk of the Penitentiary, for distribution to the different Penitentiaries in the United States.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

G. W. CHRISTINE,
President.

PHYSICIAN'S REPORT.

To the Board of Directors
Louisiana Penitentiary:

For the year ending Jan. 1, 1854, the general health of the prison has been ordinarily good, excepting the occurrence of an epidemic of yellow fever, which continued for 1 month or six weeks, and fortunately was not very general nor very malignant in its prevalence. Not probably more than one-fourth of the whole number of prisoners suffered from that disease. The total mortality from the epidemic I am unable to give with exactness, from the fact that my illness prevented me from attending during its prevalence in the prison, and the medical attendant did not register the diseases, as required by a law governing my conduct; hence my excuse for being unable to give statistics on this subject. Previous and subsequent to this period there was no marked difference, either in the amount or the character of the sickness among the prisoners, from what was experienced in former seasons, the diseases most common to the climate constituting the principal part of the sickness, such as intermittent and remittent fevers, dysentery, diarrhœa, &c. There has occurred none of the diseases which sometimes prevail and are thought to be peculiar to prison life and confinement to factories, such as scurvy, &c., the absence of which I think are attributable to care and attention paid to diet, dress, &c. The total mortality for the year numbers thirteen, and are as follows, viz:

G. Holmes, died March, 28, of typhus fever; S. Dalton, Sept. 11, of yellow fever; J. Moore, Sept. 14, of yellow fever; old woman, Sept. 27, aged 100 or 120 years; Joshua Lowell, Oct. 6; A. H. Hess, Oct. 8; William Flood, Oct. 10; J. W. Wilson, Oct. 12; A. J. Perdue, Oct. 19; H. L. Johnson, Oct. 22; J. Kenehen, Oct 25; Henry Hughes, Dec. 11, from amenia, caused by an attack of yellow fever; Joseph Fountain, chronic diarrhœa.

It will be observed from the date of these deaths, that but one occurred previous to the epidemic, and but two after, one of which was caused from the consequences of yellow fever. Those names to which no disease is attached, are supposed to have died from the same disease, from the date of their occurrence.

The hospital for the Institution furnishes all necessaries for the sick, such as attention, nursing, suitable diet, medicines, &c., and nothing is omitted that is necessary for their comfort and proper treatment. The hospital diet is such, always, as the physician thinks necessary and prescribes. The general fare of the prisoners is under the supervision of the physician, and subject to whatever changes he may think proper. It has always been ample in quantity, and suitable in quality for vigorous health and strength.

Very respectfully,
J. M. WILLIAMS.

CHAPLAIN'S REPORT.

The Chaplain respectfully submits the following report:

On the 1st of October, 1853, I entered upon the discharge of my duties in this department, under a deep sense of the importance of the station, and in possession of lively sympathy for the spiritual welfare of the souls committed to my religious training. From that time to the present I have labored with increasing interest and diligence to elevate the thoughts and feelings of the prisoners, and to inspire them with the noble ambition of reforming, and becoming worthy and useful citizens after they shall have suffered the penalty due their crimes.

No one imbued with the spirit of christianity can long be in charge of this important department without feeling that he is peculiarly honored of God in being permitted to carry the glad tidings of the gospel to the most degraded class of human beings—men, immortal, created in the image of God, and yet, outcast from human society, deprived of the common liberties of life, and the honor and confidence of their fellows. 'Tis no mean office to bear the bread of life to such, and to inspire them with aspirations after purity of heart and the dignity of sons of God.

With such feelings it has been my constant aim to attend to and keep alive those finer sensibilities of the soul, which, like silken chords, draw the heart in all its rarest wanderings to the path of virtue and heaven.

The remembrance of a mother's love, her unceasing vigilence and care, of a sister's tender affection and hope, of a father's deep interest in his own boy, and above all the remembrance of the sympathy of a Saviour, and the unexampled love of God must do more towards the elevation of the hearts, and the reformation of the lives of these unhappy prisoners than all the other appliances that can be brought to bear, however essential these may be in their proper places. Hence I would respectfully suggest to the Board the importance of continuing and fostering this department.

At an early day of my Chaplaincy I took uch pains to collect, number, and properly range all the books belonging to the Li-ary, which I found to contain many useful id interesting books, though far from sup-ying the demand. There is especially eat demand for books in foreign languages. I would respectfully solicit, through the oard, an appropriation from the Legislature r the purchase of a good library. I have ideavored to furnish each prisoner, who de-res it, with a Bible in his own language, it have not succeeded altogether in this, iere being a deficiency of Bibles in foreign nguages, especially in the French and Ger-an. I can but indulge the hope that this de-iency will at least be speedily supplied, for who can deny to these unhappy souls the light which Heaven would shed into their dark and gloomy cells. Justly may men deprive them of all the liberties of society, and require them in close confinement, to atone for their crimes against the laws of the land; but who will dare shut the door of Heaven against them, and forbid them the only true chart of life's dangerous sea—the blessed Bible of Him who said to the dying thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

Yours, very truly,

A. E. GOODWYN.

REPORT

OF THE

JOINT COMMITTEE ON THE PENITENTIARY.

To the Honorable the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The Joint Committee on the Penitentiary begs leave to submit the following report:

In the discharge of the duty devolving on them, your committee have visited the Penitentiary, and examined the premises generally: the cells, the food furnished the prisoners, and also their personal appearance.

The examination and enquiries of your committee were minute and particular, from certain expressions contained in the report of the Directors of the Penitentiary. The expressions alluded to are as follows:

"We found the prisoners had scarcely sufficient time allowed them at meal time to eat, not being more than about ten minutes. We increased the time to one hour at 12 o'clock."

And on page 5:

"Your board are decidedly opposed to the system of leasing the labor of crime in our State to a company, thereby creating a monopoly, and enriching a few to the detriment of the many, and at the same time changing the spirit and intention from a place where punishment for crime is meted out, but that the criminal may have the opportunity of reformation where even-handed justice may be dealt out, where the force of example, instruction and advice of the officers connected with the institution may have full and proper effect, and not where dollars and cents are the controlling interest, either in the scanty allowance of food and raiment, or the low price paid to the officers and guard employed in the institution. The great importance of every office connected with the institution, and having competent and proper men assigned to the various stations, is not in general fully understood and can scarcely be appreciated by the public at large, who have no adequate means of obtaining the proper information to enable them to judge of the capacity and qualifications required in this branch of the public service."

Enquiries were made of the prisoners themselves as to the quality and quantity of their food, also the time allowed them at dinner, &c.

They stated that they were well fed, and that they preferred the plan heretofore pursued of going to work as soon as they finished their dinners, in preference to being locked up for an hour, which is the present rule.

They stated that they had as much time as they wanted to eat, and were not called to their work, but went as each finished his meal.

Your committee have since been informed by members of the Board of Directors that the expressions referred to were not intended in any way to reflect or disapprove of the management of the lessees, but that they endorsed fully the statement of the physician that the food of the prisoners had always been ample in quantity and suitable in quality for vigorous health and strength.

The attention of your committee has been called to the fact that the present lease expires on the first day of October, 1854, and to the necessity of recommending some plan for the future management of the Penitentiary.

By the term of the lease the State is obliged at is termination to take from the lessees, at their appraised value, the stock of raw materials and manufactured articles.—The stock usually on hand in the fall, at about the time of the termination of the lease, is large—say from $100,000 or more. It is smallest in the spring, say about the first of May. The lessees are willing to give up their lease in the spring or fall, as may be thought best. If the spring is preferred, they will give it up in the ensuing spring, provided they are compensated for the time their lease has to run; or they are willing to extend the lease, on the terms on which it is at present held, to the spring of 1855.

In the event of the lessees giving up the lease in the coming spring they would claim the sum of $10,000 as a compensation for the time the lease has to run. Taking into consideration the financial condition of the State, your committee are of the opinion that it is best to terminate the lease in the spring of 1855 rather than 1854, as it will give time to ascertain the best plan for conducting its affairs hereafter.

Upon the dissolution of the present lease the very important question will be presented for the decision of the General Assembly, whether the present system of leasing shall be adhered to, or some other plan adopted.

This subject has received much attention in the other States of the Union, and much valuable information might be obtained from them. By extending the lease to the spring of 1855, an opportunity would be afforded of visiting or corresponding with the other States on this subject.

The attention of your committee has also been called to the large number of slaves confined in the Penitentiary, either as State prisoners or as property of the State.

After a careful consideration of the matter, your committee is satisfied that slaves convicted of crimes ought not to be sent to the Penitentiary, and that those who are now there, for crimes committed by them, ought to be removed from it, because confinement is to them no adequate punishment, but in many cases is actually preferred to their former condition.

They might be employed to advantage on the public works of the State, if properly guarded and confined so as to prevent them from having any intercourse whatever with other slaves.

No slaves of the State, not sentenced to imprisonment for crimes, ought to be removed and sold, or otherwise disposed of.

Provision can be made by law to provide some punishment for slaves as a substitute for imprisonment in the Penitentiary; but the slaves already there cannot be withdrawn without the consent of the lessees until the termination of the lease.

For the purpose of carrying out the views expressed above, your committee beg leave to report the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee be instructed to report a law abolishing imprisonment of slaves in the Penitentiary as a punishment for crime, and to provide a substitute therefor.

Resolved, That the contract of lease with the present lessees of the Penitentiary be extended from the first day of October, 1854, to the first day of May, 1855, upon their ratifying the Governor of their acceptance of the extension of said lease.

Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Penitentiary

REPORT

OF THE

DJUTANT GENERAL.

Adjutant & Inspector Gen'ls Office,
Baton Rouge, Jan'y 15, 1854.

VERNOR:

I have the honor to submit my report the Militia for the past year, for transsion to the Legislature. Entering on duties, by your appointment, in March , my attention was first directed to some nished correspondence with the Ordce Department of the United States Arrelative to the quota of arms due the te from the General Government. When was arranged, the quota due the State, hundred and thirty six percussion mus- s and one hundred and thirty six percus- n rifles, were received by me. On my it to New Orleans to inspect the State senal, I found the roof of the building such a condition as to require immediah, pairs, which I ordered, the cost of whicof d the sums necessary for the payment te bills for coal and water for the Arsenal, re paid out of the Contingent Fund of the ecutive, by your direction, although not operly chargeable to it, as there was no ner fund from which they could be paid.

An agent for a manufacturing Arms mpany being in New Orleans, made me a oposition to percussion all the State arms old pattern, for $1 per piece, and several oppositions to take fifty-two Hall's rifles, longing to the State, in part payment, ere made. The final offer of his house, itchcock & Co., I annex, as some action the Legislature is necessary before any ntract can be entered into on the subject.

New York, August 15, 1853.

EN. S. M. WESTMORE,

Dear Sir:

Yours of the 8th inst., is at hand; would ay in reply, are willing to alter the arms of a., as proposed, and take the Hall's rifles t their full market value among the trade, ay $2 50; at which price we sold the rifles ssued to the State of New York, which had never been out of the cases. We purchased them at $2. We are anxious to alter the arms of your State, and are willing and able to do it cheaper than the United States can afford to work, but do not want to take arms in payment for more than market value. The offer our Mr. B. made was, alteration $1, taking in payment muskets in fair shooting condition, at $1 87½. That you may see how fair we are, would say, we have purchased several large lots, during the past two months, at $1 75; and we are now in treaty with one of the largest Northern States for all their old arms at $1 50.

Yours, etc.,
HITCHCOCK & CO.

The reorganization of the Militia, under the law of the last Legislature, has proceeded but slowly. Commissions have been declined by some who were relied on to aid in the important work—others have not been heard from in reply, and but few of those accepting commissions have complied with the requirements of the law. Indifference, approaching repugnance, appears to exist to a great extent among our citizens, which cannot be overcome without a tour through all the parishes of the State, to be made by the Adjutant General, to excite emulation and induce gentlemen to aid in executing the law. The present insignificant salary allowed this officer, precludes any such tour, unless at the sacrifice of all his pecuniary interests. In the parish of Orleans, the limits of the fifteen Regiments, numbering from one to fifteen, into which it is divided, have been defined, and as the other parishes each furnish a regiment, they have been designated by the names of the parishes, without numbering them.

The Volunteer Corps of the City of New Orleans are well equipped, well commanded and in a state of good discipline. Their importance to the City and State cannot be magnified, and no public money is better applied than the usual annual allowance made by the Legislature for their partial support.

The law of the last Legislature needs amendment, and I respectfully call attention to the following sections. The 17th section, which regulates the rank of Staff Officers, omits the rank of Quarter Master and Paymaster of Division, which officers the 14th section establishes.

The 23d section requires Colonels to be elected by officers of the line of the Division, instead of the Regiment, thus making an inferior (a Colonel) elective by a larger body than his superior (a Brigadier General). It requires the election to be ordered by the Commander in Chief, instead of the Brigadier General of the Brigade, to which the Regiment is attached, when a Brigadier General's election is ordered by the Major General.

The 24th section, relative to the election of Lieutenant Colonels and Majors, is defective in a similar manner.

Adj't & Ins. Gen. of La.

Gov. P. O. HEBERT, of Louisiana.

REPORT OF THE STATE TREASURER.

To His Excellency P. O. Hébert, Governor of the State of Louisiana:

In conformity with the 6th Section of an Act of the General Assembly, entitled "an Act to establish and regulate the Treasury Department," approved January 26th, 1847, I have the honor of transmitting herewith a Report, giving "a detailed statement of the condition of the Treasury and its operations" during the fiscal year ending December 31st, 1853.

The balance remaining in the Treasury on that day is - - $1,162,127 30

General funds,	$647,363 75
Mill Tax "	173,910 84
Poll Tax "	27,392 47
Internal Improvement funds,	27,110 75
Levee & drainage,	273,988 84
Road and Levee,	12,360 65
	$1,162,127 30

The statement, I trust, is sufficiently detailed, and needs no further explanation on my part.

I think it my duty, however, to call the attention of the Legislature to certain matters and claims, not mentioned in said statement:

The Municipalities of the City of New Orleans were indebted to the State in a considerable amount, for interest advanced by the State on bonds issued by virtue of Act No. 40 of the General Assembly, approved in 1839. Also for the difference of 1 per cent. in favor of the State, on the stipulated interest, between the bonds given in exchange by the said Municipalities to the State, for those issued by the State in their favor.

I have caused a settlement to be made for the advances made by the State, and they were allowed, together with 6 per cent. interest, from the time these advances were made. The amount thus collected is $11,070 09.

Separate accounts were presented against each Municipality, on the 21st of May, 1853, to the commissioners of the consolidated debt of the city of New Orleans, for the amount accruing to the State for the difference of 1 per cent. interest, as above mentioned, amounting in the aggregate to $57,444 96. This amount has not, as yet, been accounted for by the Municipalities, and I think some legislative action should be had on the subject.

A suit was instituted by one of my predecessors against the heirs and legal representatives of Poydras, for the 10 per cent. accruing to the State on the amount of his estate. The inferior Court has rendered judgment in favor of the State for some $45,000, and I have reason to believe that its judgment will be affirmed by the Supreme Court, before which the case is now pending.

The sucessions of Germain Musson and Martin Gordon are indebted to the State in an amount of about $50,000, for the purchase by them of the Nashville and Mexican Gulf Railroads, at Sheriff's sale, in the year 1844. Steps were taken early last spring, both by myself and the Attorney General, towards the collection of this claim, but thus far we have been unsuccessful. In answer, however, to a letter which I lately wrote to him on the subject, he states that this claim will probably be shortly settled.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

January, 1854.

C. E. GRENEAUX,
State Treasurer.

TREASURER'S OFFICE,
Baton Rouge, January, 1854.

In compliance with the third section of Act No. 265, approved in 1852, a transfer was made by the Treasurer and Auditor of Public Accounts, on the 1st of January, 1854, of the remaining surplus of the Mill and Poll Tax fund to the general fund, after the payment of the annual appropriations for the support of Free Public Schools, to bear an interest of six per cent. per annum in favor of the Mill and Poll Tax fund. The amount thus transferred is one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, to-wit.:

From the Mill Tax fund, $100,000
From the Poll Tax fund, 20,000

Which added to the amount of the general fund in the above statement, increases it to $767,363 75, now on hand to the credit of the general fund.

C. E. GRENEAUX,
State Treasurer

REPORT

OF THE

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC EDUCATION.

OFFICE OF STATE SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC EDUCATION,
BATON ROUGE, January 20th, 1854.

o Hon. W. W. FARMER, President of the Senate:

I have the honor herewith to submit a Report of the condition of Free Public Schools the State during the year 1853.

Yours respectfully, J. N. CARRIGAN,

Superintendent Public Education.

'o the Honorable the Members of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana.

By the 10th Section of " n Act to re-organize Free Public Schools in the State of Louisiana," approved April 28th, 1853, it is enacted That the State Superintendent shall prepare nd submit a report to each and every General ssembly, within the first week of its session, ontaining a statement of the condition of the 'ree Public Schools of the State, estimates and ccounts of expenditures of the school moneys, lans for the improvement and management of ie free school funds, the number of children, umber of schools, the time schools are taught i each parish, the number of scholars in attenance, the amount paid for tuition, and the ources whence the different items of school unds are derived; also, to give information of he number of school houses, the amount exended from year to year in erecting school ouses, and all other matters in reference to the perati on of the public school system, which he ay deem important. He shall, through the ifferent District Attorneys, inquire annually nto the condition of the school sections and nstitute such proceedings as may be necessary or the recovery of the lands which may be held legally by individuals, or for the collection of laims originating in the sale of school lands vhich may be in arrears, and it shall be the duty f said District Attorney to prosecute said suits; said money, when collected, shall be placed in the State Treasury, and the intreest thereof shall be placed to the credit of the District to which it belongs."

Under the requirement of "a statement of the condition of the Free Public Schools of the State," may be included, "the number of schools, the time schools are taught in each parish, the number of scholars in attendance, the amount paid for tuition, the number of school houses, and the amount expended from year to year in erecting them."

Circumstances have occurred during the season just passed, which have rendered it impossible to obtain any valid information of the actual condition of the Public schools in the country parishes.

The frequent and radical change in the laws governing our public school system has created great embarrassment in every quarter; and the Act of 1852 threw the whole system into confusion, by suddenly abolishing the office of the only responsible agent from whom full and accurate information could be obtained.

A few meagre and imperfect reports from District Directors have been received, but not sufficient in number or importance to form any reliable data.

The Reports of about a dozen Parish Treasurers have been received up to the 1st of January, and will be found herewith annexed.

The Act of 1853, making the Parish Treasurer the disbursing agent of the school funds in each parish, was not published until near the close of the month of June last, and the 12th section thereof provided, That no moneys should be paid over to that officer, either by the State Superintendent, or the collector of taxes, until notified by the President of the Police Jury that each Treasurer had given a satisfactory bond as required by law.

A circular was immediately prepared and transmitted, agreeably to the provisions of said 12th Section, showing the number of children of the proper age in each parish, and the amount of the bond to be given by the Treasurer.

The irregularity and tardiness of the mails; the failure of the Police Juries to assemble except at their stated periods of meeting; the absence from the State of some Parish Treasurers, and the prevailing epidemic, were causes operating against a ready compliance with the require ments of the law.

Notice has been received, however, from all but four parishes of the State, that the Treasurers have given bond and entered upon their functions; and from a personal knowledge of the character and abilities of more than half of the number who have accepted of the office, the Superintendent discovers a sure gurantee that their duties will be efficiently and faithfully performed.

The reports of Assessors from thirty-nine parishes have been received, which, in the aggregate, show the number of white youths, between the ages of six and sixteen years, to be 51,987. If to this we add the number as returned by the Assessors in 1851, in those parishes from which reports have not yet been received, the total number of educable children in the State would be 60,274, an increase of 2750 over the assessment of 1851.

Parish Treasurers, although not reporting officially, tell me that in nearly every district a school is in operation a considerable portion of the year; it is fair, I think, to presume that at least 35,000 or 40,000 children are in attendance at our common schools during a portion of the year.

At any rate, there are but few out of the 700 or 800 districts in the State, that have not drawn their quota of the quarterly apportionments.

The estimates and accounts of the expenditures of the school moneys, will be more fully seen by reference to the tables herewith annexed to this report.

The amount of school moneys returned into the Treasury in conformity to Act No. 2 of the Acts of 1853, by the late State Superintendent, Robt. Carter Nicholas, was, as appears from a statement of the Auditor, eighty thousand four hundred and thirteen dollars and ninety-seven cents. ($80,413 97.)

From this fund there was paid out to teachers in the several districts of the State up to June 30, 1853, the sum of fifty-one thousand, eight dollars and twenty-one cents, ($51,008 21) leaving a balance of twenty-nine thousand, four hundred and five dollars and seventy-six cents, (29,405 76;) from which has since been paid upon the warrants of Parish Treasurers, the sum of twenty-two thousand, three hundred, thirteen dollars and forty-two cents, ($22,313 42,) leaving up to the 2d of January, 1854, an unpaid balance of six thousand and ninety-two dollars and thirty-four cents, ($6,092 34.)

The sum of fifty-nine thousand, eighty-seven dollars and nineteen cents, ($59,087 19) has been returned into the Treasury under the Acts Nos. 310 and 311 of 1852 by late Parish Superintendents, of which amount the sum of twenty-seven thousand, two hundred and two dollars and seventy-six cents, was paid out as above to teachers, and the sum of thirty-one thousand, two hundred and forty-six dollars and ninety-four cents ($31,246 94.)

The total amount apportioned during the quarters ending March 31st, June 30th, September 30th, and December 31st, 1853, was as follows:

March 31st, 1853,	$59,917 18
June 30th, "	50,203 98
Sept. 30th,	63,067 76
Dec. 31st,	63,067 76
	$236,256 68

From the March apportionment the sum of twenty-nine thousand, nine hundred and eight dollars and fifteen cents was paid to teachers previous to June 30th, 1853, and the sum of twenty thousand, six hundred and forty-nine dollars and twenty-one cents, has been paid over to Parish Treasurers, leaving a balance uncalled for of nine thousand, three hundred and forty-nine dollars and eighty-two cents.

Of the June apportionment there has been paid over to Parish Treasurers the sum of forty-three thousand three hundred and seventy-six dollars and fifty cents, ($43,376 50,) leaving an unpaid balance of six thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven dollars and forty-eight cents.

Of the September apportionment there has been paid over to Parish Treasurers the sum of forty-one thousand and ninety-nine dollars and forty cents, (41,099 40.) From the December apportionment, thirty-two thousand three hundred and nine dollars and thirty-two cents, and on the apportionment for March 31st, 1854, there has been paid by State Tax Collectors to Parish Treasurers the sum of eight thousand four hundred and forty-seven dollars and sixty-one cents, ($8,447 61.)

The total amount of moneys apportioned to the Parishes and Districts of the State, including the City of New Orleans, Jefferson, &c., it will be seen, is three hundred and seventy-five thousand three hundred and sixty five dollars and forty-nine cents, ($375,365 49.)

The moneys returned by the late State and Parish Superintendents are comprised in the foregoing amount.

The total amount paid out for school purposes by the present Superintendent, including payments made by State Tax Collectors to Parish Treasurers is two hundred, seventy-eight thousand, seven hundred and thirty dollars and forty-eight cents, ($278,730 48.)

Act No. 8, of Acts of 1853, provided, That the several sums of money which have been or may be hereafter paid into the State Treasury, by the different Parish Superintendents in compliance with the Acts approved March, 1952, be and the same are hereby appropriated for the use of Free Public Schools in the parishes to which they are or may be respectively credited, &c. Upon making out a general statement of the moneys due and unpaid to the several parishes, it was found that the sum of nine thousand, nine hundred, seventy-two dollars and ninety-five cents ($9,972 95) had been paid out by the former State Superintendents, of moneys thus returned previous to the passage of the above entitled Act, under the impression that a re-appropriation of those moneys was not necessary.

Digitized by Google

It will be seen that some of the Tax Collectors have paid the quarterly apportionments up to the 31st March, 1854. Sections 8 and 15 conflict, and are contradictory in their provisions.

Section 8 makes it the duty of the State Superintendent to proceed on the last day of June, 1853, and quarterly thereafter, to apportion the funds which may be paid into the State Treasury, to the credit of the school fund for the support of Free Public Schools among the different parishes of the State, &c. And Section 15 provides "That the sums due to each of the parishes in the State from the annual collection of the school tax, shall be paid quarterly to the Treasurer thereof by the State Tax Collector.

The amount of the funds paid into the Treasury to the credit of the school fund, on the last day of June, 1853, was fifty thousand, two hundred and eight dollars, ($50,208) which was apportioned agreeably to the 8th Section, but as there was no Parish Treasurers yet qualified, notice of the sums apportioned could not be given.

The State Tax Collectors were at a loss how to proceed in conformity with the 15th Section of the Act of 1853. The 5th Section of No. 281 of the Acts of 1852, makes it obligatory on the several Tax Collectors to make their final payments into the Treasury on or before the 1st day of December, and if the Collectors fail to do so, they are considered and proceeded against as defaulters. If they retain the money due the parishes in their own hands, they must be declared defaulters, and if they complied with the 5th Section of the Act of 1852, they could not obey the injunctions of the 15th Section of the Act of 1853. In this dilemma some Collectors paid to the Treasurers the amount for the three ensuing quarters—whilst the greater part of them paid their taxes in full into the State Treasury, in conformity to the 5th Section of the Act of 1852.

From this statement, the Legislature will perceive the absolute necessity of altering or repealing the 15th Section of the Act of 1853.

A portion of the 16th Section of the Act of 1853 has caused considerable difficulty among those whom it was intended to benefit.

The plan of issuing certificates for balances due on the warrants of Teachers, should never have been adopted by State Superintendents, and ought strenuously to be avoided by Parish Treasurers. No record of such certificates was kept by my predecessor, and of course the notification could not be given. Such of his certificates as were signed by his clerks were not recognized by the Auditor as valid.

To remedy this evil, as far as could be done, the holders were directed to send the certificates to this office, in order that the signature might be verified.

The Treasurers have been notified of such outstanding certificates as have been recorded, so soon as notice was received at this office of bond having been given by them.

The requirement of "plans for the improvement and management of the free school funds" is a matter of deep interest to every citizen of the State, and opens an extensive field for suggestion and investigation.

Coming fresh from among the people, the honorable members of the Legislature should be the best judges of the wants and necessities of their constituents upon this subject.

My own impression is, that within the last few years too many plans for the improvement and management of the free school funds have been adopted.

Had the motto "Let us alone" been adhered to more strictly from the first organization of the system, the schools in the country parishes might have been in an equally flourishing condition with those in the 1st, 2d and 4th districts of the city of New Orleans, which, in point of discipline, order and progressive scholarship are unsurpassed by similar institutions in those States where all the advantage and experience of a century past, in the operation of the free school system, has been enjoyed.

The appointment of Parish Treasurers to be the depositaries of the school funds, was a partial return to the original office of Parish Superintendent. With an increase of remuneration for services, give this officer an increase of duties of a supervisory character, and you will have the Parish Superintendent restored, without creating any sudden and radical change.

A local parochial and State supervision of the schools is what is most needed. There should be, in every parish, a Board of Examiners, consisting of three or more, whose duty it should be to examine applicants for the situation of teacher. In some districts, the directors are totally incapable of performing this duty, for the very potent reason that they themselves do not know how to read or write. In looking over the warrants of teachers on file in this office, there were found in one parish the ordinary mark of twelve different directors; in two or three of the districts, there were two out of three who signed their mark. This is truly a deplorable fact, and one of which unprincipled teachers have not failed to turn to their own pecuniary advantage. Two out of every three of the directors should be required to know how to read and write.

The section enumerating the duties of the State Superintendent, provides, also, that "He shall, through the different District Attorneys, inquire annually into the condition of the School Sections, and institute such proceeding as may be necessary for the recovery of the lands which may be held illegally by individuals, or for the collection of claims originating in the sale of school lands which may be in arrears, and it shall be the duty of said District Attorney to prosecute said suits."

The notes given by purchasers of the 16th Sections of school lands are generally punctually paid, and if unpaid at the time when due, they are paid at a future period with the accrued interest.

Very little is known of the actual condition of the school sections. I have enquired of several District Attorneys if they knew the number and location of the school sections within their district, and they have invariably answered, that they did not know, nor had they the means of ascertaining what school sections, situated within their respective districts, were sold or unsold.

The subject of the 16th Sections of school lands belonging to the State demands the immediate attention of the General Assembly.

The quantity of land (16th sections) appropriated by Congress for the use of Common Schools in the State of Louisiana, computed by townships, was in 1846, upwards of 770,000 acres, a large portion, however, of the choicest of those lands, was covered by private claims, whilst at least one-half of all the land appropriated is composed of sea-marsh, pine barrens and impenetrable swamps.

The Legislature of 1847, passed a series of resolutions requesting our Senators and Representatives in Congress to pass a law with such provisions as would give to the State of Louisiana the quantity of six hundred and forty acres of school land fit for cultivation, (parts of townships in the same proportion) within said State, in lieu of all overflowed or worthless sections sixteen, or in lieu of those sections sixteen appropriated for other purposes, or where any legal interference whatever may exist, and in lieu of any deficiency in the contents thereof, to be taken from any lands within the State not sold or otherwise appropriated, and which are subject to entry at the date of such selection."

Subsequent to the passage of said resolutions, several selections were made in the Ouachita district to replace the original 16th Sections which were interfered with, and those selections were approved.

No selections appear to have been made in either of the other districts.

In his report of 1850 to the Legislature, the Register states that "the great body of lands due the townships, are in the South eastern, South-western, and Greensburg districts, which appear to have been most sadly neglected. The sections were made by the Registers, but from some cause or other, the selections were never approved, and the land selected was permitted to be taken up by purchasers, and has since been patented to them."

Were a Surveyor or proper officer employed to take the lists prepared by Mr. Kerr, in 1850, it would be neither difficult nor expensive, so to classify the sections, as to show at a glance their situation and area within the limits of each parish. This classification would also serve to facilitate the sale of the lands as ordered by the 4th Section of the Act to reorganize free public schools.

Had the School Lands (16th Sections) been donated to the State, instead of the townships, the proceeds of the sales would have been more available, and the organization of the system far more effective than at present. As it is, the disposition of those lands has been very unfortunate; and unless some more feasible and efficient legislative action is had in regard to them, that which was intended to be a liberal and generous endowment, will, for a long time to come, prove of little value to the Free School Fund.

By the report of the Auditor of Public Accounts, the capital and interest of the Free School Fund, on the 1st of January, 1852, amounted to the sum of one hundred and twenty-five thousand one hundred and twenty-seven dollars and forty-seven cents. Since that period the proceeds of the sales of 16th sections has amounted to nineteen thousand twenty-two dollars and thirty-five cents. If we add to this the interest on the fund, say about seven thousand five hundred dollars, together with the amount of interest which has accrued during the year 1853, on the United States Deposit Fund, supposing it to be the same as reported in 1852, twenty-eight thousand seven hundred and ninety-five dollars and fourteen cents, the capital and interest of the Free School Fund will, on the 1st of January, 1854, amount to upwards of one hundred and eighty thousand dollars. This does not include the proceeds of the estates of deceased persons, fines, forfeitures &c.

The Auditor's report will exhibit the condition of those funds with more exactness. Not having the information at hand, the foregoing is only an approximate estimation.

Act No. 43 of the Acts of 1853, made it the duty of the State Superintendent of Public Education to notify the District Attorneys of the State of the names of the Parish Superintendents, who had not in compliance with the provisions of Acts Nos. 310 and 311 of Acts of 1852, settled their accounts, and paid over the balances remaining in their hands into the State Treasury. In conformity to the provisions of the Act, a list of the names of the Superintendents who had not complied with the Act No. 311 of 1852, together with the amounts they had severally received from the School Fund, was obtained from the State Treasurer, and a circular and statement were sent to the District Attorneys as directed by law.

It was necessary to send a statement of the whole amount received by them, in order that they should make a showing of their disbursements, otherwise it was impossible for the Treasurer to know what amount was due the State or what amount had been disbursed by them. Several Parish Superintendents had settled in full with their successors in office, but have not conformed to the Act No. 311 of 1852. Annexed is a statement of the names of Superintendents and amounts received by them.

Act No. 72, entitled an "Act for establishing a Seminary of Learning," authorized and required the Superintendent of Public Education to purchase from Mrs. E. R. Williams, a certain tract of land near the town of Alexandria, in the Parish of Rapides, containing four hundred and thirty-eight acres of land, at a price not to xceed the sum of three thousand one hundred nd ninety dollars.

In obedience to the requirement of the 2d ection of said Act, the Superintendent proeeded to the Parish of Rapides, on the 1st of pril last, and made the purchase for the price rerein mentioned. Trustees have been appointd by the Governor, agreeably to the provisions f the 4th section. An appropriation of fifteen ousand dollars was made by the last Assemly, which I learn from the Auditor's office, has ot been drawn.

Proposals were advertised for materials and ie construction of suitable buildings—but what rogress has been made towards the organizaon of the Seminary, I have not been able to scertain.

'he amount of the Seminary Fund per Auditor's report of last year was $129,507 83
ales of Seminary Lands, 1853, 2,052 82
nterest, probably about the same as per last report, - - 5,665 84

Total of the fund, - $137,226 29

The appropriations amounting to $18,190, are ot included in the above calculation.

The site for this Institution has been admirbly selected. The land is beautifully undutting, covered with a forest of pine and oak.

On the hill side, where it is intended the main uildings shall be erected, crystal fountains of ure, cool water gush forth, and soon unite with ie clear, peaceful stream in the valley below.

For health and convenience, it is doubtful if better location for the purpose could have been elected throughout the entire State. This eminary may be made auxiliary to the advancement of free school education, by providing for he State a great desideratum, a corps of well ducated and competent teachers upon the plan f Normal schools, which, for some years past as met with great success in the Eastern, Midle and some of the Western States.

The object and design of Normal schools is learly defined in the 1st section of the "Act for he establishment of a State Normal School in he State of Connecticut, passed June 22d, 1849, there shall be established as hereafter provided, ne Normal School or Seminary, for the training of teachers in the art of instructing and gorning the common schools of this State; the bject of which Normal school or seminary, shall e, not to educate teachers in the studies now equired by law, but to receive such as are ound competent in those studies, and train them n the best methods of teaching and conducting ommon schools.'"

In some of the States, Normal Schools are stablished, having for their sole object the eduation of teachers, while in other States, Norial departments are erected. A class or department might be organized with good effect n our State Seminary of Learning, so soon as t commences operations.

I would also suggest the adoption of a system of Union Schools, in such towns and districts where the population is sufficiently dense o admit of it. The schools in New Orleans re conducted somewhat upon the plan of Union Schools, being divided into primary, secondary and high schools. Such a plan might be adopted in the city of Baton Rouge and other places where there are two or more contiguous districts. By such an arrangement or classification, the time of the teacher is not divided among a number of classes, but is limited to one or two, to which he is better able to give his undivided attention.

The school should be situated in a central position and divided into the necessary number of separate apartments. This method is said to possess the advantage of imparting a more thorough education, and at a less expense, than is attained by the usual course.

I have already alluded to a serious defect in our school system—the want of a more efficient general and local supervision, without which the system can never be made harmonious in all its proportions. A rigorous and vigilant central influence must be brought to bear upon it, in order to insure concert of purpose and of action throughout the various members of the system, and this central influence must be exerted through the medium of local and intermediate agents, who will take an interest in assisting the Superintendent in reforming and improving the system.

Perhaps the following plan might be effective: Let the members of the Police Juries be de-facto or ex-officio directors each in their respective districts, let them report to the Parish Treasurer at each meeting, or as often as may be deemed necessary, the condition of the school or schools of the district; from such reports an abstract or summary could be transmitted to the office of the State Superintendent.

Three or five competent persons should be appointed by the Police Jury to form a Board of Examiners, by whom teachers should be examined and licensed, and the State Superintendent should be required again to visit and inspect as many of the schools in the State as his time would permit.

The Superintendent has deeply felt the necessity of some channel through which communications of general importance could be addressed to the several officers connected with the public schools. The correspondence of the office occupies more than half of his time. In the State of New York, the following article is incorporated in the school law, and a similar section might be adopted by us to advantage:

"The Superintendent of common schools, from year to year, shall be authorized to subscribe for so many copies of any periodical published at least monthly, in this State, exclusively devoted to the cause of education, and not partaking of sectarian or party character, as shall be sufficient to supply one copy to each organized school district in the State; in which periodical, the statutes relating to common schools passed at the present, or any future session of the Legislature, and the general regulations and decisions of the superintendent made pursuant to any law, shall be published gratuitously."

In this report it has been my object to confine myself, as nearly as possible, to the requirements of the law. The business of the office is gradually emerging from the "confusion and embarrassment" mentioned in the report of my predecessor. But few changes are necessary to make the law effective—the 15th and 16th sections should be repealed, and some few amendments introduced.

The free public school system, is yet in its chrysalis condition, with us—if nourished with care, it may and will assume a more beautiful form, from which a fabric may be constructed, that will at once be the pride and glory of the State. It is no part of my intention to dwell upon the necessity of educating the youth of our State. We have had enough of theory upon this subject—what is now needed is practical experience and action.

In his report to the Legislature of 1850, that eminent scholar, and ardent advocate of public education, Prof. Dimitry, forcibly and truthfully remarked: that "the property of the State in some form, must educate the children of the State. It is not so much the law of nature, as the law of society, that imposes the duty upon us. And if the laws of society can and do regulate the relations of parent and child in the domestic order, they may certainly direct the destinies of that child in the social scheme. The superintendent of public education, whilst admitting the freedom of instruction, in all its bearings, hopes that he is not advancing a principle of unsound morality, when he suggests that no parent has the right to allow his child to grow up as a useless, if not mischievous member of society;—and ignorance in a republic is mischief in its most insidious form—the mischief that grows out of the unquestionable right to participate in the action of government, without the information that should control its action to salutary ends."

This is a doctrine now universally admitted by every true friend of republicanism. "In a republican government," says Montesquieu, in his "Spirit of Laws" that the whole power of education is required.

The fear of despotic governments rests naturally of itself, amidst threats and punishments; the honor of monarchies is favored by the passions, and favors them in return: but virtue is self-renunciation which is always arduous and painful. This virtue may be defined, the love of our laws, and of our country.

Everything therefore depends on establishing this love in a republic, and to inspire it ought to be the principal business of education.

You may extend your fields of sugar and cotton—erect your palatial mansions—establish manufactories—construct your magnificent living palaces, expend millions for railroads, and accumulate illimitable wealth, but if you neglect to educate the people, you are but making a richer prize for some bold and crafty Cæsar, some Santa Anna, or Louis Napoleon, who will ultimately, be hailed as a welcome deliverer from anarchy and confusion.

J. N. CARRIGAN,
Superintendent of Public Education

PARISH OF POINT COUPEE,
False River, 10th Nov. 1853

Sir—Conformably to the provisions of the 25th Section of the Act to reorganise Free Public Schools in the State of Louisiana, approved the 28th of April, 1853, I have the honor of addressing you the annual report required by said section, and which comprises the time elapsed since the said law went into effect, up to the present day.

You will find in the table accompanying my report:

1st—The amount of the several sums I have received for the public schools of this Parish, and the source whence they come.

2d—The several sums carried to the credit of each district, also of those to which each district is debited, and the balance in their favor.

3d—The total number of children comprised in the limits of each district, and the number of those frequenting each school.

4th—The time during which each school has been held.

I also herewith enclose some reports from district directors, which I have received.

The Superintendent will observe that the reports are few in number, the 24th Section of the law not having made these reports sine qua non, to the payment of teacher's warrants; some of the directors have omitted them. This omission has rendered it impossible for me to give you the necessary information relative to the several districts—the number of children who frequent the various schools and the time during which they are held.

In conclusion, the Superintendent will perceive that many of the districts have made no use of the funds standing to their credit; some, I suppose, because there exists no school within their limits, others because they are without directors—and this circumstance has not been made known to the President of the Police Jury, who is authorized to fill such vacancies.

I have the honor to be, sir, your ob't serv't,
E. MAJOR, Parish Treasurer.

D. B. CASAN, Parish Treasurer.

J. N. Carrigan—Dear Sir—Attached you find my report of the school funds of our parish for the year A. D. 1853. I regret I could not further ascertain the number of children in each district, as negligence on the part of the Assessor and indifference on the part of the Directors and Trustees baffled all my exertions. The system has not heretofore worked well with us. There is an elevating feeling now prevailing among us in regard to education and public schools; and I hope by nourishing and fostering this sentiment that my next report will be as ample and as detailed as could be required to test the system.

I am, most respectfully, your ob't serv't,
D. B. CASAN, Parish Treasurer.

P. S.—Enclosed please find my receipt in your favor for two hundred and sixty-nine dollars and ninety cents, which amount please send me by the return mail if practicable. D. B. C

REPORT

OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON

INSANE ASYLUM, AT JACKSON, LA.

JACKSON, La., April 29, 1853.

To his Excellency, Governor Hébert:

By virtue of authority vested in us by our Excellency, the undersigned Committee (Mr. McVea being absent,) beg leave respectfully to report:

That they repaired to the establishment occupied by the Insane of Louisiana, and forthwith proceeded to discharge their responsible functions. Our visit was made just before the dinner hour, which gave us an opportunity to inspect every article of food, and as our visit was not anticipated, we are satisfied that the dinner was a fair average. We found each subject supplied with a piece of good fresh beef, a pint of very good soup, and a sufficiency of fresh (baker's) bread. We next proceeded to the sleeping apartments, where we found every thing neat and clean.

Four witnesses were examined on oath, three of whom testified to the fact that the establishment was well managed; that the patients were humanely treated, and supplied with a plenty of good wholesome food. The other witness (a gentleman who furnishes the Asylum with fresh beef,) testified that the beef furnished was of the same quality as that furnished the citizens of Jackson.

The establishment is visited daily (and oftener when necessary,) by a physician, who stands high in this community as a practitioner. An examination of his books satisfied us that he had not been remiss in his duty. We therefore report the facts as they came under our observation, and were testified to by respectable witnesses, and necessarily conclude that the establishment is kept in a manner creditable to the State, and to the best interests of the unfortunate inmates.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

L'INGENIEUR D'ETAT.

au Sénat et à la Chambre des Représentans de l'Etat de la Louisiane.

BUREAU DE L'INGENIEUR DE L'ETAT.

Bâton-Rouge, Janvier, 1854.

Dans mon rapport à la dernière Législature, au commencement de la session, je informai que j'avais, le 2 décembre, expédié le capitaine Barker avec vingt ouvriers pour travailler sur le chemin planchéié de Bâton-Rouge et Grosse-Tête ; le capitaine Hardy à la Nouvelle-Orléans avec le bâteau général Walker pour faire réparer ce bateau et le capitaine Marks avec seize ouvriers pour prendre le commandement du bateau à vapeur Florida, et enlever les embarras qui se trouvaient dans le bayou Rlack ; tous les ouvriers de l'Etat, quelque temps auparavant, ayant été employés à l'écluse du Canal de Barataria et Lafourche, à Lock; port.

Je viens maintenant vous rendre compte, d'une manière aussi claire et aussi précise que possible, de nos travaax durant l'année dernière.

Les travaux sur les écluses furent continués, sous la direction du capitaine Kent, avec cinquante nègres, jusqu'au 23 de mai : à cette époque, neuf de ces nègres furent envoyés sur le Général Walker pour aider à enlever la brélle qui se trouve sur le bayou Sorrell ; avec les autres ouvriers restant on continua les travaux pour achever l'écluse, à l'exception des ouvrages en fer nécessaires pour ouvrir et fermer la seconde porte. Le bassin qui se trouve entre les portes a été creusé et l'écluse terminée le 8 juin, à l'exception de quelques accessoires et du travail mécanique mentionné plus haut.

Le 15 janvier, le Walker ayant été complètement réparé, partit de la Nouvelle-Orléans, avec dix-huit nègres, sous le commandement du capitaine Hardy, pour se rendre dans le bayou Sorrel, où une brélle s'était formée depuis près d'un mois. Le bateau arriva à sa destination et l'on commença les travaux le 21. La brelle se trouvait dans la baie du bayou Sorrell et celle qui se trouvait dans le lac Chicot furent enlevées et l'on réussit le 31 à ouvrir un passage assez large à travers celle qui existait dans les bayou Sorrell pour permettre aux bateaux des Aattakapas de passer dans le bayou le 23 février ; après quoi le bateau revint et continua à travailler dans la baie et le lac Chicot jusqu'au premier mai, avec l'assistance du Florida, qui étant très mal construit, et se trouvant en si mauvais état, n'arriva sur les lieux que le 26 février après un voyage de 18 jours du bayou Black. A cette époque, le capitaine Hardy remonta le bayou à l'effet de couper les arbres qui se trouvaient sur les bords ; mais revint, le 8 février, pour travailler avec le Florida à enlever la brelle. Le 23, il se rendit avec son bateau et les ouvriers pour enlever la brélle de la Grande Rivière, où il continua à travailler jusqu'au 1er avril ; le capitaine Blackston avec le Florida vint se joindre à lui le 22, venant de la Sorrell où il travaillait.

Le 4 avril, après avoir ouvert un passage à travers la brelle dans la Grande Rivière, le Florida se rendit dans le bayou Courtableau, à Little Devil, où il continua à travailler jusqu'au 21. La brelle dans le lac Chicot et celle du bayou Sorrell s'étant refermées, ce bateau fut expédié pour les ouvrir de nouveau, et resta là jusqu'au 29, et se rendit ici pour être réparé.

Le 1er avril, le Walker partit de la Grande Rivière pour se rendre au bayou Cyrus, où il continua à nettoyer ce cours d'eau jusqu'au 22 ; ayant terminé ce travail, et les eaux étant assez basses pour travailler sur le Têche, le capitaine Hardy laissa le bateau à la Butte à la Rose, et se rendit avec ses hommes jusqu'à ce bayou, où il continua à travailler jusqu'au 9 août, à l'exception de quelques jours où il fut employé à réparer les chemins de la paroisse après une grande pluie ; et six autres jours sur le bayou Sorrell ; les eaux du Têche étant trop hautes dans le moment pour continuer à y travailler avec profit.

A cette époque tous les bayous étaient navigables ; mais sachant qu'à la moindre crue des eaux, ils seraient de nouveau obstrués, et n'ayant qu'un bateau en état de servir, je ne crus pas devoir éloigner ce bateau de ces lieux ; j'ordonnai donc au capitaine Hardy de veiller à la navigation de ces bayous, et dans le cas où il s'y formerait des radeaux, de suspendre les travaux sur le

Digitized by Google

Têche et se rendre immédiatement avec le bateau sur les lieux pour les enlever. Cette précaution fut utile, car le 21 de mai, il fut obligé de laisser le Têche et de recommencer à ouvrir la brelle qui s'était refermée dans le bayou Sorrell ; là il remit le commandement du bateau au capitaine Blackston, le 27, et revint prendre les travaux sur le Têche.

Blackston acheva le travail sur la Sorrell, le 8 juin ; après quoi, le Walker fut employé comme bateau de transport jusqu'au 3 août, (à l'exception de quelques jours que l'on employa à le réparer et dix autres jours à travailler sur le Little Devil) ; après cela il fut expédié avec cinquante ouvriers pour la Rivière Rouge, ayant pris les 20 ouvriers qui se trouvaient sous les ordres du capitaine Marks, au débarcadère de la Vacherie, et les dix-huit qui se trouvaient sous les ordres du capitaine Hardy. Ce bateau arriva au bayou Loggy le 19 août. Le capitaine Marks fut employé avec 31 ouvriers sous ses ordres à travailler sur les bords de ce bayou, et il continua le même travail sur les bords de la Rivière Rouge jusqu'au 29 septembre ; à cette époque, les eaux du lac Bistineau étant assez basses, je l'expédiai sur ce lac à l'effet d'y creuser un chenal à travers ; ce lac a soixante milles de long, à peu près, et sa largeur varie de deux à cinq milles. La navigation, dans ce lac, a toujours été très difficile, à cause de la grande quantité de vieux troncs d'arbres qui s'y trouvent. Ces troncs d'arbres ont une hauteur qui varie de 1 jusqu'à 15 pieds au-dessus de la marque des eaux basses. Il y a plusieurs débarcadères sur les bords de ce lac, où sont portés les produits du pays qui l'entoure pour être expédiés, savoir : au débarcadère de Stephenson, l'année dernière, on expédia 300 balles de coton ; à Buena Vista, 300 balles à peu près ; à Spring Bayou, 1500 balles à peu près ; au débarcadère de Graggs, 1500 balles de coton à peu près ; à celui de Pine Bluffs 700 balles à peu près ; à celui de Port Bolivar, 1,200 balles à peu près ; à Barefield, 1,200 balles ; à Moscou, 2000 balles de coton ; à Boon, 1800 balles de coton ; au débarcadère de Howard, sur le Doréchiti, 350 balles de coton ; au débarcadère de Overton, 3000 balles de coton ; au débarcadère de Minden on n'a pas de données, quant au nombre de balles, mais certainement on a dû expédier un nombre de balles beaucoup plus grand, disons 5000 balles. —Total des balles de coton expédiées l'année dernière : 19849.

On a ouvert des chenals pour arriver à ces différents débarcadères ; ils ont 160 pieds de large durant les plus basses eaux ; des enseignes sont placées à une distance d'un demi-mille les unes des autres, à une hauteur de 20 à 25 pieds, sur des cyprès ébranchés ; lesquelles enseignes sont bien marquées et indiquent la direction de chacun des débarcadères ; lesquels sont parfaitement nettoyés et libres de tout embarras, de manière que les bateaux peuvent atterrer dans quelque position que ce soit.

La profondeur de ce lac, aux différents points, durant les plus basses eaux, au niveau desquelles on a coupé les troncs d'arbres, est comme suit :

Au débarcadère de Stephenson 9 pieds ; à celui de Buena Vista 7 pieds ; à Shingle Point 5½ pieds ; à Mud Bar de 12 à 15 pouces ; au débarcadère de Spring la même profondeur ; à celui de Graggs 5½ pieds ; à Pine Bluff, 9 pieds ; à Port Bolivar, 5½ pieds ; à Barefield, 8 pieds ; à celui de Boon 9 1-2 ; à Moscou, 7 pieds ; à la Barre Bark Point, la profondeur varie de 12 à 14 pouces ; à la tête du lac, 15 pouces ; à partir de Bark Point jusqu'à l'embouchure du bayou Dorchiti, la profondeur varie de 12 à 15 pouces ; en dedans, à l'embouchure du bayou, 7 pieds ; au débarcadère de Howard, sur le bayou, 5 pieds ; au débarcadère de Longreach, sur le bayou, 8 pieds ; au débarcadère de Ovorson, sur le bayou, 3 pieds, sur les battures, entre le débarcadère de Overton et Minden, 12 pouces ; au débarcadère de Minden, 9 pieds.

Le surintendant des travaux dans cette partie de l'Etat, remarque que le bayou au nord de Minden peut être rendu navigable pour les Barges jusqu'à 70 milles de cet endroit.

Les ouvriers de l'Etat, en revenant à travers le lac jusqu'à la Rivière Rouge, nettoyèrent les rives du bayou Loggy, et enlevèrent tous les troncs d'arbres qui se trouvaient dans ce cours d'eau et qui gênaient sa navigation ; à l'exception des chicots les plus dangereux qui déjà avaient été enlevés par le bateau sous le commandement du capitaine Blackston.

D'après les informations que j'ai reçues de personnes n'ayant aucun intérêt dans cette affaire, et sur lesquelles on peut compter, et aussi d'après le rapport du surintendant chargé des travaux dans cette partie de l'Etat, il est résulté un grand bien des travaux qui ont été exécutés ici dans très peu de temps.

Des personnes bien informées assurent que la meilleure navigation pour se rendre de la Rivière Rouge au lac Bodreau serait, de prendre le lac Bistineau, par la rivière Flat, le lac Swan, le bayou Red Shoal et le bayou Bodeau jusqu'au lac Bodeau, au lieu d'entrer dans le Red Shoal à partir du lac Bistineau ; cette première est considérée plus courte et plus facile que la dernière qui est obstruée par une batture à l'embouchure du Red Sheal.

Les ouvriers sous les ordres du capitaine Marks, revinrent dans la Rivière Rouge le 7 décembre et continuèrent les travaux qu'ils avaient commencés. Je donnai des ordres pour que tous les embarras qui empêchaient le passage des eaux fussent enlevés jusqu'à la marque des eaux les plus basses, espérant augmenter le courant, à l'effet d'ouvrir le chenal à partir de l'embouchure du bayou Loggy jusqu'à la source du bayou Jones. Le chenal a été ouvert dans une longueur de 12 milles en amont et de quatre milles en aval de l'embouchure du bayou Loggy. Tous ceux qui ont vu ce travail, en parlent de la manière la plus flatteuse.

« Le Walker continue, jusqu'à présent, à enlever les chicots et les bois de dérive dans ce bayou avec autant de succès que l'on pouvait attendre d'un bateau aussi usé. Une fois il a brisé sa grue et presque tous ses gros cables sans pouvoir enlever des troncs d'arbres très lourds qui était fortement enterrés dans le fonds de la rivière. Quelques fois nous avons employé deux haussières neuves ayant huit pouces et demi de diamètre et nous avons été obligés d'abandonner ce travail, la machine du bateau n'étant pas assez forte pour réussir. Je mentionne ce fait afin que l'on sache pourquoi ils n'ont pas été enlevés. J'ai déjà fait le dessin d'une machine que j'emploirai, qui aura une force suffisante pour arracher ces chicots.

Les chicots sont en si grand nombre dans cette rivière que je fus obligé d'ordonner au capitaine du bateau de n'arracher que ceux qui génaient le plus la navigation durant les eaux basses ; autrement, si nous avions entrepris de les enlever tous, nous n'aurions pu remonter qu'à une petite distance, et par conséquent faire moins de bien. Nous avons réussi à arracher les chicots qui gênaient le plus la navigation, à partir des rigolets en aval de St. Maurice, jusqu'au Goude du Diable, un peu au-dessous de Shreveport.

Bien que des plaintes m'aient été portées, durant les derniers jours, au sujet du travail de ce bateau, je suis certain, d'après ce que j'ai vu moi-même, que les ouvriers qui étaient à bord ont beaucoup travaillé ; mais le résultat de ce travail n'est pas visible, car une fois arraché, le chicot disparait ; et si quelques uns restent, le travail n'est pas achevé et les passants croient que l'on a fait, pour parceque ils voient du travail à faire. Les mêmes conséquences se présentent dans l'enlèvement des brelles.

Nous travaillons pendant la moitié de l'année à les enlever de ces cours d'eau, dans les parties inférieures ; et après la première crue des eaux ces brelles se forment de nouveau. J'ai fait voir que nous avions été obligés de les enlever deux fois, l'année dernière, et malgré cela, elles se sont encore si bien formées que je suis obligé de me préparer à les enlever encore une fois.

Le public, en général, comprend très peu ce genre de travail. Il croit que, les brelles étant une fois ouvertes et les chicots enlevés, qu'il ne doit plus rester rien à faire ; mais il se trompe... On doit recommencer souvent ce travail et continuer tant que les bois de dérive continuent à descendre ; et si les bateaux n'avaient pas été continuellement employés, des cours d'eau seraient maintenant impénétrables. Les défrichés, qui sont faits continuellement sur les bords de ces cours d'eau, depuis nombre d'années, par les occupants des terres qui y font face, a augmenté le mal, attendu qu'ils ne faisaient que cerner les gros arbres afin de les faire mourir, et lorsqu'arrivaient les éboulis, ces arbres tombaient en entier dans les cours d'eau et y restaient ; mais quoique le mal ait été augmenté par cela, cependant il en résultera par la suite un grand bien.

Il serait très difficile de changer l'opinion du public, tant qu'il n'aura pas pensé et réfléchi sur ce sujet. Celui qui n'aurait pas vu la condition de l'un de nos grands cours d'eau, avant d'avoir été nettoyé, par un bon bateau avec son équipage, pendant une année entière, ne pourrait, en y passant, s'imaginer les travaux qu'on a exécutés.

Sans doute, on pourra faire beaucoup plus l'année prochaine qu'on n'a fait l'année dernière, attendu que nous aurons de bons bateaux pour exécuter les travaux.

Tandis que nous sommes sur ce sujet, je ferai remarquer que, par un acte de la Législature, l'ingénieur de l'État a été requis de cerner les arbres qui se trouvent sur les bords de la Rivière Rouge ; ce qui, jusqu'à un certain point, a été exécuté au commencement de l'année dernière. M'étant aperçu que ce travail n'avait été d'aucune utilité, j'adoptai le plan de faire abattre les arbres. En conséquence, j'ordonnai au capitaine Marks d'abattre et de couper tous les arbres qu'il croirait susceptibles de tomber dans la rivière. Ce qui me décida à adopter ce plan fut d'avoir découvert que les chicots qui se trouvent dans ce cours d'eau sont les mêmes vieux arbres qui après avoir été cernés, sont tombés dans le bayou avec assez de terre attachée à leurs racines pour en faire caler les troncs, et la tête ou le corps étant en partie séchés sont restés au-dessus de l'eau et forment les chicots les plus dangereux. Pour rendre ces rivières entièrement navigables, il faut absolument abattre et couper par morceaux les arbres qui se trouvent sur les rives qui sont susceptibles d'ébranlement, afin de les empêcher de se former en radeaux. Nos ouvriers maudissent les arbres cotonniers de la Rivière Rouge qui bouchent le bayou Sorrell et la Grande Rivière.

Digitized by Google

Attaquons le mal dans sa racine et détruisons-le avant d'éprouver ses effets. Si ce plan pouvait être mis à exécution dans l'année, il en résulterait de grands avantages et on épargnerait beaucoup de dépenses et de travaux pour l'avenir. Les bateaux et les ouvriers que nous avons à notre disposition ne sont pas assez nombreux pour mettre à exécution ce projet ; de sorte que dans notre position actuelle, nous ne pouvons qu'abattre une faible partie des arbres et arracher ceux qui sont déjà dans la rivière et qui offrent le plus de dangers.

Le capitaine Barker continua les travaux sur le chemin planchéié jusqu'au 14 mai, et construisit huit ponts, savoir : un sur le bayou Johnston, ayant 25 pieds de long sur 16 de large ; un sur le bayou Thomas, ayant 50 pieds de long sur 16 de large ; un sur le bayou Woolfork, ayant 25 pieds de long sur 16 de large : un sur le bayou Erwin, ayant 25 pieds de long, sur 16 de large ; un sur le bayou Crocodile, ayant 170 pieds de long sur 16 de large ; un sur le bayou Poydras, ayant 50 pieds de long sur 16 de large ; un sur le Grand Bayou, ayant 50 pieds de long sur 16 de large ; un sur le bayou Nicholas, ayant 45 pieds de long sur 16 de large.

Il a aussi construit 8 conduits souterrains ayant 20 pieds de long sur 14 de large ; en outre, il a enfoncé à dix ou douze pieds de profondeur 78 pilotis sur lesquels ont été construits les ponts ; et il a équarri dix-huit pièces nécessaires à la construction des conduits souterrains et pour la couverture des ponts. Tout le bois nécessaire a été scié sur les lieux par les ouvriers de l'Etat. Tout le travail a été solidement fait et aussi bien qu'on pouvait l'espérer.

Le 9 juin, le capitaine Marks ayant réussi à enlever, autant que possible, les bois de dérive qui génaient la navigation du bayou Black, et comme depuis longtems on avait promis de faire un chemin sur une des rives de ce bayou, pour le tonage des bateaux, je profitai de l'occasion pour expédier tous les ouvriers qui se trouvaient dans les environs pour achever ce travail. A la date du 24 juin un bon chemin était ouvert. La navigation de ce bayou est de la plus grande importance pour cette partie du pays à travers laquelle il passe ; mais cette navigation ne sera jamais bonne tant que l'on n'établira pas des écluses dans le Terrebonne, le Caillou et le bayou Black même ; ce que la Compagnie de Barataria et Lafourche a promis de faire conformément aux suggestions faites par moi en date du 18 juin 1858, aux commissaires nommés par le Gouverneur, en vertu de l'acte No. 321 pour changer et modifier le contrat passé entre l'ingénieur de l'Etat et la Compagnie.

Conformément aux instructions des commissaires, je remis à la Compagnie un [illegible] qui était requis dans le contrat, à l'exception d'une certaine somme d'argent pour [illegible] matériaux qui n'étaient pas nécessaires pour achever la construction des écluses, et qui ont été vendus à terme. J'ai encore à [illegible] d'autres comptes qui absorberont presque [illegible] faible somme dûe pour des objets vendus [illegible] la balance sera payée au Président de la Compagnie aussitôt que les comptes seront réglés.

Je suis convaincu, d'après ce que j'ai vu, que les terres qui se trouvent dans ce voisinage sont les meilleures de l'Etat, et les cultivateurs ne peuvent qu'avec grand profit envoyer leurs produits au marché. En conséquence, je crois que les travaux qui sont nécessaires pour améliorer la navigation de cette partie de l'Etat devraient être exécutés le plus tôt possible.

Le chemin de fer assurera un grand avantage aux habitans de cette partie du pays, mais ils sentiront bien mieux la nécessité d'une bonne navigation après que ce chemin sera achevé ; car, tout en attirant une population sur ces terres, il ne pourra, ainsi que les bayous, passer devant la porte de chaque habitant.

Les planteurs préfèrent expédier leur sucre et leur melasse, en les embarquant à leurs portes que de les faire transporter à une certaine distance pour être expédiés par une autre voie, quand même le temps pour arriver au marché serait plus long.

Le 25 juin, le Walker, étant arrivé à Lockport, a été chargé avec tout ce qui appartenait à l'Etat, les nègres y compris, et arriva à Bâton-Rouge le 27 ; il resta ainsi la journée du 28 pour être réparé, et partit le 29 avec 57 ouvriers pour le "Pont Noble", où il resta dix jours à peu près occupé à ouvrir la brelle ; ce travail étant achevé il se rendit à l'embouchure de bayou Bonne, le 14 juillet, et débarqua le capitaine Kent avec 50 ouvriers. Il ne put commencer à couper les arbres dans le haut de la Bonne que le 25 du même mois, les eaux étant trop hautes avant ce temps pour travailler avec avantage) et continua avec ses nègres le même travail qu'il avait rempli l'année dernière.

A la même époque, Mr White, avec 25 ouvriers sous les ordres du capitaine Kent

commença à couper les arbres sur le bayou Corney au "Feagell Bluff". Les travaux sur ces deux cours d'eau furent terminés, et les embarras qui se trouvaient dans le bas du bayou Darbonne jusqu'au Ouachita étaient enlevés à la date du 27 août.

Alors tous les ouvriers de l'Etat se rendirent sur le bayou Barthélemy, et commencèrent à travailler le 31 août. Toutes les obstructions furent enlevées; après quoi ils se rendirent jusqu'à la ligne des Arkansas et continuèrent les travaux jusqu'à une distance de 75 milles en descendant, et où jamais on n'avait travaillé. Ce travail fut achevé le 25 novembre. Tous les travaux dans ces deux cours d'eau ont été bien exécutés; mais à cause du grand nombre d'arbres qui y ont été jetés, il sera nécessaire d'envoyer un bateau pour enlever les bois de dérive qui s'y accumuleront avec la crue des eaux. Les eaux étant à cette époque à une hauteur convenable, les ouvriers se rendirent sur le bayou Corney pour ouvrir un passage, pour les barges, au-dessus de Feagell Bluff; ils arrivèrent à cet endroit le 30 novembre, et travaillèrent jusqu'au 12 de décembre, pour finir ce travail jusqu'au (Ferry) bac de Louvié, après quoi il fut ordonné au capitaine Kent de se rendre à Bâton-Rouge avec 30 ouvriers, où il arriva le 23 avec son bateau et ses esquifs. Il fut ordonné au capitaine White de demeurer avec les 20 ouvriers restant, sur le bayou Corney, et de continuer à y travailler jusqu'à la crue des eaux.

Ainsi donc, ce district a profité pendant près de six mois du travail de la moitié des ouvriers de l'Etat; travail qui a été très bien conduit et pour lequel le capitaine Kent mérite des louanges, attendu qu'il a travaillé avec beaucoup d'énergie et de persévérance durant les plus mauvais temps, sans perdre un seul de ses hommes.

Les ouvriers sous les ordres du capitaine Barker furent expédiés sous les ordres du capitaine Marks le 15 mai, pour travailler sur le chemin de la Vacherie, où il resta jusqu'au 4 août. Durant ce temps ils construisirent 4 ponts solides et élargirent le chemin. On ne passe sur ce chemin que durant les saisons pluvieuses, et il ne sera jamais en bon état tant qu'on n'emploiera pas de meilleurs matériaux pour résister au frottement des roues de charettes. Si l'on continuait à placer en travers de ce chemin des dosses de cypre on en ferait un chemin passable; mais tant qu'on n'adoptera pas ce moyen il sera impossible d'arriver au but qu'on se propose.

Ici se termine mon compte-rendu des travaux exécutés par les ouvriers de l'Etat; et quant à moi, je suis convaincu qu'ils ont mieux rempli leurs devoirs et exécuté des travaux plus pénibles qu'aucun autre assemblage d'hommes, du même nombre, dans quelque partie de l'Etat que se soit.

Il ne nous est arrivé aucun accident sérieux. Nous n'avons perdu qu'un vieux nègre qui, accablé sous le poids des années, a été placé en soins près d'ici; il est mort durant l'été d'une affection de poumons.

Le nombre de nègres appartenant à l'Etat, s'élève maintenant à 106; la plupart d'entre eux ont été employés a tant de travaux différents, qu'on pourrait même les employer avec avantage à des ouvrages purement mécaniques.

Je n'ai rien à dire pour ce qui concerne les travaux à faire cette année; il y a tant à faire dans chaque district, avec un nombre d'ouvriers si limité, qu'il est vraiment difficile de satisfaire l'une ou l'autre partie de l'Etat.

D'abord il y a tant à faire pour maintenir une navigation passable dans les cours d'eau qui conduisent aux Attakapas et aux Opelousas, qu'on n'aurait pas le temps d'améliorer ceux des autres parties de l'Etat. La Rivière Rouge demande aussi beaucoup de temps pour la rendre à peu près passable durant les eaux basses. La navigation de ces deux cours d'eaux est de la plus haute importance pour l'Etat, elle doit être maintenue s'il est possible.

Le plan que j'ai adopté, et que je désire continuer, s'il est possible, est d'employer un grand nombre d'ouvriers sur un point jusqu'à ce qu'ils aient réussi à faire quelque chose de bien.

En divisant les ouvriers en petit nombre, toutes les parties de l'Etat espèrent obtenir quelque chose, tandis qu'à la fin rien n'est fait et elles sont désappointées.

Je dois dire que durant l'année dernière les paroisses de la Floride ont été entièrement négligées, et n'ont pas profité du travail des ouvriers de l'Etat. Pour leur rendre justice, il me semble qu'on devrait leur donner cette année plus que leur part des travaux publics.

A moins d'en être autrement requis, j'irai examiner moi-même quels sont les endroits où peut être effectué le plus de bien dans le plus court espace de temps; après quoi j'ordonnerai les travaux en temps propice.

Il serait très nécessaire de placer une "barrière flottante" à l'embouchure du bayou Courtableau, à l'effet d'empêcher les bois de dérive de sortir de la Grande Rivière et d'obstruer ce cours d'eau.

Mon prédécesseur en avait fait le dessein; le bois nécessaire pour sa construction avait été coupé, mais nous n'avons pas eu assez de temps l'année dernière pour achever ce travail.

Digitized by Google

Le capitaine Johnston, du bateau Sydonia, employa quelques uns de ces bois à la construction d'une barrière flottante qui lui fut payée conformément à l'acte No. 198, passé par la Législature l'année dernière. Ce travail fut bien vite emporté ; ce qui prouve qu'il n'était pas bien construit. Il faudrait en construire une autre qui pût durer longtemps ; mais je doute qu'il soit possible de le faire avec les ouvriers de l'Etat, après avoir terminé les travaux nécessaires dans ce district, sans priver les autres parties de l'Etat des améliorations qu'elles ont droit d'exiger.

Dans mon rapport de l'année dernière, j'avais recommandé de construire des écluses pour empêcher les eaux du vieux chenal de la Rivière Rouge de passer dans le bayou Tones et dans le Pascagoula.

La rivière, à partir du bayou Tones en descendant jusqu'à l'embouchure du bayou Loggy, se comble ; le courant étant diminué par rapport à ces débouchés. Plusieurs personnes m'ont mal compris sur ce sujet. Celles qui habitent les terres au-dessous de l'embouchure de ces bayous pensaient que ce travail causerait l'inondation de leurs terres : tandis que, si elles avaient examiné avec plus d'attention les opinions émises dans mon rapport, elles auraient vu que ce résultat ne pouvait avoir lieu.

Mon but était seulement d'empêcher par des constructions en bois, les eaux de ces bayous de passer par ces débouchés pendant la décrue des eaux, et aussi lorsqu'elles sont à une hauteur ordinaire, désirant en même temps augmenter la largeur de ces débouchés jusqu'à la hauteur des rives du bayou, afin d'augmenter la force du courant pendant la crue des eaux.

En nettoyant les bords afin que les eaux puissent passer plus facilement, serait d'un grand avantage ; c'est un des moyens les plus sûrs pour élargir et creuser les chenals.

Cette partie de la rivière a été abandonnée depuis trop longtemps, elle est trop sinueuse, et les terres qui se trouvent sur ses bords ont tellement augmenté en hauteur par les dépôts qui se sont faits en amont des cyprières qui les avoisinent, pour chercher plus longtemps à la rendre navigable ; à moins que les mesures déjà proposées ne soient mises à exécution. Les travaux à faire pourraient être exécutés par les ouvriers de l'Etat seulement.

Je crois que les écluses peuvent être construites solidement avec des poteaux non équarris, enfoncés dans le fond des bayous. Je crois qu'en empêchant les eaux de se jeter dans le bayou durant la saison des eaux basses, on pourrait travailler facilement dans le lit de ces bayous et construire les écluses sans difficulté.

Les seules dépenses à faire, dans le cas où on emploirait les ouvriers de l'Etat pour exécuter ce travail, serait de payer pour le transport des bois que l'on trouve immédiatement dans le voisinage.

L'acte de la Législature No. 259, approuvé le 29 avril, autorise l'ingénieur de l'Etat à construire des bateaux convenables pour l'usage de ce département ; mais cet acte n'ayant passé que vers la fin de la session, et l'épidémie s'étant présentée parmi nous presqu'immédiatement après, je ne pus continuer les travaux que j'avais à peine commencés. En conséquence, la construction de ces bateaux est loin d'être terminée. On a réparé et changé la construction du Florida ; un des nouveaux bateaux est sur le chantier, et se construit sous la direction de Mr Jno. F. Durgin qui est considéré comme un ouvrier capable et entreprenant. L'Agnès aussi est en réparation, et sa coque a été refaite par Messrs. Robertson Penegar and Martin d'Alger.

Tous ces bateaux une fois réparés et mis étant en bon état, rendront de grands services ; mais la somme allouée pour la construction et les réparations de ces bateaux sera insuffisante pour payer le coût de construction et des réparations, à cause de l'augmentation dans le prix du travail et des matériaux. Depuis que j'ai fait l'estimation ou depuis l'année dernière, la main d'œuvre et les matériaux ont augmenté d'un tiers à peu près.

Il faudra donc allouer une somme additionnelle ; et plus tard, durant cette session, après que je me serai assuré du montant nécessaire pour achever la construction de ces bateaux, j'en ferai un rapport spécial à la Législature.

Durant la saison où je devais faire les levés ordonnés par la Législature précédente, l'épidémie faisait tant de ravages que je ne crus pas devoir m'exposer ni permettre à mon assistant de le faire.

J'avais aussi beaucoup de travail à faire dans mon bureau : des tracés pour l'exécution des travaux par les nouveaux bateaux, y inclus ceux des nouvelles machines de ces bateaux.

J'ai fait les tracés du bayou Plaquemines avec beaucoup de soin. Le premier fut fait pendant les eaux hautes, faisant voir les courbes et les lignes du courant, et représente une vue topographique de la rivière et du bayou à cette époque. Le second fait durant les eaux basses, représente une vue complète de la topographie et de l'hydrographie des lieux, avec les changements qui ont eu lieu depuis le premier tracé. Les deux, d'une exactitude parfaite, ont été faits par mon habile assistant Mr Chs. Ritter.

Digitized by Google

Nous pourrons avec ces tracés développer les faits qui peuvent être nécessaires pour établir une juste opinion concernant les constructions qui doivent être faites à l'embouchure du Bayou. L'Etat a déjà dépensé beaucoup d'argent sans avoir obtenu aucun bon résultat; je n'ai jamais voulu et m'opposerai encore à ce que l'on fasse de nouvelles dépenses dans ce but, tant que les travaux publics seront sous ma direction, et que je ne serai pas convaincu qu'on peut en obtenir de bons résultats.

Je n'ai pas cru devoir faire le relevé des chûtes près d'Alexandrie, conformément à l'acte No. 80 de la dernière Législature, attendu que je savais que les travaux qui devaient être exécutés pour enlever les obstructions à cet endroit étaient déjà commencés sous la direction du Col. DeRussy, l'habile ingénieur nommé par les commissaires. Je présume que d'après l'examen et les tracés qu'il a faits, il pourra démontrer l'utilité du travail déjà commencé.

Un cours d'eau qui, bien que ses ressources ne soient pas à moitié dévelopées, sert déjà à porter au marché trois cent mille balles de coton, une moitié desquelles paie une piastre extra à cause des difficultés de transport, sans compter le coût extra du transport d'autres articles, doit être amélioré le plus convenablement possible.

J'aurais voulu faire usage de l'appareil à explosion sous-marine de Messrs. Maillefort et Raslorff et obtenir d'eux leur avis et la manière de m'en servir, pour enlever les carcasses de quelques bateaux qui se trouvent dans les chenals de nos cours d'eau; et aussi faire une expérience avec de la poudre sur quelques radeaux et chicots; par exemple, sur des brleles semblables à celles qui se forment dans la Sorrell, et sur les chicots qui gènent beaucoup la navigation des lacs des Attakapas.

Je ne crois pas que je puisse légalement obtenir les services de ces messieurs sans un acte de la Législature, lequel, je pense, sera décrété le plus tôt possible. Leur brevet ne s'étend pas à l'usage de la poudre pour faire l'expérience que je propose; mais comme ils l'ont employée souvent, ils ont sans doute acquis une expérience qui serait d'une grande utilité pour celui qui voudrait commencer à en faire usage.

Je suis heureux de vous informer que ces messieurs ont promis de se conformer à mes souhaits et de m'aider autant qu'il leur sera possible. Ils doivent bientôt me faire savoir ce que doivent coûter quelques unes des expériences dont il est question plus haut; ce qui me permettra de demander une allocation spéciale pour cet objet.

D'après ce que l'on dit du grand travail d'améliorations exécuté par Mr Maillefort dans Hell Gate, près de New York, et d'après les observations que j'ai faites aux chûtes d'Alexandrie, où ces messieurs sont occupés, je n'ai aucun doute que le mode d'explosion de Mr Maillefort serait d'une grande utilité dans nos cours d'eau, et qu'il serait de l'intérêt de l'Etat d'employer un agent si puissant pour enlever les carcasses de bateaux, les brelles, &c. qui se trouvent si souvent dans nos rivières et bayous navigables.

Bien que j'aie besoin de votre indulgence pour n'avoir pas faits tous les relevés que j'avais ordre de faire l'année dernière, je dirai que la surveillance de la construction de trois bateaux en même temps et les changements que j'ai été obligé de faire dans la forme des nouvelles machines pour les rendre plus convenables, ont pris presque tout mon temps.

Jusqu'à présent, nos machines ont été trop faibles pour exécuter les travaux pour lesquels elles ont été construites; ce qui a été cause d'une grande perte de temps et de la non-réussite de nos travaux.

Depuis plusieurs années, les différents ingénieurs d'Etat ont conseillé d'augmenter le nombre de nègres employés aux améliorations intérieures. On ne l'a pas fait peut-être parce que les finances de l'Etat ne le permettaient pas; mais la raison, je crois, (et c'est la plus probable) est que le public pense que les nègres appartenant à l'Etat ne remplissent pas leurs devoirs. Cette opinion, en général, est erronnée, bien que dans certaines occasions elle ait été justifiée.

Voici à peu près les faits sur lesquels cette opinion est basée:

1o. Il y a plusieurs années, quelques aspirants aux faveurs publiques, afin d'assurer leur élection, promirent de faire exécuter les travaux publics sur tels points particuliers dans leur voisinage, ignorant complètement les effets qui devaient résulter de ces travaux; d'autres, mûs par les sentiments les plus purs, voyant la nécessité des travaux dans leur voisinage, promirent aussi de faire exécuter ces travaux. Aussi la Législature, depuis 1847 jusqu'à cette date inclusivement, a-t-elle décrété 132 actes à cet effet, que j'ai été obligé de consulter dans le cours de mes travaux officiels.

Quelquefois chacun de ces messieurs demandait des améliorations dans plusieurs cours d'eau différents; de sorte qu'un seul d'entre eux faisait ordonner le trajet de mille milles au moins pour améliorer ces cours d'eau.

Digitized by Google

Je vous réfère à un seul de ces actes passé en 1847 sous le No. 268, qui est trop long pour le copier ici. L'étendue qu'il a fallu parcourir dans ces cours d'eau pour les rendre navigables conformément à ces divers actes et à d'autres passés précédemment, n'est pas moins de 5000 milles. Et cependant nous ne pouvions parcourir qu'un demi-mille par jour là où il fallait couper les arbres dans les bayous et sur leurs rives; en outre de ce, il nous a fallu nettoyer ces cours d'eau, faire des digues, des ponts et autres travaux ordonnés.

Si pour chaque dix milles de travail nous avions un bon travailleur au lieu d'un pour chaque 50 milles, nous aurions à notre disposition 500 hommes; alors nous pourrions exécuter toutes les améliorations nécessaires dans très peu de temps.

Dans une conversation que j'eus sur ce sujet avec l'un de nos surintendants les plus capables, je lui demandai combien il fallait de temps pour exécuter les travaux déjà ordonnés. Il me répondit: que si le nombre d'ouvriers était augmenté du double, et qu'ils fussent forcés de bien travailler pendant leur vie durante, que peut-être alors, ils les achèveraient. Celui qui voudrait examiner ce sujet verrait de suite qu'avec le nombre d'ouvriers que nous avons sous nos ordres, nous ne pouvons achever, dans une année, tous les travaux ordonnés; de là ce mécontentement. Si ces plaintes viennent seulement de ceux qui ont contribué à passer ces lois, leur nombre serait encore assez grand pour rendre compte du mécontentement général.

Presque tous ceux qui obtiennent le décret d'une loi pour améliorer la navigation d'un cours d'eau près de chez eux, pensent que ce cours d'eau est beaucoup plus important qu'un autre; et comme la loi en ordonne l'amélioration, ils se plaignent si les travaux ne sont pas exécutés; mais ils oublient que d'autres ont les mêmes raisons qu'eux de se plaindre, et que nos ressources étant fort limitées nous ne pouvons satisfaire que quelques uns en raison du grand nombre.

Les habitans de chaque section veulent l'exécution des travaux particuliers dans leur section. Tous les habitans de l'Etat veulent l'exécution des travaux en entier. Qu'on ne s'étonne pas alors que presque tous soient mécontents.

2o. Après qu'on a enlevé les chicots et les radeaux dans un bayou, comme je l'ai déjà dit, il ne reste plus aucune trace des travaux exécutés.

3o. Nos ouvriers sont si peu nombreux, que nous ne pouvons les diviser dans chacune des sections de l'Etat; en conséquence, nous perdons un temps considérable en les faisant voyager d'une section à une au

4o. Les passagers à bord des bateaux passent souvent dans les cours d'eau où sont stationnés les bateaux de l'Etat, étant gés de voyager pour leurs affaires le samedi après-midi, le dimanche et le jour de N. oublient que ces jours là sont des jours riés; et voyant nos ouvriers inoccupés, plaignent que les travaux ne s'exécutent pas. Les journaux s'en emparent et soulèvent contre nous l'opinion publique au de s'informer pourquoi nos ouvriers sont inoccupés.

On s'est plaint aussi que les bateaux restaient amarrés au rivage, ne faisant rien en apparence, tandis que, de fait, les ouvriers sont tous très occupés, ou avec leurs canots dans les cours d'eau avoisinants, ou bien sur les bords où les bateaux ne peuvent pas passer.

Durant la saison des eaux basses, il est très souvent obligé de laisser le bateau dans des cours d'eau où il puisse flotter, tandis que les ouvriers vont, avec leurs canots, camper à une grande distance de là.

Sans doute, il a existé et il existe encore jours des sujets de mécontentement par rapport à la conduite des ouvriers; mais je crois, ne rend pas compte du mécontentement qu'on a manifesté au sujet des travaux en général.

Pour ma satisfaction je demande à votre honorable corps de faire examiner par un comité des améliorations intérieures la conduite des travaux de ce département durant l'année dernière, et je le réfère aux habitans des bayous Black, Barbière, Labonne, Corney, des bords de la Rivière Rouge, du lac Bistineau, et aux environs du chemin planchéié, et à tous ceux des autres parties de l'Etat où l'on peut voir que nos ouvriers ont fait; et si, dans divers endroits, ils ont fait leur devoir, pourquoi ne l'auraient-ils pas fait là où il n'y a plus aucune trace de leurs travaux? Je commanderai d'augmenter le nombre des ouvriers; et afin que chaque partie de l'Etat reçoive son contingent des travaux publics, construisons des chemins là où il n'y a pas de cours d'eau à améliorer. Il a été prouvé dans la construction du chemin planchéié, que les nègres de l'Etat peuvent exécuter les travaux les plus difficiles.

L'augmentation dans la valeur des terres dans la partie inférieure de l'Etat, occasionnée par la construction de ces chemins, est une preuve qu'on gagnerait à en construire d'autres.

Les terres qui se trouvent le long de la ligne du chemin de Bâton-Rouge et de Grosse-Tête, sont déjà vendues, et il en serait de même des autres terres, si on faisait

Digitized by Google

emin à chaque dix milles de latitude sur bords du Mississipi.

Si les travaux publics doivent être conti-ués, mon opinion est qu'on ne doit employer e des nègres pour les exécuter. Les dénses seraient de moitié moindres que celles casionnées par le travail des blancs, (et je is prêt à le prouver par le registre de ce ıreau), et chacun sait que les noirs sont ›ins sujets que les blancs aux intempéries notre climat. Les travaux exécutés l'ane dernière, sans compter ceux exécutés années précédentes, sont une preuve
faveur de ce que j'avance.

L'année dernière, dans le moment même l'épidémie, par ses ravages, empêchait xécution des travaux par les blancs, les gres travaillaient avec autant d'énergie ıe s'il n'existait aucune maladie dans le ys. Il n'y a pas eu de mortalité parmi x, à l'exception de quelques uns qui sont orts de maladies inhérentes à la vieillesse, en qu'ils fussent exposés aux influences de pidémie qui existait à Trenton sur le baıu Barthélemy, et dans la Rivière Rouge, r les rives de laquelle la fièvre faisait aunt de ravages parmi la population blanche ıe dans aucune partie de l'Etat.

Les dépenses de ce département, à partir

54, sont comme suit :

On verra d'après ce compte que nos dépenses ordinaires durant l'année dernière sont de $ 7,025.31 moins que les allocations ordinaires. J'ai fait mon possible pour faire exécuter les travaux avec la plus grande économie; et si nos dépenses n'ont pas été aussi fortes l'année dernière qu'elles l'ont été les années précédentes, cela vient de ce que nous n'avons employé qu'un seul bateau vers la fin de l'année.

Celui qui a la moindre idée de ce que coûte le service des bateaux à vapeur, doit savoir que leurs dépenses sont très fortes, surtout lorsqu'ils sont employés au service de l'Etat; chacune de leurs membrures, chaque partie de leur machine étant forcées constamment, ne peuvent que s'user très vite.

Les dépenses pour les cordages, les poulies, les palans &c. sont trés grandes; et comme nous aurons quatre bateaux au service de l'Etat cette année, je vous conseillerais de mettre la somme ordinaire à la disposition de ce Bureau pour l'année courante.

Le tout vous est respectueusement soumis.

G. W. MORSE,
Ingénieur de l'Etat.

SURINTENDANT DE L'EDUCATION PUBLIQUE.

BATON ROUGE, JANVIER, 1854.

Aux membres de l'Assemblée Générale de l'Etat de la Louisiane.

Par la 10me section d'un acte intitulé: "Acte pour réorganiser les écoles publiques gratuites dans l'Etat de la Louisiane," approuvé le 28 avril 1853, est décrété, "Que le Surintendant de l'Education Publique de l'Etat devra préparer et soumettre à chaque Assemblée Générale, dans la première semaine de sa session, un rapport sur la situation des écoles publiques gratuites de l'Etat, contenant l'état des comptes et des dépenses desdites écoles, les suggestions pour l'administration des fonds des écoles gratuites de l'Etat, le nombre d'enfants, des écoles, le temps pendant lequel les écoles sont enseignées dans chaque paroisse, le nombre d'élèves qui y assistent, les sommes payées pour l'enseignement, et les différentes sources d'où proviennent les fonds des écoles; il donnera aussi le nombre de maisons d'école, les sommes dépensées année par année, pour la construction desdites maisons d'école. Il donnera généralement toutes informations relatives à la manière que fonctionne le système et qui pourront être nécessaires. Il s'enquerra annuellement, par l'intermédiaire des divers avocats de district, de la condition des sections de terre des écoles, et instituera les procédures légales et nécessaires, afin de recouvrer les terres qui auront été illégalement prises par des individus, ou les réclamations résultant de la vente des terres des écoles, qui pourront être prétérées; et il sera du devoir desdits avocats de district de conduire lesdits procès. Et lorsque les dites réclamations seront satisfaites, les sommes qui en proviendront seront déposées dans le trésor de l'Etat, et les intérêts sur ces sommes seront portés au crédit du district auquel ils appartiendront.

Sous le titre de "l'état de la condition des écoles publiques gratuites de l'Etat," peut être inclus le nombre d'écoles, le temps pendant lequel les écoles ont enseignées dans chaque paroisse, le nombre d'élèves qui y assistent, le montant payé pour leur enseignement, le nombre de maisons d'école et le montant des sommes dépensées d'année en année pour leurs constructions.

Des circonstances sont survenues pendant la saison dernière, qui ont rendu impossible d'obtenir des informations positives sur l'état des écoles publiques dans les campagnes.

Les changements fréquents et radicaux des lois qui régissent le système d'école publique, ont occasionné presque partout de grands inconvénients, et la loi de 1852 a semé dans tout le système une grande confusion en abolissant la place du seul agent responsable duquel on pouvait obtenir les informations les plus positives.

J'ai reçu des différents districts quelques rapports très imparfaits, qui ne sont pas suffisants, ni par leur nombre ni par leur importance, pour arriver à aucun résultat.

J'ai reçu jusqu'au 1er janvier, une douzaine ou environ de rapports des différents trésoriers de paroisse, qui sont ci-annexés.

La loi de 1853, qui fait de la place de trésorier de paroisse, le payeur des fonds des écoles appartenant à chaque paroisse, n'a été publiée que vers la fin du mois de juin dernier, et la 12me section pourvoit "qu'aucune somme d'argent ne sera payée à cet officier, soit par le Surintendant d'Etat ou par le Collecteur des taxes, jusqu'à ce qu'il soit notifié par le Président du Jury de Police, que chaque trésorier a fourni un cautionnement ainsi qu'il est pourvu par la loi.

Une circulaire fut immédiatement préparée et transmise, conjointement aux dispositions de la 12me section susdite, démontrant le nombre d'enfants, avec l'âge requis, dans chaque paroisse, et le montant du cautionnement que doit fournir le trésorier.

L'irrégularité et le retard de la poste, les jurys de police ne s'étant assemblés qu'à l'époque fixée pour leur réunion spéciale, et l'absence de l'Etat de plusieurs des trésoriers, et l'épidémie qui a existé, sont les causes qui ont empêché de se conformer à l'exigence de la loi.

Cependant j'ai été avisé qu'à l'exception de quatre paroisses de l'Etat, les trésoriers avaient fourni leurs cautionnements et étaient entrés en fonctions; et de la connaissance personnelle que j'ai du caractère et des capacités de plus de la moitié de ceux qui ont accepté cet emploi, je crois voir une sûre garantie qu'ils accompliront leurs devoirs avec zèle.

Les retours des Assesseurs de 39 paroisses ont été reçus, lesquels, dans leur ensemble, montrent le nombre des enfants blancs de l'âge de six à seize ans, est de 51,987; à ceci, si nous ajoutons les retours fournis par les Assesseurs en 1851, pour les paroisses dont les retours n'ont pas été reçus, le nombre total des enfants à instruire dans l'Etat serait de 60,274, montrant un accroissement de 2,750, sur l'assessement de 1851.

Les trésoriers de paroisse, bien que leurs rapports ne soient pas officiels, m'informent que dans presque toute l'année, il est à présumer par là qu'au moins 35 à 40,000 enfants assistent à nos écoles pendant une partie de l'année

Dans tous les cas, il n'y a que peu de districts de l'Etat, du nombre de 700 à 800 qui n'ont pas tiré leur proportion dans la dernière répartition.

L'état des comptes et des dépenses des fonds des écoles vous apparaîtra plus amplement en vous référant à l'état ci-annexé.

Le montant du fonds des écoles publiques payé dans le trésor par Mr. Roberts Carter Nicolas, ex-Surintendant des Ecoles Publiques de l'Etat, conformément à l'acte No. 2 des Actes de 1853, ainsi qu'il appert du rapport de l'Auditeur, se monte à la somme de $80,413 97.

De ce montant, il faut déduire la somme de $51,108 21, qui a été payée aux professeurs dans les divers districts de l'Etat, jusqu'au 30 du mois de juin 1853, ce qui laisse une balance de la somme de $29,405 76, de laquelle la somme de $22,313 42 cts a depuis été payée sur le mandat de deux trésoriers de paroisse, laissant au 2 du mois de janvier 1854, une balance de la somme de $6,092 34.

La somme de $51,087 19 a été payée dans le trésor par les surintendants de paroisse, d'après les dispositions des actes Nos. 310 et 311 de la loi de 1852, laquelle montant la somme de $27,202 16 a été payée aux professeurs ainsi qu'il est dit ci-dessus, de même que la somme de 31,246 94.

Le montant total réparti pendant les trimestres expirant le 31 mars, 30 juin, 30 septembre et 31 décembre 1853, est ainsi qu'il suit, savoir :

Le 31 mars 1853		$59,917 18
Le 30 juin	"	50,213 98
Le 30 septembre 1853		63,067 76
Le 31 décembre	"	63,067 76
Total		$236,256 68

Du montant de la répartition de mars, la somme de $29,908 15 a été payé aux professeurs avant le 30 juin 1853, et la somme de $20,649 21 a été payée aux trésoriers de paroisse, laissant une balance de la somme de $9,349 82

Du montant de la répartition de juin, la somme de $43,376 50 a été payée aux trésoriers de paroisse, laissant une balance de la somme de $6,827 48 cts.

Du montant de la répartition de septembre, la somme de $41,099 40 a été payée aux trésoriers de paroisse.

Du montant de la répartition de décembre, la somme de $32,309 32 a été payée, et sur le montant de la répartition du 31 mars 1854, la somme de $8,447 61 a été payée par les collecteurs de taxes d'Etat aux trésoriers de paroisse.

Le montant total des sommes réparties et dues aux paroisses et aux districts de l'Etat, en y incluant la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, Jefferson, etc., ainsi qu'il apparaîtra, est de la somme de $375,365 49 cts.

Le montant retourné par le ci-devant Surintendant de l'Etat et les divers surintendants de paroisse, est compris dans le montant ci-dessus.

Le montant total payé par le Surintendant actuel aux divers trésoriers de paroisse, y compris les paiements faits par les collecteurs de taxes d'Etat pour l'usage et l'entretien des écoles, est de la somme de $278,730 48.

L'acte No. 8 des Actes de 1853, pourvoit que les différentes sommes d'argent qui ont été, ou seront payées du trésor de l'Etat, par les différents surintendants de paroisse, conformément aux dispositions des actes approuvés en mars 1852, seront appropriées à l'usage des écoles publiques gratuites dans les paroisses qui sont ou pourront être respectivement créditées de ces sommes, etc. En faisant l'état général des sommes dues et non payées aux différentes paroisses, il paraît que la somme de $9,972 95 a été payée par l'ex-Surintendant, de sommes survenues antérieurement à l'adoption de l'acte ci-dessus relaté, sous l'impression qu'une nouvelle répartition n'était pas nécessaire.

L'on verra que quelques-uns des collecteurs de taxes ont payé les répartitions trimestrielles jusqu'au 31 mars 1854. Les sections 8 et 15 sont en opposition et contradiction avec leurs mesures.

La section 8 impose au Surintendant de l'Etat l'obligation du dernier jour du mois de juin 1853, et par la suite tous les trois mois, de faire la répartition des fonds qui pourront être payés au trésor de l'Etat, au crédit des écoles gratuites, entre les différentes paroisses de l'Etat, etc. Et la section 15 pourvoit à ce que les sommes dues à chacune des paroisses de l'Etat sur la collecte annuelle de la taxe des écoles, seront payées par trimestre au trésorier de paroisse, par le collecteur des taxes d'Etat.

Le montant des fonds payés au trésor, au crédit du fonds des écoles, le dernier jour du mois de juin 1853, était de la somme de $50,266, laquelle appropriée conformément à la section 8; mais comme il n'y avait pas de trésorier de paroisse nommé, il fut impossible de faire connaître le montant des sommes appropriées.

Les collecteurs des taxes ne auraient comment procéder en conformité avec la section 15 de l'acte de 1853. La 5me section de l'acte No. 311 des Actes de 1852, impose aux divers collecteurs de taxes l'obligation de faire leurs règlements avec le trésor, le ou avant le premier jour de décembre, dans le cas que lesdits collecteurs manqueraient à faire lesdits règlements, ils seraient considérés concussionnaires et poursuivis en conséquence. En retiennent le montant dû aux paroisses, ils devraient être déclarés concussionnaires, et s'ils se conformaient à la section 5 de l'acte de 1852, ils ne peuvent pas obéir à l'injonction contenue dans la 15e section de l'acte de 1853. Dans ce dilemme, quelques collecteurs ont payé aux trésoriers le montant des trois derniers trimestres, tandis que le plus grand nombre ont payé leurs taxes en plein au trésor de l'Etat, d'après les dispositions de la 5me section de l'acte de 1852.

La Législature verra la nécessité d'amender ou de rapporter la 15me section de l'acte de 1853.

Une partie de la 16me section de l'acte de 1853 a occasionné beaucoup de difficultés sans cesse qu'elle avait pour but d'être utile.

Le mode d'émettre des certificats pour les balances dues sur les mandats des professeurs, n'aurait jamais dû être adopté par le Surintendant de l'Etat, et devrait être hardiment évité par les trésoriers de paroisse. Aucune minute de ces certificats n'a été tenue par mon prédécesseur, et nécessairement la notice n'a pu être donnée. Quelques-uns des certificats qui avaient été signés par ses commis, n'ont pas été reconnus par l'Auditeur.

Pour remédier à cet état de choses, en tant que faire se pourrait, j'ai avisé aux propriétaires de ces certificats de les envoyer à ce bureau, afin que les signatures soient vérifiées.

Les trésoriers ont été informés de l'enregistrement de ces certificats qui n'avaient pas été payés aussitôt que j'ai été informé qu'ils avaient été [illegible] caution.

La requisition des plans pour l'amélioration de l'administration des fonds des écoles publiques gratuites, est un objet de grand intérêt à tout égard de l'Etat.

Les honorables membres de la Législature, sortant du sein du peuple, sont les meilleurs juges des nécessités de leurs constituants sur ce sujet.

Ma propre impression est que trop de plans ont été adoptés pour améliorer le système d'écoles publiques gratuites.

Si la devise "Laissez-nous seuls" eût été plus strictement adhérée, dès le principe de l'organisation du système, les écoles dans les campagnes seraient dans un état aussi florissant que le sont celles des 1er, 2me et 4me districts de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, qui, sous le rapport de la discipline, de l'ordre et de la littérature, ne peuvent être surpassées par des institutions semblables dans cet

a nomination de trésoriers de paroisse comme ositaires du fonds des écoles, est un retour par-à l'emploi primitif de surintendant de paroisse.
ne une plus forte compensation pour ses services, mentez les devoirs de cet officier comme sur-lant, et vous aurez la place de surintendant de isse rétablie, sans créer de changements radix et soudains.

Une surintendance paroissiale et d'Etat pour les les est ce qui est demandé. Il devrait exister s chaque paroisse, un bureau d'examinateurs, nombre de tiers ou plus, les devoirs desquels sent d'examiner les candidats aux places de pro-eurs. Dans quelques districts, les directeurs t entièrement incapables de remplir ce devoir, la simple raison qu'ils ne peuvent ni lire ni ire. En se référant aux mandats des profes-rs déposés en ce bureau, il appert que dans une oisse douze directeurs ont fait leurs marques ;
s deux ou trois districts, sur trois directeurs, x ont fait leurs marques. Ceci est vraiment un déplorable et duquel des professeurs sans prines n'ont pas manqué à tourner à leurs propices ntages. Sur trois directeurs, deux devraient oir lire et écrire.

La section qui énumère les devoirs du Surin dant de l'Etat, décrète qu'il sera de son devoir s'enquérir annuellement, par l'entremise des dis Avocats de Districts, de la situation des terres cordées aux écoles, et d'instituer telles procées nécessaires pour le recouvrement des récla tions arriérées, provenant de la vente des terres écoles, et il sera du devoir desdits Avocats de strict d'en faire les poursuites.

Les billets fournis par les acquéreurs des sections ze des terres publiques, sont généralement poncllement payés, et s'ils ne sont pas payés à échéace, ils sont payés à une époque reculée avec un érêt pour le délai.

La situation actuelle des terres affectées aux oles, m'est presque inconnue. Je me suis infor-i de leur nombre et de leur localité près des divers ocats de District, et j'ai eu pour toute réponse ils ignoraient et qu'ils n'avaient aucun moyen savoir lesquelles des terres affectées aux écoles, aient vendues ou non, dans leurs districts respec-
s.

Il appartient à l'Assemblée Générale de s'enquér immédiatement des terres affectées aux écoles.
La quantité de terre allouée à l'usage des écoles bliques de l'Etat de la Louisiane, par le Congrès, tribuée par districts (townships), se montait, en 46, à 770,000 acres ; une grande partie du choix ces terres est réclamée comme terres privées, dis que plus de la moitié des terres ainsi appro-ées, sont des marais, des ravins et des marécages pénétrables.

La Législature, en 1847, a passé une série de rélutions requérant nos Sénateurs et nos Reprétants au Congrès, de passer telle loi qui pourrait nuer à l'Etat de la Louisiane une quantité de 0 acres de terre d'école, propre à la culture, dans limites de l'Etat, au lieu des sections seize qui nt submergées et propres à rien, ou au lieu de ces ctions seize qui sont affectées à d'autres usages, qui pourraient être prises de toutes terres dans limites de l'Etat, qui ne seraient pas vendues affectées à d'autres usages, sujettes à être enées à la date dudit choix, lorsqu'il y aurait empê ement légal.

Subséquemment à l'adoption de ces résolutions, ieurs choix ont été faits dans le district du Ouachita pour remplacer les sections (seize) primitives où il y avait intervention légale, et ces choix furent approuvés.

Aucun choix n'a été fait dans aucuns des autres districts.

Le Register, dans son rapport à la Législature, en 1850, dit que la grande quantité des terres dues aux Townships (districts), se trouve dans les districts sud-est, sud-ouest et Greensburg, lesquelles paraissent avoir été pitoyablement négligées. Les choix ont été faits par les Registers, mais par quelques causes ou autres, ils n'ont jamais été approu-vés, et les terres choisies ont été prises par les acquéreurs aux noms desquels des patentes ont été émises.

Il serait ni difficile ni dispendieux d'employer un ingénieur ou autre officier pour prendre les listes préparées par M Kerr, en 1850, et de classifier les sections de manière à montrer à vue d'œil la situation et l'air de vent des terres dans les limites de chaque paroisse. Cette classification servirait aussi à faciliter la vente des terres ainsi qu'il est ordonné par la 4me section de l'acte pour la réorganisation des écoles publiques gratuites.

Si les terres affectées aux ecoles eussent été données à l'Etat, au lieu des townships (districts), le produit des ventes en aurait été plus avantageuse et l'organisation du système plus effective que la présente. Ainsi qu'il est prouvé, la disposition de ces terres a été très favorable, et à moins d'une législation plus sage et plus efficace, ce qui était fait dans un but généreux et libéral, serait, pour un long espace de temps, de peu de valeur au système des écoles publiques.

Par le rapport de l'Auditeur des Comptes Publics, le fonds capital des écoles publiques gratuites, tant en capital qu'en intérêts, se montent, jusqu'au 1er janvier 1853, à la somme de $125,127 47. Depuis cette époque, le produit des ventes des sections seize s'est monté à la somme de $19,022 35. Si nous ajoutons à cela l'intérêt sur le fonds, savoir :
sept mille cinq cents piastres ou environ, avec l'intérêt qui a accru pendant l'année 1853 sur le fonds des terres des Etats-Unis, en supposant qu'il soit le même que celui rapporté en 1852, savoir : la somme de $28,795 14, le montant en capital et en intérêt du fonds des écoles publiques, se monterait, au 1er janvier 1854, à une somme au delà de $180,000. Dans cette somme, le produit des successions vacantes et des amendes n'est pas compris.

Le rapport de l'Auditeur démontre plus exactement la condition de ces fonds. N'ayant pas ces informations, ce qui précède n'est qu'une estimation approximative.

L'acte No. 43 des Actes de 1853, impose au Surintendant de l'Education Publique de l'Etat, le devoir de notifier aux divers Avocats de District les noms des Surintendants de Paroisse qui n'avaient pas réglé et payé dans le trésor de l'Etat, le mon-tant dû par eux, conformément aux dispositions des actes Nos. 310 et 311, des Actes de l'année 1852.
D'après les dispositions de l'acte, une liste des noms des Surintendants qui ne s'étaient pas conformés à l'acte No. 311, de l'année 1852, ainsi que le mon-tant qu'ils ont respectivement reçu du fonds des écoles, a été obtenu du Trésorier de l'Etat ; et une circulaire ainsi qu'un état ont été envoyés aux
Avocats de District, comme le requiert la loi.

Il était nécessaire de leur envoyer un état du montant total reçu par eux, afin qu'ils puissent montrer leurs dépenses, autrement il aurait été de toute impossibilité au Trésorier de savoir le mon-tant dû à l'Etat des dépenses faites par eux. Plusieurs Surintendants de Paroisse ont réglé avec leurs successeurs, mais ne se sont pas conformés à l'acte No. 311 de l'année 1852 Ci-annexé se trouve l'état des noms des Surintendants et des sommes reçues par eux.

L'acte No. 72, intitulé, " Acte pour établir une Université," autorise et requiert le Surintendant de l'Education Publique d'acheter de Mme E. R. Wiliams un lot de terre près de la ville d'Alexandrie, dans la paroisse des Rapides, et contenant 438 acres de terre à un prix qui n'excèdera pas la somme de $3,190.

En obéissance des dispositions de la seconde section dudit acte, le Surintendant s'est rendu à la paroisse des Rapides, et le 1er d'Avril dernier, a fait l'acquisition de la terre ci-dessus décrite et au prix ci-dessus mentionné. Les Directeurs ont été nommés par le Gouverneur, conformément à la 4me section. Une appropriation de quinze mille piastres a été faite par la dernière Législature et a été tirée, ainsi que j'en suis informé par l'Auditeur. Des propositions ont été affichées pour des matériaux et pour la construction des bâtisses nécessaires, et je n'ai pas été informé dans quelle situation était l'Université, quant à son organisation.

Le montant du fonds de l'Université, ainsi qu'il appert du rapport de l'Auditeur fait l'année dernière, est de	$129,507 83
La vente des terres de l'Université, en 1853	2,052 82
Intérêt probable, étant le même que dans mon dernier rapport	5,665 84
Montant total	$137,226 29

Les appropriations au nombre de la somme de $18,190, ne sont pas inclues dans le calcul ci-dessus.

Le site de l'Université a été admirablement choisi. Le sol en est productif et les environs sont couverts d'une forêt de pins et de chênes.

Sur le côté de la colline où est destinée la bâtisse principale, coule avec abondance une eau pure, fraiche et limpide, qui s'unit au ruisseau au bas de la vallée.

Sous le rapport de la salubrité, il est à douter qu'un endroit plus propice eût pu être choisi dans tout l'Etat. Cette Université peut être auxiliaire à l'avancement de l'instruction publique et gratuite, en pourvoyant pour l'Etat ce qui manque, un corps de professeurs compétents, sur le plan de l'école normale qui, pour plusieurs années, a été d'un grand succès dans différents Etats.

L'objet et l'intention de l'école normale sont clairement définis dans la première section d'un acte pour l'établissement d'une Ecole Normale d'Etat dans l'Etat du Connecticut, approuvé le 22 juin 1849 : " Il sera établi, ainsi qu'il est par le présent pourvu, une Ecole ou Université Normale, pour discipliner les professeurs dans l'art d'instruction publique de cet Etat, le but de quelles Ecoles et Universités Normales ne sera pas d'enseigner aux professeurs les études maintenant requises par la loi, mais de recevoir tels professeurs qui seraient capables et les discipliner dans le mode d'enseignement et de conduite desdites Ecoles."

Dans quelques Etats les Ecoles Normales sont établies dans le seul but de discipliner les professeurs ; tandis que dans d'autres Etats, les départements sont exigés. Une classe ou département pourrait avec efficacité être organisé dans l'Université d'Etat, aussitôt qu'elle sera en opération.

Je suggèrerai aussi l'adoption d'un système d'Ecoles d'Union, dans tels bourgs ou districts où la population serait assez forte pour l'admettre. Les écoles à la Nouvelle-Orléans sont dirigées d'après ce système et sont divisées en écoles primaires, secondaires et supérieures. Un pareil système pourrait être adopté pour la ville du Baton Rouge et ailleurs, où il y a deux ou plusieurs districts contigus. Par un pareil ménagement, le temps des professeurs n'est pas divisé parmi un nombre de classes, mais est seulement limité à une ou deux auxquelles il peut mieux porter son attention.

L'école devrait être située dans un point central et divisée en plusieurs compartiments. Ce moyen, dit-on, est plus avantageux à une éducation parfaite, et moins dispendieux.

J'ai déjà fait allusion à deux défauts sérieux dans notre système d'école : de manquer d'une surintendance locale, générale et plus efficace, et sans laquelle le système ne peut être en harmonie à ses proportions

Une influence centrale, rigoureuse et vigilante dans le but d'assurer une prompte activité parmi les divers membres du système, et cette influence centrale doit être déployée par l'intermédiaire d'agents qui prendront un intérêt direct à aider le Surintendant dans l'accomplissement et l'amélioration du système.

Peut-être le plan suivant serait efficace. Que les membres du Juri de Police soient de leur d'office, Directeurs chacun pour leurs districts respectifs ; qu'ils rapportent au Trésorier, à cette séance, ou aussi souvent qu'ils le jugeront convenable, la condition de l'école ou des écoles de ces districts ; un extrait de leurs rapports pourrait être transmis au bureau du Surintendant d'Etat.

Trois ou cinq personnes compétentes pourraient être nommées par le Juri de Police pour former un bureau d'examinateurs, par lequel les professeurs pourraient être examinés et approuvé, et le Surintendant d'Etat pourrait être requis de visiter et inspecter autant d'écoles de l'Etat que lui permettrait son temps. Le Surintendant a souvent senti la nécessité d'avoir un moyen par lequel des communications générales pourraient être adressées aux diverses personnes qui ont rapport aux écoles publiques. La correspondance de bureau occupe plus de la moitié de son temps. Dans l'Etat de New York, l'article suivant est incorporé à la loi des écoles et pourrait avec avantage être adopté par nous: " Le Surintendant des écoles communes sera autorisé, d'année en année, à souscrire pour autant de copies de périodiques publiés mensuellement dans l'Etat, et qui sont exclusivement vouées à la cause de l'éducation, qui n'appartiennent à aucune secte ou parti quelconque, et qui seront suffisantes en nombre pour supplier une copie à chaque district d'écoles organisées sur l'Etat ; dans lesquelles périodiques les lois relatives aux écoles, passées par la présente ou par une Législature subséquente, les réglements généraux et les décisions du Surintendant, faites conformément à toute loi, seront gratuitement publiés.

Mon but dans ce rapport a été de me borner autant-qu'il m'a été possible, aux dispositions de la loi. Le travail de ce bureau sort graduellement de la confusion et de l'embarras mentionnés dans le rapport de mon prédécesseur. Peu de changements sont nécessaires pour rendre la loi efficace. La quinzième et la seizième sections devraient être rappelées, et quelques amendements devraient être faits.

Le système d'Ecoles Publiques gratuites est encore chez nous dans une condition chrysalide. S'il est nourri avec soin, il assumera indubitablement une forme plus belle, et fera la gloire et l'orgueil de l'Etat. Mon intention n'est pas d'appuyer sur la nécessité d'instruire la jeunesse de notre nous avons eu assez de théorie à ce sujet. Ce nécessaire, est l'expérience pratique et l'ac-is son rapport à la Législature, en 1850, cet e de lettre éminent, ce défenseur ardent de ation publique, le Professeur A. Dimitry, re- e avec force et avec vivacité : "Que le devoir tat est d'instruire ses enfants. Ce n'est pas -fait la loi de la nature, mais celle de la so- qui nous impose cette obligation. Et si les la société règlent les relations de pères et nts dans l'ordre domestique, elles doivent cer- nent diriger les destinées de cet enfant à social. Le Surintendant de l'Education que, tout en admettant la liberté de l'instruc- ans toute sa force, ose espérer qu'il n'avance mme un principe de moralité hétérodoxe, lors- uggère qu'aucun parent n'a le droit de laisser ifant grandir comme un membre inutile, sinon ant de la société ; et l'ignorance dans une blique, est la méchanceté dans sa forme la erfide—la méchanceté qui dérive du droit in- stable de participer aux affaires du gouverne- sans les informations nécessaires qui doivent ôler cette action à ses fins salutaires."

est la doctrine universellement admise par tout du républicanisme. "C'est un gouvernement républicain," dit Montesquieu dans son Esprit des Lois, "que tout le pouvoir de l'éducation est re- quis."

La crainte des gouvernements despotiques s'élève naturellemest d'elle-même parmi les menaces et les punitions ; l'honneur des monarchies est favorisé par les passions qui les flattent en retour ; mais la vertu est une renonciation d'elle-même qui est toujours ardue et pénible. Cette vertu est définie par l'amour des lois de notre pays.

C'est pourquoi tout dépend de l'établissement de cet amour dans notre République, et pour l'inspirer le but principal doit être l'éducation.

Vous pouvez augmenter vos champs de cannes et de coton, vous pouvez bâtir des palais magnifiques, établir des manufactures, construire de magnifiques palais flottans, dépenser des millions pour les chemins de fer, accumuler des fortunes illimitées, mais si vous négligez d'instruire le peuple, vous ne faites que préparer de plus riches butins pour quelque insolent et rusé Catilina, quelque Santa Anna ou Louis Napoléon, qui, par la suite, pourrait être salué comme un bienveillant libérateur de l'anarchie et de la confusion.

J. N. CARRIGAN,
Surintendant de l'Instruction Publique

RAPPORTS DES TRESORIERS DE PAROISSE.

HOMER, 22 Septembre 1853.

Monsieur,

Ci joint, je vous transmets le montant qui m'a été payé par le Collecteur de la Taxe d'Etat et provenant de la Taxe d'un Millième et de Capitation que vous trouverez ci inclue, et conformément aux instructions de votre lettre du 5 septembre, j'ai tiré une traite de $990 83, payable à l'ordre de Marhall & James, de la Nouvelle-Orléans, et qui, si elle est payée, l'argent sera remis, d'après votre tableau, à la maison Price & Clemmons, d'Homer.

Je desire vous informer que je ne suis pas préparé à vous donner un tableau général de la situation des Ecoles Publiques Gratuites de cette paroisse, n'ayant jamais encore eu un tableau exact du nombre des enfants dans chaque district, ni du montant de l'argent que chaque district a reçu des autorités précédentes, ce qui me laisse dans une position embarrassante de ce côté, et de plus, il m'est difficile de comprendre la dernière loi, ne l'ayant jamais vue que dans les journaux de l'Etat, et n'ayant point reçu dans la paroisse les Actes de la Législature. Ainsi je me trouve dans un grand besoin de vos instructions à ce sujet, jusqu'à ce que je reçoive la loi d'une manière plus explicite.

Je suis respectueusement, votre, &c.,

JAMES A MILLICAN,
Trésorier de Paroisse.

ETAT DE LA LOUISIANE,
Paroisse Claiborne.

Mr. J. N. Carrigan.

Mon cher Monsieur—Conformément aux exigences de la loi, je vous transmets un tableau du montant des taxes que j'ai reçu du Collecteur de la Taxe de l'Etat, pour la paroisse Claiborne, jusqu'au 2 septembre 1853.

Montant de la taxe de capitation,	$261 00
" " " d'un millième,	658 07

Le montant de la taxe de capitation est de deux cent soixante-et-une piastres, et celui de la taxe d'un pour mille, est de six cent cinquante-huit piastres et sept cents et demi, faisant un total de neuf cent dix-neuf piastres et sept cents et demi.

Donné sous ma signature officielle, à Homer, ce 15 septembre 1853. JAMES A. MILLICAN, Trésorier de la Paroisse Claiborne.

ETAT DE LA LOUISIANE.
Paroisse Caldwell, 15 décembre 1853.

J. N. Carrigan, Esq.

Mon cher Monsieur—Le montant des sommes reçues dans le trésor de cette paroisse au profit des Ecoles Publiques, est de $1,572 57

Des fonds généraux de l'Ecole,	639 21
Distribution du mois de mars,	463 07
Argent renvoyé,	55 02
Distribution du mois de juin,	414 27

De ces montants, j'ai payé au district

No. 1,	100 00
" " " " " No. 3,	75 00
" " " " " No. 8,	153 00

Le district No. 1 rapporte le nombre des écoles, pour le terme de six mois—une école.

Nombre d'enfants enseignés dans le district—32.

Nombre d'enfants demeurant hors du district et venant à l'école—4.

Nombre d'enfants n'y allant pas—inconnu.

Le district No. 3 rapporte une école, pour le terme de trois mois.

Nombre d'enfants enseignés—15.

" " ne suivant pas l'école—23.

Le district No. 9 rapporte une école, pour le terme de sept mois.

Les enfants suivant le cours desdites écoles, sont au nombre de 40.

Les enfants qui n'y vont pas—20.

Le district No. 8 rapporte deux écoles, la première pour un terme de trois mois, la seconde pour un terme de 53 jours.

Le nombre d'enfants suivant le cours desdites écoles est de 38

Le nombre d'enfants n'y allant pas est de 47.

Bien respectueusement, votre dévoué serviteur,

MARTIN HAGAREL.
Trésorier de Paroisse.

RAPPORT DU TRESORIER D'EST BATON ROUGE

MR. J. N. CARRIGAN :

Monsieur—Si ce rapport n'est pas fait conformément à la loi, la faute doit être supportée par l'apathie et la négligence que les Directeurs mettent dans l'accomplissement de leurs devoirs.

Je suis, monsieur, respectueusement,
FELIX WEBRE, Trésorier de la Paroisse.

PAROISSE DE LA POINTE COUPEE.

Au Surintendant de l'Instruction Publique, Bâton Rouge (Louisiane).

Monsieur—Conformément aux dispositions de la 25me section de l'acte pour la réorganisation des Ecoles Publiques Gratuites dans l'Etat de la Louisiane, approuvé le 28 avril 1853, j'ai l'honneur de vous adresser mon rapport annuel, ainsi que le requiert ladite section, lequel rapport comprend depuis l'époque que la loi est entrée en opération jusqu'à la date de ce jour.

Vous trouverez dans un tableau qui accompagne n rapport :

1o. Le montant des diverses sommes reçues par i, affectées à l'usage des Ecoles Publiques, et les rces dont elles proviennent.

2o. Les diverses sommes portées au crédit de aque district, ainsi que celles débitées à chaque trict et la balance en leur faveur.

3o. Le nombre total d'enfants compris dans les aites de chaque district, et le nombre d'enfants i assistent à chaque école.

4o. Le temps que chaque école a été ouverte.

Je vous envoie ci-inclus les rapports de divers recteurs.

Le Surintendant observra que le nombre des pports est un petit nombre, la 24me section ayant pas fait de ces rapports la condition sine qua non du paiement des mandats des professeurs, lusieurs districts ayant omis de rapporter. Ces missions m'ont placé dans l'impossibilité de vous onner les informations nécessaires relativement ux divers districts d'école—le nombre d'enfants ui vont à l'école, et le temps que lesdites écoles ont tenues.

Le Surintendant s'apercevra que beaucoup de districts n'ont fait aucun usage de la somme qui était portée à leur crédit ; dans quelques cas, par la raison qu'il n'y a pas d'école, et dans d'autre cas, parce qu'il n'a pas de directeurs ; et ce fait n'a pas été communiqué au Président du Jury de Police qui est autorisé à remplir de telles vacances.

J'ai l'honneur d'être, monsieur,
Votre obéissant serviteur, E. MAJOR,
Trésorier de Paroisse.

SPRINGFIELD, le 10 janvier 1854.

Mr. J. N. Carrigan.

Mon cher Monsieur—Ci-inclus vous trouverez mon rapport du fonds des écoles de notre paroisse, pour l'année 1853. Je regrette de ne pouvoir vous donner le nombre exact d'enfants, la négligence de la part de l'Assesseur, et l'indifférence de la part des directeurs et des professeurs, ont déjoué tous mes projets. Le système n'a pas jusqu'à présent bien opéré chez nous. L'éducation et les écoles publiques sont pour nous d'un intérêt vital. J'ose espérer dans mon prochain rapport de pouvoir vous donner des détails plus satisfaisants.

Je suis très respectueusement,
Votre obéissant serviteur,
D. B. CASAN, Trésorier de Paroisse.

P. S.—Vous trouverez ci-inclus mon reçu en votre faveur pour la somme de $269 90 ; veuillez m'envoyer ce montant, si c'est en votre pouvoir, par la prochaine poste.

PPORT

TRESORIER DE L'ETAT.

Son Excellence, P. O. HEBERT,

Gouverneur de l'Etat de la Louisiane.

Conformément à la sixième section d'un e de l'Assemblée Générale intitulé, "Acte ur établir et régler le département du ésor, approuvé le 26 janvier, 1847," j'ai onneur de vous transmettre ci joint un rap-rt donnant un état détaillé de la situation Trésor et ses opérations, pendant l'année ale finissant le 31 décembre, 1858.

lance dans le Trésor ce jour	$1,167,127 30
nds généraux - -	$647,363 75
xe de millième -	193,910 84
xe de capitation - -	27,392 47
nds des améliorations à l'intérieur	27,110 75
vées et desséchements	273,988 84
emins et levées -	12,360 05
	$1,162,127 30

Cet état, je le pense, est suffisamment déllé et n'exige pas de plus ample explican.

Je crois, néamoins, de mon devoir, d'ap-ler l'attention de la Législature sur certais affaires et réclamations qui ne sont pas entionnées au dit état.

Les municipalités de la ville de la Noulle Orléans devaient un montant consider-le à l'Etat, provenant d'intérêts sur les ns de l'Etat, émis en vertu de l'acte No.
de l'Assemblée Générale de cet Etat, prouvé en 1839. Ainsi que pour la difrence d'un pour cent en faveur de l'Etat, r l'intérêt stipulé, entre les bons donnés échange par les dites municipalités à Etat, que pour ceux émis par l'Etat en leur veur.

J'ai fait faire un réglement pour les avan-ces faites par l'Etat, et ils ont été alloués, avec six pour cent d'interêt à partir de la date des dites avances. Le montant ainsi collecté est de $11,070 09. Le 21 mai, 1853, des comptes ont été présentés aux commissaires de la dette consolidée de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans, pour le montant dû à l'Etat par chaque municipalité respectivement pour la différence de l'interêt d'un pour cent, ainsi qu'il est ci-dessus mentionné, s'élevant à la somme totale de $57,444 96. Jusqu'à présent ce montant n'a pas été payé par les municipalités, et je crois que quelques dispositions législatives devraient être passées à ce sujet.

Un de mes prédécesseurs à institué un procès contre les héritiers et les représentants légaux Poydras, pour les dix pour cent dû à l'Etat sur le montant de la succession. La cour inférieure à rendu un jugement en faveur de l'Etat pour un montant de près de $45,000; et j'ai des raisons de croire que ce jugement sera maintenu par la Cour Suprême, devant laquelle l'affaire est maintenant pendante.

Les successions de Germain Musson et de Martin Gordon doivent à l'Etat un montant d'à peu près $50,000, pour l'acquisition par eux faite à la vente du shérif en 1844, des chemins de fer de Nashville et du Golfe du Mexique; des mesures ont été prises l'automne dernière, aussi bien par moi que par l'avocat général pour collecter cette réclamation, mais jusqu'à présent nous n'avons pas réussi. Cependant en réponse à une lettre que j'ai dernièrement écrite à ce sujet à l'avocat général, il m'informe que ce réglement sera probablement fait sous peu.

Le tout vous est respectueusement soumis.

C. E. GRENEAUX,
Trésorier d'Etat.

BUREAU DES ADMINISTRATEURS.

: Honorables Membres du Sénat et de
: Chambre des Représentans de l'Etat
: Louisiane:

es Administrateurs de l'Hôpital de Cha- soumettent, respectueusement à votre rable corps, le tableau annuel suivant eurs affaires:

endant l'année dernière les soins chari- es de l'Hopital ont été donnés à 13,759, ades ou personnes impotentes; dans ce bre se trouvent 12,383 étrangers de sance, 1,306 natifs d'autres Etats de ion, 120 dont le lieu de naissance est nnu, et seulement 228 natifs de la Loui- e; pendant la même période le montant r le soutien de la dite institution s'est é à $54,534 68, les débours à $69,- 62, et le montant reçu en vertu de ération de la taxe, à $53,482 51; quoi- auparavant, chaque tableau annuel laissât énorme déficit contre l'Hopital, savoir: r l'année 1852, $11,001 94; pour l'an- 1851, $23,853 45; pour l'année 1850, 380 82. Nous sommes fort heureux vous dire que pendant l'année qui vient s'écouler (1853) ce grand déficit a été uit à zéro, l'aissant pour la première fois uis 1842 cette institution libre d'hypo- que ou de toute autre dette. Nul doute une grande partie de ce changement et élioration est dûe au système de fourni- es par contents pour subvenir aux besoins l'Hopital, système récemment adopté par Bureau des Administrateurs; ainsi qu'au e et à l'énergie recommendables du Tré- ier actuel qui tout en s'occupant consecien- usement des moyens de faire les rentrées revenu de l'Hopital jusqu'alors négligées, netait, l'orsqu'il en était requis, au prix plus avantageux, tels objets qui n'étaient s soumis à un contrat.

L'opinion des membres du Bureau est que changement favorable dans les affaires cales de l'Hopital aurait pu durer, et par moyen aurait exonéré l'Etat de toutes mandes ultérieures de son trésor et nos oyens en général d'une taxe équivalente; l'exception cependant des fonds néces- ires pour les réparations et l'entretien de propriété foncière.

En effet cette opinion est bâsée sur le changement fait par la Législature à sa dernière session, dans la taxe sur les passagers, qui sera suffisante pour payer toutes les dépenses, excepté celles mentionnées plus haut. On ne sait pas si d'après les suggestions de nos prédécesseurs, à l'égard de la taxe, l'Etat à pris les mesures nécessaires pour mettre sa légalité à l'abri de toute contestation de la part des parties qui la paient; s'il en est autrement, les membres du Bureau, recommandent fortement à l'attention de la Législature, ce sujet de la plus haute importance. Si cette ressource était matériellement diminuée ou que le droit de l'imposer et de la collecter fut discuté devant notre cour fédérale, cela affecterait sensiblement les ressources et moyens de l'Hopital et obligerait le Trésor de l'Etat à subvenir au montant de la perte occasionnée par cet évènement fortuit. Il est inutile d'insister plus long temps sur un sujet d'une importance aussi vitale pour les intérêts de l'Etat et de nos Représentants.

Relativement à ce sujet, vient en ligne droite une réflection sur laquelle nous désirons appeler toute votre attention; c'est-à-dire, que tout en passant des lois afin de conserver des ressources qui sont la base du soutien de l'Hopital, ne serait-il pas à propos d'établir un système de quarantaine, qui épargnerait, à notre ville ainsi qu'à l'Hopital, l'énorme dépense causée par les soins à donner à un grand nombre d'émigrants qui ne nous apportent qu'indigence et maladies, et qu'il nous faut encore enterrer à nos frais. Un établissement de cette nature, fondé par autorité de l'Etat dans un lieu éloigné de notre ville, sous la direction de personnes sages et éclairées, diminuerait la mortalité, déjà à charge à cette Institution et empêcherait l'introduction de certains symptômes de maladies, inconnus à nos habitants et dans notre climat.

Nous nous référons ici distinctement à la classe des fièvres connues sous le nom de fièvre typhoïde (dite ship fever) qui est considérablement introduite dans la ville et à l'Hôpital, chaque année et qui, comme un feu qui consume lentement, s'étend graduellement dans les cabanes et les pensions des pauvres émigrants—et de là naissent les maladies, la pauvreté, le veuvage, et les orphelins que le peuple et l'Etat doivent secourir. Nous croyons fortement qu'un système de quarantaine bien établi empêcherait tous les malheurs qui résultent de l'introduction de cette maladie dans notre communauté, ainsi que le prouvent toutes les corporations civilisées qu'aucune autre maladie ne peut être aussi facilement contrôlée que la fièvre typhoïde (ship fever) par un moyen aussi salutaire.

Sans placer dans la même catégorie la dernière épidémie dont les terribles ravages sont encore présents à notre mémoire, mais en considérant son origine et sa nature contagieuse tellement douteuses selon quelques médecins et selon un grand nombre de citoyens qui n'appartiennent pas à cette branche, cela seul doit provoquer une enquête rigoureuse et consciencieuse, lorsque le fait est connu qu'une maladie telle que la fièvre typhoïde (dite ship fever) ayant des propriétés contagieuses et dont l'introduction annuelle parmi nous est un fait averré peut être empêchée par de tels réglements, il est du devoir des plus hautes autorités du pays de prendre de suite telles mesures qui nous mettraient à l'abri des reproches amers que nous attire notre indifférence. Il est certain qu'un des plus hauts attributs d'un gouvernement est de pourvoir à la sécurité et à l'avancement de la salubrité publique et ce qui devient une obligation forcée de tous les gouvernements de quelque nature qu'ils soient, devient pour ainsi dire un devoir pour ceux qui représentent, dans leur essence et leur nature, le fait incontestable qu'ils dérivent de la volonté publique.

Tout en prêchant l'utilité d'une quarantaine, comme moyen de soulagement pour notre ville et pour l'Hopital, en fermant tout accès à certaines classes de maladies désignées, il convient de s'enquérir des moyens à employer pour que cette Institution puisse se soutenir par elle même ; ceci, nous sommes d'opinion, peut se faire facilement. La grande difficulté d'établir une quarantaine ferme et utile (et non rigide et exact dans ses demandes, ce qui serait pire qu'utile,) est la dépense à laquelle cela entraînera. L'achat et la préparation d'endroits convenables et la construction à y faire de bâtisses nécessaires pour la commodité des malades, nécessiteront d'abord un fort débours. Ceci une fois fait, et l'Etat devenant propriétaire du terrain et des dépendances, la manière d'en faire, jusqu'à un certain point, si ce n'est en totalité, une institution qui puisse se soutenir par elle-même, n'est ni difficile, ni impraticable.

Par exemple, comme les quarantaines sont désignées pour opérer contre les émigrants malades et les navires empestés, que l'Etat exige qu'ils paient sur les lieux mêmes de la quarantaine à un officier désigné par la loi, le montant de la taxe dûe et exigible sur de tels bâtiments et passagers. Cette somme, nous pensons, sera, à la fin de l'année, suffisante pour défrayer les dépenses courantes des officiers et des personnes employées au maintien des réglements de l'établissement. Si l'expérience des cinq dernières années peut fournir matière à former une opinion, elle doit être décisive dans cette affaire ; d'autant plus que pendant toute cette période un cinquième des passagers émigrants qui sont arrivés dans notre port étaient de vrais sujets pour être soumis aux réglements de la quarantaine.

Pour démontrer que cette opinion n'est ni exagérée ni malicieuse qu'on se réfère au tableau actuel et aux anciens rapports depuis les années 1849 et 1853 inclusivement par lesquels on verra que la récette moyenne provenant de la taxe sur passagers pendant le dit espace de cinq ans, s'élève à $52,132 58, de laquelle, en déduisant un cinquième pour malades ou passagers invalides, nombre considéré comme sujet à subir la quarantaine, rapporterait un revenu actuel de $10,426 50, somme jugée approximativement correcte et nécessaire pour le maintien de l'Institution. Cette somme, il est vrai, diminuera celle qui rentre dans le trésor de l'Hopital de Charité, mais il faut se rappeler que s'il existe une diminution, il y aura une compensation par le nombre de ceux qui voudraient y entrer comme malades et en devenir les hôtes. De cette manière vous éloignerez de l'Hopital et par conséquent de la ville un grand nombre de malades infectés de maladies contagieuses et vous vous épargnerez la peine de les soigner, les entretenir et même les enterrer, ce qui coûte à la ville un soin immense et une dépense additionnelle.

Si c'était ici la place pour de pareils détails, on pourrait démontrer le chiffre en main que l'introduction dans la ville d'une cargaison d'émigrants invalides coûtera plus à la communauté que dix bâtiments chargés de dix fois plus de passagers vigoureux et en bonne santé. Mais quoiqu'il en soit, il est évident qu'au bout du compte, l'Hopital ne perdra rien en éloignant de son sein l'émigrant malade, même en déduisant l'équivalent pour son entretien ailleurs, du montant de ce qu'il est requis de payer d'après nos lois pour prix de notre hospitalité. Il serait certainement indifférent que ces simples soins fussent rendus ici ou ailleurs tandis que la dépense et l'avantage d'une tele esure serait pleinement justifiés au point vue de la nécessité et de l'intérêt person-el.

D'après le rapport du chirurgien de l'Hotal, il appert qu'outre les malades qui sont ellement les sujets de votre charité, l'Initution à sur les bras le soutien de deux nts pensionnaires ou pauvres infirmes, qui ns aucuns moyens par eux-mêmes et pri-és d'asiles convenables pour une classe ssi indigente, n'ont d'autre alternative que maison de travail et l'Hopital. Leur adission est la source d'une dépense considéable, et souvent du renvoi des plus obstinés
'entre eux, afin de servir d'exemple pour maintien de l'ordre et la discipline de établissement. Ce fait est à la connaisance du Bureau actuel, qui s'est vu forcé ar un sentiment de pitié et de commisséraion d'admettre de nouveau les délinquents vec la conviction que le sentiment de l'huanité était plus fort que l'ingratitude qui e manifestait, par fois, parmi eux. Cepen-ant le fait d'une si grande quantité de paures dépendant annuellement sur les soins e notre hopital, est tellement flagrant qu'il e peut pas être passé sous silence. D'après e que nous venons de dire le nombre des endiants et des pauvres est plus grand u'on ne peut se l'imaginer, et cependant usqu'à présent, aucun effort couronné de uccès n'a été fait encore par une ville ou n Etat afin d'ariver un moyens nécessaires our entretenir cette classe d'individus, soit n les plaçant dans des asiles ou maisons de auvres et de faire en sorte de rendre leur ntretien le moins onéreux que possible à la ociété. Sauf ce qui a été fait par la bieneillance et l'entreprise réunies de quelques ns de nos concitoyens, notre ville dont le ommerce s'accroit de jour en jour, n'a au-un établissement pour pourvoir au mainien, aux secours et à l'éducation morale de otre jeune population pauvre. Les asiles l'orphelins et les maisons destinées aux veu-es démontrent d'une manière significative l'existence d'une philantropie éclairée, mais les secours qu'ils donnent sont nécessairement restreints à un nombre limité de personnes et laissent un grand nombre d'indi-vidus qui sans feu ni lieu et sans amis se fourvoient dans la société jusqu'à ce que le crime ou la maladie les force d'entrer dans les maisons de refuge ou dans les hopitaux.
Et tout ceci arrive dans une ville qui par ses contributions annuelles dans le trésor de l'Etat, montant à plus d'un quart de million de piastres, se rend dans l'impossibilité de faire ce que, dans ce cas, l'humanité exige.
Outre les infirmes pauvres nous voyons d'après le même rapport, comme hôtes de l'établissement, cinq fous et vingt-trois aveugles qui sont certainement, tout déplacés dans une semblable institution.

Si le Bureau se croyait dans le droit de suggérer les moyens de secours pour lesquels le bien désiré pourrait s'accomplir par la création de telles institutions sans une taxe additionnelle, ou une restitution partielle de celle exigée maintenant, nous appel-lerions l'attention de la Législature sur un seul fait dans la loi qui définit les propriétés et les occupations sujettes à la taxe et qui, nous le savons par les collecteurs de taxes d'Etat, n'a jamais été mise en vigueur ; laquelle loi, si elle était revisée et faite de manière à en faciliter la collecte serait suffisante dans peu d'années pour subvenir aux dépenses nécessaires pour construire et faire prospérer au moins un de ces établissements de charité et de bienveillance.

Mais comme ceci est tout-à-fait étranger à sa nature et à ses fonctions, il se contente seulement d'en faire mention, dans l'espoir que la sagesse et la philantropie de la Lé-gislature la pousseront à faire promptement quelque chose en faveur de cette classe malheureuse.

En se référant an tableau des maladies traitées à l'Hopital pendant l'année dernière et ci annexée, on s'apercevra que le nombre des cas de fièvre jaune s'élève à 3212, contre 2,811 pendant l'année 1847, dernière époque d'une épidémie aussi étendue et fatale ;
le nombre des guérisons 1487 contre 1584, et la mortalité 1890 sur 895 dans la même saison ; fait incontestable de la violence, de la malignité et de l'étendue de la maladie cette année.

Un autre fait qui nous est démontré, est que tandis que notre institution charitable recevait et soignait 3212 malades, une association volontaire de citoyens, (d'après leur propre rapport) ont exclusiment soigné et traité 11,088 malades, sur le nombre des-quels 2942 sont morts et 8146 ont été gué-ris. Mais malgré la malignité et l'étendue de l'épidémie pendant l'année 1853, on est forcé d'admettre que des désastres pareils doivent occuper l'attention du gouvernement, à moins que les besoins croissants des cito-yens ne lui permettent de le faire et nécessairement il doit se voir surpasser par le zèle et l'énergie des associations volontaires, et s'il fallait quelque chose de plus afin de démontrer ce fait, nous le trouverions en voyant la manière étrange dans laquelle se trouve cette institution à la fin de ses pénibles fonctions. Le tableau parle de lui seul.
Après avoir traité et soigné 11,088 malades et libéralement dépensé l'énorme somme de $228,927 32 données avec tant de gé-nérosité spontanée par nos concitoyens pour venir au secours de nos malheureux souffrants, il lui reste un assez joli montant dont on à fait un placement avantageux et lucratif—qui doute, un seul instant, qu'il était du devoir de nos autorités de faire ce que cette association à accompli? De n'avoir pas déployé le même zèle, la même énergie et la bonne volonté, et qu'après, il était de leur devoir de disposer du surplus des sommes reçues et qui leur appartenaient de droit afin de bâtir des maisons pour les pauvres ou toutes autres institutions charitables, objet auquel tendait la charité des donnations Il est inutile de faire aucun commentaire pour prouver que de pareilles societés surpassent les autorités constituées de leur pays, lorsque celles-ci oublient les hautes fonctions pour lesquelles elles ont été créées.

Accompagnant le rapport, le Bureau se croit en devoir de vous transmettre une lettre d'un architecte capable et compétent, d'après laquelle on verra que les réparations nombreuses et importantes à faire dans le courant de cette année, pour conserver le but utile de l'Hopital, nécessiteront une somme plus forte que ses revenus ne lui permettent de dépenser. Nous espérons que ce fait attirera votre attention immédiate.

Nous sommes heureux de pouvoir certifier que le même bon ordre ainsi que les soins et le système économique existent dans l'administration de l'Hopital, ce qui est dû presqu'en totalité à l'admirable jugement et aux habitudes ponctuelles des Sœurs de Charité. Nous pourrions suggérer quelques amendements, mais comme c'est plutôt du ressort de la juridiction des Administrateurs, il est par conséquent inutile d'en parler ici. Il n'y a qu'un sujet de plus sur lequel le Bureau désire appeler l'attention de la Législature. On observera que pendant l'année, il est né dans l'Hopital 159 enfents et et tout le monde ignore qu'il n'y a aucune place spéciale assignée à la maternité, excepté l'endroit commun qu'habitent toutes les femmes malades de l'établissement. Par égard au bien commun et si l'intéret de la société, en ayant des accoucheurs bien instruits et vu les relations directes qu'une telle institution aurait avec l'éducation médicale du collége de l'Etat, il s'élève une question de la plus haute importance qui vous est soumise afin de juger de la nécessité d'établir une maison de maternité où tous les pauvres qui désireraient avoir l'aide et l'expérience d'élèves instruits, pourraient être admis à cette époque critique et importante. Une Institution de cette nature devrait être érigé sur un terrain séparé et construite de manière à répondre à l'objet désiré; étant adjointe à l'Hopital, elle servirait d'une manière considérable à l'éducation médicale et engagerait chaque année une masse d'étudiants à profiter de cet avantage, dont l'admission quoiqu'elle serait peu coûteuse suffirait dans très-peu de temps à rembourser les frais occasionnés pour une bâtisse de ce genre.

A. FOSTER AXSON, V. P.

NOUVELLE-ORLEANS, janvier 2, 1854.

Au Bureau des Administrateurs de l'Hopital de Charité de la Nlle.-Orléans:

Messieurs: J'ai l'honneur de vous soumettre le rapport et l'estimation suivant concernant les dépenses à faire pour les nouvelles bâtisses, les additions, les changements nécessaires et les réparations couteuses à faire aux bâtisses connues sous le nom d'Hopital de Charité.

La vieille bâtisse maintenant occupée comme chambre mortuaire et de dissection et l'étroite maison connue sous le nom de Cottage, sont toutes les deux dans un mauvais ét t, tout-à-fait insuffisantes et d'aucune utilité pour l'objet auquel elles sont appliquées. Je vous recommande de les faire abattre et de faire bâtir à leur place des édifices convenables d'après les plans et les spécifications que je vais préparer et soumettre à votre approbation.

Le centre de la bâtisse faisant face à la rue Commune est dans une état décrépit et demande des réparrations considérables qui devront être faites sans délai.

Les galeries de l'arrière, les toits, les tuyaux sont dans un très-mauvais ordre, et je dois dire même dans un état dangereux s'ils restent plus longtemps tels qu'ils sont présentement. Je n'ai aucun doute que presque toute la charpente inférieure et les lambourdes devraient être renouvellées; le plâtrage tant intérieur qu'extérieur demande des dépenses énormes et en outre à être peinturé et blanchi à la chaux; la partie boiseuse qui d'ordinaire est peinturée dans tout l'établissement devrait recevoir deux couches de la meilleure peinture blanche à l'huile, mélangée avec telle autre couleur que l'on pourrait choisir.

Les bureaux sur la rue de la Commune exigent des réparations et demandent à être nettoyés et peinturés, et de plus que l'on bâtisse une chambre additionnelle pour servir de bureau de consultations et pour l'usage des étudiants, contigüe à l'une d'elles.

Le coût pour l'érection des nouvelles bâtisses, pour les changements et les énormes réparations en général à faire à l'établissement d'une manière substantielle et ne laissant rien à désirer, d'après mon idée et mes calculs à vue d'œil, s'élèvra environ à la somme de quarante mille piastres.

Il faut ici remarquer que si les bâtisses restent dans un pareil état pendant une ou plusieurs années, le coût excédera certainement le montant ci-dessus.

Je suis, Messieurs,
très-respectueusement
Votre obéissant serviteur,
HENRY HOWARD, Architecte.
Bureau, 13 Place du Commerce.

N. B. Par exemple le nombre des renvoyés et des décès surpassera celui des admissions et, vice ersa. Cela provient des malades, ayant plusieurs maladies, à l'époque de leur admission et par conséuent étant renvoyés guéris ou morts de maladie contraire à celle pour laquelle ils étaient subséquemıent en traitement et renvoyés definitivement.

Je dois aussi mentionner que quand le nombre de ceux qui sont renvoyés ou morts excède celui des dmissions, celu vient du nombre des malades qui restent à l'hôpital, à la fin de la dernière année, qui ont presque tous morts ou renvoyés, et vice versa. Quand le nombre des malades admis excède le ombre de ceux qui sont renvoyés et morts, c'est dû au nombre des malades qui sont encore à l'hôpital, t qui ne sont ni morts ni renvoyés.

Dans la liste ci-dessus des maladies, j'ai mis les mots "rien" et "incertain", le premier explique eci: Plusieurs des malades admis ont été renvoyés n'ayant aucun mal pour être admis Il est bon ussi de dire que souvent les enfans qui se portent bien, ont été admis, leurs mères étant fort malades, t vice versa.

Incertain.—Il arrive souvent que des malades sont apportés à l'hôpital et meurent avant d'atteindre leurs salles sans être même vus du médecin, et leurs billets d'entrée sont souscrits subséquemment comme incertain. Il arrive aussi que les malades s'évadent, jetant leurs billets d'entrée dans la cour et l est impossible alors de dire quelle était la nature de leur maladie à l'époque de leur admission: le mot "incertain" est par conséquent écrit au bas, à la place de la maladie.

SECOND RAPPORT ANNUEL

L'INSTITUTION POUR LES

SOURDS-MUETS ET LES AVEUGLES.

BUREAU DE L'EXECUTIF,
Bâton-Rouge, le 15 Février, 1854.

u Président et Membres du Sénat :

J'ai l'honneur de vous transmettre les Rapports ci-joints du Bureau des Administrateurs et du Surintendant de l'Institution pour les Sourds-muets et les Aveugles.

L'augmentation rapide du nombre d'élèves admis dans cet asile, et le grand nombre aveugles qui se trouvent maintenant dans l'hôpital de Charité, et qui doivent entrer ns la première institution, demandent que la Législature s'occupe sans délai à faire :écuter les travaux déjà commencés, en prêtant à cette institution l'assistance dont le à besoin pour accomplir les fins charitables quelle à en vue.

En conséquence, j'appellerai particulièrement l'attention de votre honorable corps sur :tte partie du rapport du Bureau, qui demande une allocation additionnelle pour conruire des édifices, laquelle je l'espère sera accordée par vous.

(Signé) P. O. HEBERT.

RAPPORT,

es Administrateurs de l'Institution pour les Sourds-muets et les Aveugles de la Louisiane à l'Assemblée Générale.

Les Administrateurs de " l'Institution our les Sourds-muets et les Aveugles de la ouisiane, " soumettent respectueusement ur second rapport annuel.

Conformément à l'acte approuvé le 18 ars, 1852, nous nous sommes occupés de ire construire des édifices convenables pour usage des deux institutions confiées à nos oins. Désirant établir, autant que possile, une concurrence parmi les contracteurs, ous avons fixé le 18 du mois d'août dernier our l'ouverture des soumissions cachetées; les avis des soumissions soit pour la fourniture de tous les matériaux et de la ain d'œuvre nécessaires à la construction es édifices, soit pour la tourniture des natériaux seulement, ou pour l'exécution es travaux de maçonnerie ou de la charente, séparément ou ensemble, furent puliés dans les gazettes de la Nouvelle-Oréans, de Vicksburg, de Natchez et de Bâton Rouge. Les plans et spécifications distincts ayant été au préalable, faits et exposés à l'examen du public.

Le jour fixé pour l'ouverture des soumissions cachetées, le Bureau fit choix parmi un grand nombre de celles qui fixaient les prix les plus bas, et adjugea les travaux de maçonnerie et la fourniture de tous les matériaux à des soumissionnaires differents, au prix de $12 65 pour chaque 1000 briques posées; les travaux de charpente de tous les édifices furent adjugés pour $6,800 et la fourniture du bois de charpente délivré sur le bord du fleuve au prix de $10 à $30 le millier de pieds. Ces divers contracts ont été signés et les contracteurs s'occupent d'une manière satisfaisante de l'extention de leurs contrats respectifs.

Dans ces divers contrats, il n'est fait mention que de la construction des édifices jusqu'au toit exclusivement; lequel doit être préparé pour être couvert en ardoises. Comme tous les travaux ne pourraient être faits en même tems, nous n'avons pas cru devoir, jusqu'à présent, demander des soumissions pour les travaux d'achèvement; mais nous le ferons aussitôt que les premiers travaux seront assez avancés pour le rendre nécessaire.

Afin que les travaux puissent être exécutés sans retard, nous demanderons, pour le moment, une allocation de vingt-cinq mille piastres pour arriver à ce but.

Le rapport du Trésorier qui accompagne celui-ci, fait voir le montant des dépenses, à partir du mois de mars jusqu'au 28 janvier, 1854. Le compte du surintendant général fait voir le montant détaillé des dépenses de l'institution, à dater de son organisation jusqu'au 31 décembre, 1853; l'allocation de $8,925 qu'il demande pour subvenir aux dépenses courantes de cette institution pour l'année finissant le 31 mars, 1855, est, dans notre opinion moins que suffisante.

Notre premier désir était d'admettre, le plus tôt possible, les aveugles dans cette institution; mais nous doutons maintenant de la possibilité de recevoir ces malheureux avant l'ouverture de la prochaine session de la Législature. Cependant nous avons encore l'intention de les recevoir bientôt, surtout depuis que nous avons lû le rapport du Bureau des Administrateurs de l'Hôpital de Charité, pour l'année 1853, qui fait voir qu'on à admis, dans cette belle institution, vingt-trois aveugles. Si des allocations sont faites pour l'achèvement des édifices, nous pourrons presser les travaux et préparer un certain nombre de chambres dans la nouvelle bâtisse pour les aveugles qui voudront être admis; laissant les muets dans l'ancien édifice jusqu'à ce que les nouvelles bâtisses soient achevées.

Nous faisons entourer, dans ce moment, d'une barrière en planches, le terrain qui se trouve derrière les bâtisses, la quelle sera remplacée, plus tard, lors quelle sera usée, par une haie assez élevée. Ce terrain est non seulement assez vaste pour que les élèves puissent s'y récréer et prendre l'exercice qui leur est nécessaire, mais peut être en même tems cultivé en jardin potager pour l'usage de l'institution.

Nous soumes heureux de pouvoir vous informer que l'institution, jusqu'à présent est dans une condition prospère. Le surintendant général à rempli les devoirs de sa charge avec déligence, energie et fidélité et ce Bureau à raison de se féliciter d'avoir nommée une personne si capable, comme les rapports, d'occuper cette place. La plus grande harmonie règne parmi tous les employées. Les élèves sont bien soignés et ont tout ce dont ils ont besoin; et l'exterieur de cette institution, en tout et partout, ressemble à une réunion d'un grande et heureuse famille; enfin, nous sommes satisfait quelle est, dans toute l'acception du mot, un asile où les infortunés peuvent par le bonheur qui les entoure, oublier quelque un leur malheur, et espérer, d'après les soins qu'ils reçoivent, être rendus plus indépendants et plus utils.

Nous croyons qu'il est inutile de faire un long rapport sur cette institution. Nous n'avons aucun intérêt soit personnel ou sentionnel pour la favoriser, si ce n'est la satisfaction que nous éprouvons de voir soulager le malheur, et l'orgueuil que nous ressentons devoir prospérer une pareille Institution dans notre Etat; sentiments qui, nous croyons, sont partagés par tous les bons citoyens de la Louisiane. Comme représentans du peuple, c'est à vous de juger ce que la justice, la charité et l'humanité réclament en faveur de cette institution.

Bâton-Rouge, le 2 février, 1854.

B. F. HARNI, Président.

RINTENDANT GENERAL AUX ADMINISTRATEURS.

[ESSIEURS : En vous faisant mon second ort annuel je remplis un devoir agéable etraçant les preuves de l'utilité permate de la prospérité que l'histoire de cette itution à présenté durant l'année der-e.

a santé de nos élèves, chose première à rer dans toute maison d'éducation, et out dans celle-ci, a été bonne, en géné—bien qu'une peste épouvantable ait fait grands ravages dans tout l'Etat, elle à é près de nous sans atteindre nos élèves, me si elle en eût été empêchée par un voir qui l'éloignait de ceux qui avait déjà à souffrir.

On craignait, que la présence de l'épéie empêcherait beaucoup de parents d'enr leurs enfants à l'asile, et en conséncè. diminuerait le nombre d'élèves dut l'année dernière. Cependant nous ns vu le contraire. Les élèves dans notre le, ainsi qu'on peut le voir dans la liste accompagne ce rapport, ont presque dous en nombre durant l'année dernière. cune des écoles de cette nature, dans nion, bien quelles soient établies dans des ats où la population est plus grande que le de la Louisiane, n'a pu faire voir dans première année de son existence une augntation aussi rapide. Si le nombre conue à augmenter dans la même proportion, ant une autre année, les édifices nouveaux ervés pour les sourds-muets seront rems.

Je prends plaisir à mentionner un fait au et des nouveaux élèves, c'est que sans ception, ils ont tous un bon caractère et nt intelligents, et par conséquent ce seront ux là qui profiteront le plus des leçons i leur seront enseignées. C'est un deir et ce devrait être un plaisir pour ceux qui sont confiés ces infortunés, d'aider les s faibles en intelligence à acquérir au ins les premiers principes d'une éducan. Mais, pour des raisons qu'il est inue de mentionner ici, le public prend plus plaisir à examiner les progrès des élèves une intelligence supérieure. Avec ce penant il est impossible du lutter avec avantage surtout au commencement d'une institution. Il est donc heureux pour cet asile que les premiers élèves admis ait eu un caractère tel qu'à l'avenir on pourra mieux juger de l'habileté des professeurs par les progrès qu'auront faits les élèves d'une même intelligence. Il est rare de voir dans une institution des élèves plus heureux que les nôtres. Ils sont encore assez peu nombreux, pour faire croire qu'ils ne forment qu'une seule et même famille, et nous n'exagérons pas en disant qu'ils sont aussi attachés aux employés et les uns aux autres que le sont les enfans d'une même famille, à leurs parents ou à leurs frères et sœurs. Les premiers élèves admis font tout ce qu'ils peuvent pour contenter le nouveau venu. Ils n'ont à essuyer aucune des vexations aux quelles sont sujets les nouveaux venus dans une école où les enfans jouissent de toutes leurs facultés. Il est immédiatement reçu et caressé comme un frère. La plus grande harmonie règne parmi eux et tend beaucoup à diminuer la tâche des professeurs et de ceux qui les gouvernent.

Ceux qui ont visité cette institution ont paru satisfaits des élèves et de l'école, et ont toujours exprimé leur admiration pour une institution qui verse tant de bienfaits sur les malheureux. Lorsque le département destiné aux aveugles sera entièrement en opération ; lorsque l'expérience aura muri notre système actuel, et qu'avec le tems nos opérations seront assises sur des bâses solides, lorsque nous pourrons démontrer, non seulement les résultats que l'on espère, mais les bienfaits qu'ont déjà reçu les infortunés, nous pourrons nous attendre alors que les sympathies du peuple en général, après qu'il aura été convaincu, assureront à l'institution une amélioration et une utilité durables.

Le premier rapport annuel annonçait que le département pour les aveugles serait ouvert au commencement de la session, dans l'automne de la présente année. Bien qu'il y ait peu de probabilités que tous les nouveaux édifices soient prêts sitôt, cependant nous ne croyons pas devoir dans ce moment, annoncer que l'ouverture de l'édifice des-tiné aux aveugles se fera plus tard. On pourra peut être finir quelques chambres dans le nouvel édifice à l'usage de ces élèves, de manière que s'ils n'ont pas toutes les facilités pour recevoir une éducation, ils pourront au moins être reçus convenablement en attendant qu'on puisse les instruire. Le nombre d'aveugles dans l'Etat égale presque celui des sourds-muets, et ils peuvent réclamer, dans cet asile au moins, les mêmes droits pour être instruits, cette institution ayant été établie également pour ces deux classes d'infortunés. Cependant si, par des circonstances imprévues on ne pourait admettre les aveugles à l'époque fixée, on en donnera avis à tems.

D'après le tableau suivant on verra que les dépenses courantes de cette institution, à dater de son organisation, c'est à dire le 8 décembre 1852, jusqu'au 31 décembre 1853, (une période de treize mois à peu près) y compris l'acquisition de plusieurs objets d'un usage permanent, s'élèvent à $9,188 14

Montant dépensé avant le 31 mars 1853 - - -	4,063 70
Montant dépensé du 1er. avril 1853 au 31 déc. 1853 -	5,124 44
Montant dû et non encore payé	500 00
Dépenses probables durant le dernier trimestre de l'année fiscale	2,200 00
Dépenses probables de l'année finissant le 31 mars 1854	7,823 44
Montant alloué par l'acte faisant une allocation pour l'année fiscale finissant le 31 mars 1854	8,926 00
Balance probable de l'allocation, entre les mains du trésorier de l'institution le 1er. avril 1854	1,100 56
Allocation additionnelle requise pour l'année fiscale finissant le 31 mars 1855 - -	8,925 00

L'allocation pour l'année finissant le 31 mars 1854, a été basée sur l'estimation des diverses espèces de dépenses; laquelle aurait été presque épuisée, si non entièrement, durant cette période, si l'épidemie qui a régné n'avait pas renvoyé l'ouverture de la présente session. Nous ne voyons rien qui puisse changer l'estimation faite l'année dernière, si ce n'est une faible dépense additionnelle pour la nourriture, qu'on sera obligé de faire si l'on admet un nombre additionnel d'élèves durant l'année qui vient. Cependant cette dépense pourra être couverte par la balance en caisse; de sorte que pour les dépenses courantes, comme je l'ai déjà dit, nous n'aurons à demander à la Législature qu'une allocation égale en somme, à celle faite par la Législature précédente.

Bien que la santé de nos élèves ait été bonne en général, nous avons eu à regretter la mort, occasionnée par la fièvre jaune, de deux de nos meilleurs employés: Mr. Thomas Wood, mort le 13 Septembre, et M. James M. Hanson mort le 8 décembre.

Mr. Wood avait été employé, pendant peu de tems, comme économe et jardinier à l'institution; places qui ne pouvaient être mieux remplis. Son talent comme jardinier de jardins était bien connu ainsi que ne fut employé ici, et s'il eut vécu encore quelques années auraient rappelé constamment à souvenir de son bon goût. Il avait été riche et avait vécu dans l'opulence, et cependant ne redoutait pas les travaux les plus rudes que sa nouvelle position lui imposait et semblait éprouver le même plaisir en exerçant son talent pour la satisfaction des autres que celui qu'il éprouvait, durant des jours meilleurs, en embellissant des terres qui devaient un jour lui appartenir. Même, durant sa maladie, son désir à remplir fidèlement les devoirs qu'il s'était imposés, nous regrettons de le dire, a, peut être, contribué à terminer les jours de cet homme aussi modeste qu'utile.

Mr. Martin M. Hanson était l'aîné des premier professeur dans l'école des sourds-muet lui-même, il ne reculait devant aucun travail, aucune peine pour le bien de ses élèves. Comme professeur il a été rarement surpassé, et il à toujours su s'attirer l'affection et l'amitié des élèves de sa classe. L'uniformité de son esprit jointe à la grande énergie de son caractère, en faisaient un professeur parfait; son bon cœur, son amabilité et son intégrité en faisaient un ami et un compagnon précieux. Lorsqu'il apprit la perte que nous avions déjà éprouvée, il était loin de nous, et malgré les prières de ses parents qui voulaient le retenir, il a préféré revenir remplir ses devoirs dans l'institution. La mort à terminé sa carrière utile—il repose maintenant dans une tombe qui sera souvent, dans l'avenir, visitée par ses élèves reconnaissants qui aimeront à redire à ceux qui ne le connaissaient pas, les belles qualités de leur professeur et ami de leur jeunesse.

Ainsi, sur trois hommes, qui, il y a quelques mois, étaient occupés comme de vrais amis, à atteindre le but de cette institution, deux sont déjà rendus dans le champ de repos, laissant le troisième pour tracer ces quelques lignes comme un faible témoignage de leur mérite. De tous les compagnons de ma jeunesse, les plus chers, les plus fidèles et, pour mettre à exécution cette noble entreprise, les plus capables ont succombé. Tous deux occupaient jadis des places honorables dans un autre État, lorsque pour des considérations d'amitié pour celui qui écrit ces lignes, ils ont accepté les places qui les étaient offertes ici. Bien qu'il sache, qu'il est possible, que ce rapport sera le dernier peut être qu'il aura le plaisir de présenter à votre honorable corps, et que le prochain, écrit par un successeur, parle avec avantage de celui qui n'est plus, il n'a aucun regret, (si ce n'est celui qu'il éprouve pour ses amis qui sont morts,) de s'être engagé dans une entreprise de laquelle doit résulter tant de bien pour les enfans malheureux dans cet Etat. D'autres peuvent échouer; mais un pouvoir plus grand que celui de l'homme veille à la destinée de toutes les entreprises semblables à celle-ci; et d'après les succès que nous avons abtenus jusque ici, nous devons croire que, aussi sûr que le soleil se lèvera demain, il se lèvera toujours pour faire voir cette institution florissante et verser sa clarté bienfaisante sur les infortunés enfans muets et aveugles de la Louisiane.

Pour terminer, permettez moi, messieurs les administrateurs, de vous témoigner ici toute ma reconnaissance pour la bonté et la courtaisie avec lesquelles vous avez reçu et adopté mes suggestions, et pour les bons conseils et l'assistance que vous m'avez donnés dans la direction de cette institution. Je ferai de mon mieux, durant tout le tems que j'occuperai ma place, pour mériter votre confiance que j'estime tant et que vous m'avez accordée si généreusement.

Respectueusement,

JAMES S. BROWN.

JAMES S. BROWN, Surintendant Général

Institution pour les Sourds-muets et les Aveugles, Bâton-Rouge, le 5 janvier, 1854.

REGLEMENTS

POUR L'ADMISSION DES ELEVES, &c.

I. Tous les sourds-muets de cet Etat, âgés de dix à trente ans, et tous les aveugles âgés de huit à vingt-cinq ans, seront admis dans cette Institution pour y être logés ou instruits sans frais. Toute personne qui désirera placer un élève dans l'école, devra d'abord informer par écrit, le surintendant général, du nom, de l'âge et de la résidence du muet ou de l'aveugle quelle veut faire admettre, et de la cause, s'il y en a eu, qui a rendu le dit élève muet ou aveugle. Le surintendant général devra immédiatement faire une réponse, fixant l'époque à laquelle l'élève pourra être admis. * Cette information doit toujours être donnée, bien qu'on ne doive pas refuser d'admettre ceux qui se présenteront avant l'ouverture de la session. Les demandes qui seront faites en faveur de personnes d'un âge audessus ou moindre de celui fixé par ce réglement, seront prises en considération par les administrateurs, qui se réservent le droit d'accorder ou de rejetter cette demande, selon qu'ils le jugeront convenable.

II. Les élèves des autres Etats seront admis dans l'institution, si leurs parents, leurs tuteurs ou leurs gardiens paient d'avance, chaque année, la somme de cent cinquante piastres.

III. Le cours des études comprendra le tems qui sera nécessaire pour que tout élève, possédant une intelligence ordinaire et désirant s'instruire, puisse acquérir une bonne éducation; ce qui exigera sept années. Les élèves qui se trouveront dans une condition exceptionnelle ou ceux d'un mérite transcendant, qui seront recommandés par le surintendant général et avec l'approbation du Bureau des administrateurs, pourront rester quelques années de plus.

IV. Ceux qui voudront mener des élèves dans cette institution, sont invités à faire par écrit, avant de partir, les réponses aux questions suivantes, lesquelles réponses devront être remises entre les mains du surintendant général:

1. Quel est le nom de l'enfant?

2 L'époque de sa naissance? l'année, le mois, le jour.

3. L'enfant est-il né aveugle ou muet? Si non, à quel âge et comment est il devenu aveugle ou muet?

4. Est-il entièrement aveugle ou muet, ou l'est-il par moments? S'il n'est pas aveugle ou muet tout à fait, que peut il voir ou entendre?

5. S'il est aveugle, a-t-il appris à former des lettres avec la plume? S'il est aveugle, a-t il appris à épeler?

6. A-t-on jamais essayé de lui rendre l'ouïe ou la vue? Si on l'a essayé qu-a-t-on obtenu,

7. L'enfant a-t-il été vacciné, a-t-il jamais eu la fièvre scarlatine, la rougeole, l'esquinancie ou la coqueluche?

8. L'enfant est-il né en Louisiane? S'il ne l'est pas, depuis combien de temps y est-il venu?

9. L'enfant a-t-il aucune maladie reconnu, ou est-il sujet à aucune attaque de maladie.

10. A-t-il des parents aveugles ou muets. S'il en existe, quel est le dégré de parenté.

11. Quels sont les noms et l'adresse des parents ou du gardien de l'enfant.

12. Quels sont les noms des frères et sœurs de l'enfant?

V. Les parents ou gardiens de chaque élève devra fournir, annuellement, les vêtements suivants:

Pour les garçons: deux habits de draps, deux d'une étoffe légère, deux gilets épais, deux autres d'une étoffe légère, deux paires de pantalons en laine, deux autres en étoffe légère, six chemises, six paires de chaussettes, trois paires de souliers ou bottes, deux chapeaux ou casquettes, et un chapeaux de paille, deux peignes fins, deux peignes en bois, deux paires de bretelles, quatre mouchoirs de poche et trois cravattes.

Pour les filles: quatre robes d'indienne et une blanche, un chapeau, un gar-soleil, trois robes de dessous, cinque paires de bas, trois paires de bottines, une paire de pantoufles, deux robes de nuit, deux bonnets de nuit, quatre mouchoires de poche, un schâle, trois peignes pour retenir les cheveux, un gros peigne et deux peignes fins.

Tous ces vêtements doivent tous être marqués avec de l'encre indélébile. Chaque élève devra avoir une malle. En outre, on devra déposer une some de $5 00 entre les mains du surintendant général, pour les dépenses incidentes; si toute la somme n'est pas dépensée, la balance sera remboursée à la fin de chaque terme.

* Les élèves aveugles, voyez le règlement X, ne pourront être admis avant le mois d'octobre 1854.

VI. Les vêtements sont fournis par l'institution aux enfants seulement dont les parents ou les gardiens n'ont pas les moyens de le faire.

VII. Les personnes qui mèneront ou qui veindront retirer des élvèves ne seront ni nourries ni logées et ne trouveront pas de place pour leur chevaux dans l'institution.

VIII. Les classes s'ouvriront le premier mercredi d'octobre et se fermeront le mercredi qui précèdera le vingt du mois de juillet de chaque année. Les élèves doivent entrer à l'ouverture des classes et y rester jusqu'à la clôture.

VX. Cependant, les élèves seront admis dans le département destinée aux muets, en tout tems durant la session, jusqu'en juillet 1854, après cette époque ils ne devront être envoyés qu'à l'ouverture de la session.

X. Les élèves seront admis dans le département destiné aux aveugles, à l'ouverture de la session en octobre 1854, et au commencement de chaque session à l'avenir.

XI. Aucune opinion de secte ou de parti en religion ou en polltique ne sera inculqué aux élèves dans cette Institution, et le dimanche les élèves seront libres d'aller à l'église que leurs parents aurant choisie.

XII. Le gouvernement de l'institution sera celui d'une famille bien réglée; on veillera avec soin à la santé et aux besoins des élèves, et rien ne sera épargné pour les rendre contents et heureux dans l'asile.

XIII. L'institution est placée dans un endroit des plus salubres. Lorsqu'ils seront malades, ils seront soignés par un bon médecin attaché à l'institution, et s'ils sont atteints d'une maladie serieuse, le surintendant général devra immédiatement en avertir le parent ou le gardien.

XIV. Toutes lettres d'affaires ou lettres d'enquête concernant les élèves dans cet asile, ou ceux qu'on voudra faire admettre ici, devront être adressées à "James S. Brown, surintendant général de l'Institution pour les Sourds-muets et les Aveugles, Baton Rouge, Louisiane." Toutes les lettres addressées aux élèves devront être affranchies et devront porter sur l'addresse les mots, "Institution pour les muets et les aveugles." On doit bien faire attention à ce réglement, attendu que, si lon adressait différemment les lettres, elles pourraient ne pas se rendre à leur destination.

ADMISSION DES VISITEURS.

Les citoyens de l'Etat et les étrangers seront admis à visiter les salles d'écoles chaque jour, de 10 heures à midi, les samedis et les dimanches exceptés.

BUREAU DES DIRECTEURS

DU

ENITENTIAIRE DE LA LOUISIANE.

Son Excellence P. O. Hebert,
Gouverneur de l'Etat de la Louisiane.

Comme Directeurs du Pénitentiaire de la isiane, nous avons l'honneur de rappor-
: Que nous sommes entrés dans l'exer-ios fonctions immédiatement après notre ination, et que depuis, nous nous som-réunis une fois par mois régulièrement.
a corporation de la ville de Bâton Rouge s ayant demandé l'usage de 50 pieds de e sur l'arrière du Pénitentiaire, pour verture d'une rue, nous avons accordé e demande, sujette cependant à l'appro on de la Législature.
e temps accordé aux prisonniers pour ndre leurs repas n'étant que de dix mies, nous l'avons augmenté en leur accorune heure pour prendre leur repas du i.
Nous avons ordonné qu'un régistre des itions infligées aux prisonniers fut tenu, u'une copie fut soumise aux Directeurs à r réunion mensuelle ; de n'infliger aue punition à moins qu'elle ne soit ordonpar le Capitaine de la garde et le Com-du Pénitentiaire ; il a été défendu aux les de parler durement aux prisonniers le les menacer de punition. Leur devoir nt simplement d'informer les officiers suieurs des fautes ou de la mouvaise conte des prisonniers.
Nous avons affecté une somme de soixante stres au paiement d'une caisse de livres nis par D. L. Dix, pour l'usage des con-nés.
In individu du nom de Jules Moret, conné pour quatorze ans et 3 jours, pour le ne de faux, et emprisonné dans le Pénitiaire le 22 février 1841, s'étant évadé novembre 1842, fut repris et emprisonde nouveau le 21 juillet de cette année.
s dépenses pour sa capture et pour le con-re dans le Pénitentiaire, s'élèvent à $48
50 cts. Ledit Moret déclare qu'il n'est pas le même homme qui s'est évadé. Nous lui avons donné toutes les facilités pour prouver sa déclaration, mais il n'a pas réussi, ce qui ne laisse aucun doute dans l'esprit des membres de ce Bureau, sur l'identité de cet homme.

Les Directeurs, en vertu de la loi, ont élu les officiers suivants pour la conduite du Pénitentiaire, pour l'année commençant le 1er octobre dernier :

William Hubbs, commis ;
J. A. Williams, médecin ;
A. E. Goodwin, aumonier.

Nous donnons ci après le montant des anciens comptes et billets dûs à l'Etat et remis à Amos Adams pour en faire la collecte :—

Montant des comptes et billets remis à Amos Adams pour en faire la collecte,	$5084 71
Montant collecté et versé par lui,	1056 31
	$4028 40

M. Adams pense qu'il pourra, cet hiver, collecter une faible portion de cette balance, ($4028 40 ;) mais la plus grande partie sera perdue pour l'Etat, attendu que ces comptes sont dûs par des personnes insolvables.

Le tableau suivant fait voir le compte du Bureau des Directeurs avec les fermiers à bail du Pénitentiaire :

Montant reçu par les formiers, de A. Adams,	$1,056 31
Montant de l'évaluation des vieux matériaux pris de l'ancien édifice et employés à construire les nouvelles cellules,	449 44
Montant au débit des fermiers,	$1,505 75

Un jeune nègre âgé de dix ans, fils de Azeline, esclave condamnée à perpétuité aux travaux forcés dans le Pénitentiaire, a été remis entre les mains du Shérif de la paroisse d'Est Bâton Rouge, pour être vendu. Ce jeune nègre fut adjugé pour $800. Le produit net de cette vente, $780 65, a été versé dans le Trésor de l'Etat, pour être placé au crédit des Ecoles Publiques, conformément à la loi.

Conformément à l'Acte de la Législature, approuvé le 28 avril 1852, nous avons autorisé la construction d'un autre étage sur l'édifice Nord, qui devra être couvert en ardoises. Ce travail est déjà commencé et sera achevé sous peu.

Les deux cents cellules additionnelles ont été achevées conformément au plan soumis à la Législature, et acceptées par le Bureau des Directeurs. La somme affectée pour cette construction est de $40,000 ; et les fermiers ayant présenté leur compte, accompagné de pièces justificatives, s'élevant à la somme de $41,341 18, et excédant la somme allouée de $1,341 18, nous prions votre Excellence de soumettre cette question à la Législature, afin que les fermiers puissent toucher le montant qu'ils ont payé en plus.

Il a été entendu et ordonné par la Législature que les blancs et les gens de couleur condamnés aux travaux forcés dans le Pénitentiaire, travailleraient séparément, et c'est ce que désirent les Directeurs ; mais les Fermiers disent que la chose est impossible tant qu'on ne fera pas de changements dans l'arrangement et la distribution des ateliers et des cours.

Nous appellerons ici l'attention de votre Excellence sur le fait que des esclaves qui ont été autrefois pardonnés par la Législature, ont été repris en esclavage par leurs premiers maîtres, sans en être autorisés par la loi et, nous pensons, sans aucun titre, parce qu'ils avaient abandonné leurs droits illégaux.

Pour ce qui concerne les condamnés, nous référerons votre Excellence au rapport du Commis, que nous avons l'honneur de soumettre ci-joint, savoir :

Tableau marqué A fait voir les noms des prisonniers dans le Pénitentiaire, le temps pour lequel ils ont été condamnés, la nature du crime et le jour de leur emprisonnement.

Tableau B fait voir les noms des prisonniers qui ont été libérés, le temps pour lequel ils avaient été condamnés, la nature de leur crime, et l'expiration de leur condamnation.

Tableau marqué C fait voir les noms des prisonniers qui sont morts, le temps pour lequel ils avaient été condamnés, leur crime et la date de leur décès.

Tableau D fait voir les noms des prisonniers qui ont été pardonnés par la dernière Législature, la nature de leur crime, le temps pour lequel ils avaient été condamnés, et la date de leur pardon.

Tableau E—Prisonnier pardonné par le Président des Etats-Unis, la nature de son crime, le temps pour lequel il avait été condamné, et la date de son pardon.

Tableau F fait voir la récapitulation des tableaux A, B, C, D, E.

Tableau G fait voir l'âge de chaque prisonnier maintenant dans le Pénitentiaire.

Tableau H fait voir la nature des crimes commis par les prisonniers qui sont maintenant dans le Pénitentiaire.

Tableau I donne le nom des paroisses d'où viennent les prisonniers.

Tableau J donne le nom des Etats et des pays où sont nés les prisonniers.

Tableau K fait connaître la profession ou les occupations des prisonniers avant leur condamnation.

Pour ce qui concerne la santé, le traitement, etc., des condamnés, les Directeurs vous réfèrent au rapport du Médecin, qui accompagne ce rapport.

Pour ce qui concerne l'éducation morale et religieuse des prisonniers, nous vous référons au rapport de l'Aumonier qui accompagne ce rapport.

Cette année étant la dernière du bail actuel de cette institution, la Direction a cru devoir exprimer son opinion à l'égard de la location à bail. Elle est entièrement opposée au système de louer à bail à une compagnie, le travail provenant du crime dans l'Etat, parce que ce système, non seulement crée un monopole et enrichit quelques-uns au détriment d'un grand nombre, mais il détruit l'esprit et l'intention d'une institution où la punition doit être proportionnée au crime, la justice égale pour tous, et où le criminel doit trouver l'occasion de se réformer par le bon exemple, l'instruction et les bons avis des officiers qui y sont attachés, et en fait une institution où il n'est question que d'argent.

L'importance de chaque emploi dans cette institution et la nécessité de nommer à ces divers emplois des personnes convenables, ne sont pas bien comprises et ne peuvent être appréciées par le public en général, qui n'a pas les moyens d'obtenir les informations nécessaires pour juger de la capacité et des qualités que doivent avoir les personnes nommées aux divers emplois dans cette institution. Ceux qui sont appelés à diriger cette institution, ne doivent pas seulement remplir les devoirs ordinaires des officiers publics, mais ils sont aussi chargés de contrôler, gouverner, corriger et améliorer les êtres malheureux qui sont confiés à leurs soins, et les préparer à rentrer dans la société à l'expiration de leur condamnation.— Pour bien remplir ce devoir, il faut avoir un caractère et une habitude que peu d'hommes possèdent. Peut-on croire que des hommes possédant ces qualités s'emploiraient comme gardiens pour la modique somme de quinze ou vingt piastres par mois, (salaire que paient aujourd'hui les Fermiers,) surtout dans un pays comme celui-ci, où la main d'œuvre se paie $1 et $1 50 par jour ?

Nous sommes d'opinion que cette institution peut facilement s'entretenir sous la direction de bons officiers nommés par l'Etat, en continuant le même genre de travail qui a donné un bénéfice immense aux Fermiers, ayant 60 métiers à tisser, manufacturant 2,000 yardes d'étoffes communes de coton par jour; des machines pour la fabrique de la ouatte. Si on augmentait le nombre des machines pour la fabrication des étoffes de coton, pour employer tous les condamnés, nous sommes certains que l Etat en retirerait un grand revenu.

Nous croyons que le produit du travail de 283 ouvriers suffirait amplement pour payer leur nourriture et leurs vêtements, ainsi que les salaires des officiers et du gardien, surtout dans ce pays où le travail est si bien payé. On peut augmenter le nombre de métiers à tisser et des machines pour la fabrication des étoffes de coton, pour employer presque tous les condamnés, sans être obligé de construire de nouveaux édifices, ce qui ne coûtera qu'un peu de peine et le prix d'achat des métiers à tisser avec leurs accessoires. Si ce projet était adopté et qu'on n'employât les ouvriers qu'à une seule branche d'industrie (la fabrication des étoffes communes de laine et de coton,) la discipline de la prison serait plus facile et les condamnés auraient moins d'occasion de s'évader.

Comme il a été d'usage, chaque année, de recommander quelques-uns des condamnés qui avaient, par leur bonne conduite, mérité le pardon, les Directeurs vous recommandent ceux dont les noms suivent :

Wm. Ryan ou Riley, qui a été condamné pour vol, le 2 août 1845, pour 10 ans ; il a déjà été recommandé par l'ancienne Direction.

Mat. J. Edwards, qui a été cendamné à perpétuité, le 13 novembre 1846, pour être entré dans une maison avec l'intention d'y commettre un crime.

Thomas Crawford, qui a été condamné pour faux, le 28 juillet 1849, pour 5 ans.

Isaac Van Bibber, qui a été condamné pour 7 ans, le 11 septembre 1847, pour avoir volé un esclave.

Jackson, esclave, condamné à perpétuité le 27 septembre 1850, comme incendiaire.

Harry, esclave, condamné à perpétuité, le 5 mars 1849, pour avoir assailli un blanc.— Ce Harry sauva la vie au Capitaine Parry, le prédécesseur du Capitaine actuel, lors de la révolte des condamnés.

Nous désirons instamment que le rapport en entier sur le Pénitentiaire soit publié en forme de pamphlets pour être distribués, et que cent exemplaires de ce rapport soient remis au Greffier du Pénitentiaire, pour être transmis aux différents Pénitentiaires des Etats Unis.

Le tout vous est respectueusement soumis.

RAPPORT DU MEDECIN.

Aux Directeurs du Pénitentiaire de la Louisiane :

Durant l'année qui vient de s'écouler, les prisonniers, en général, ont joui d'une bonne santé, excepté lors de l'épidémie [fièvre jaune] qui a duré un mois ou six semaines, et qui, heureusement, a fait peu de ravages, n'étant pas d'un caractère très dangereux. Parmi le grand nombre de prisonniers, il n'y eût qu'un quart à peu près qui fut atteint de cette maladie. Je ne puis donner le nombre exact de ceux qui y ont succom-bé, attendu que j'étais moi-même malade à cette époque, et que le médecin qui soignait les malades n'a pas pris note des décès : cela explique mon incapacité à fournir la liste. Avant et après cette époque, il y a eu peu de différence, soit dans le nombre ou le caractère des maladies parmi les prisonniers, avec les maladies qui ont existé les années précédentes. Les maladies les plus communes au climat, et qui ont régné dans le Pénitentiaire, sont : les fièvres intermittentes et remittentes, la dyssenterie, la diarrhée, etc. Il n'a existé aucune des maladies qui règnent quelquefois et qui sont considérées comme particulières aux prisonniers et à la vie sédentaire que l'on mène dans les manufactures, telles que le scorbut, etc. L'absence de ces maladies, je crois, ne doit être attribuée qu'à la bonne nourriture et à la propreté des prisonniers.

Le nombre des décès durant l'année s'élève à 13, savoir :

G. Holmes, mort le 28 mars de la fièvre typhoïde ;

S. Dalton, mort le 11 septembre de la fièvre jaune ;

J. Moore, mort le 14 septembre de la fièvre jaune ;

Une femme âgée de 100 ou 120 ans, décédée le 27 septembre ;

Josua Lowell, mort le 6 octobre ;
A. H. Hess, " " 8 "
Wm. Flood, " " 10 "
J. W. Wilson, " " 12 "
A. J. Perdue, " " 19 "
H. L. Johnson, " " 22 "
J. Kenehen, " " 25 "
Henry Hughes, " " 11 déc., d'une anhémie causée par la fièvre jaune ;

Joseph Fountain, mort d'une diarrhée chronique.

D'après les dates des décès, on verra qu'il n'est mort qu'un seul prisonnier avant l'épidémie, et que deux après. Un de ces prisonniers est mort des suites de la fièvre jaune. Il est à supposer, d'après les dates des décès, que tous les autres sont morts de la même maladie.

On trouve dans l'hôpital tout ce qui est nécessaire aux malades ; la diette est celle que prescrit le médecin. La nourriture des prisonniers, en général, est distribuée sous la surveillance du médecin, qui a le droit de la faire changer lorsqu'il le juge nécessaire. Les aliments sont bons et abondants, et sont de nature à conserver et à entretenir la santé et la force des prisonniers.

Très-respectueusement,

J. M. WILLIAMS.

RAPPORT DE L'AUMONIER

L'Aumonier soumet respectueusement le rapport suivant :

Le 1er octobre 1853, j'entrai dans l'exercice de mes fonctions comme Aumonier de cette institution, bien pénétré de l'importance de cette charge, et le cœur plein de sympathies pour les êtres malheureux que j'avais à conduire dans la vie spirituelle. Depuis cette époque, j'ai fait de mon mieux pour l'élévation des sentiments et des pensées des prisonniers, en leur inspirant la noble ambition de devenir meilleurs en rentrer dans la société, après avoir subi leur peine de leurs crimes.

Tout être imbu de l'esprit du Christianisme, qui remplit cette mission, doit se voir l'élu de Dieu, lorsqu'il est appelé à enseigner les divins préceptes de l'Evangile à la classe la plus dégradée de la société — des êtres, immortels, créés à l'image de Dieu, qui cependant sont rejetés de la société, privés de toute liberté, de l'estime et de la confiance de leurs semblables. On ne doit pas considérer comme un devoir ordinaire une mission qui nous appelle à porter à ces âmes le pain de la vie et à leur inspirer le désir de devenir purs et de jouir des biens célestes réservés aux élus de Dieu.

Mû par ces sentiments, j'ai toujours cherché à réveiller en eux, en touchant à la corde des plus sensibles de leur âme, les pensées qui conduisent dans le chemin de l'honneur et de la vertu : le souvenir de l'amour maternel, de sa sollicitude, d'une sœur tendre et affectionnée, d'un bon père, et mieux encore, le souvenir de la sympathie de notre Sauveur, de l'amour de Dieu, devaient agir plus puissamment à élever l'âme et améliorer l'existence de ces malheureux prisonniers, que toutes les prières qui pourraient leur être faites et les bons exemples qu'on pourrait leur donner, dans quelque occasion que ce soit. En conséquence, je demanderai respectueusement à la Direction de maintenir la place d'Aumonier dans cette institution.

Dès le premier jour où je fus installé comme Aumonier, je m'occupai à renumeroter et arranger avec ordre tous les livres appartenant à la bibliothèque, qui bien qu'elle contienne beaucoup de livres utiles et intéressants, n'est pas encore complète ; elle a besoin de livres écrits en langues étrangères.

Je prierai respectueusement la Direction de demander à la Législature une allocation pour acheter de bons livres à l'usage de cette bibliothèque. J'ai fait de mon mieux pour fournir à chaque prisonnier une Bible écrite

Digitized by Google

ns sa langue maternelle ; mais je n'ai pas ussi complètement. Les Bibles en langues rangères manquent, surtout celles écrites français et en allemand. Je ne puis 'espérer qu'on se procurera immédiate-ent celles qui manquent, car, qui voudrait iver ces malheureux de la lumière de Dieu ns leurs sombres et solitaires cellules.— s hommes peuvent les priver de leur li-rté sociale, en les faisant emprisonner pour pier les crimes qu'ils ont commis contrai-ment aux lois du pays; mais qui osera leur fermer les portes du ciel et les priver de la seule vraie carte qui doit les guider sur cette mer orageuse qu'on appelle la vie,—la divine Bible de Celui qui dit au larron mourant: "Ce jour tu seras avec moi dans le Paradis."

Très-respectueusement,

A. E. GOODWYN.

BATON ROUGE, 2 janvier 1854.

Président et Directeurs du Pénitentiaire de la Louisiane, Bâton Rouge :

MESSIEURS :—Comme Commis du Pénitentiaire de la Louisiane, j'ai l'honneur de soumettre mon rapport annuel ci-après, pour l'année 1853, qui, je l'espère, sera correct.

Très-respectueusement,

Votre obéissant serviteur,

ADJUDANT GENERAL.

.U DE L'INSPECTEUR ET ADJUDANT GENERAL,
BATON ROUGE, le 15 JANVIER, 1854.

VERNEUR:

J'ai l'honneur de vous soumettre mon ort Annuel sur la Milice, vous priant ême tems de le transmettre à la Legis-. Je suis entré en fonctions aussitôt avoir été nommé par vous, en Mars r. Je me suis d'abord occupé de la pondance déjà entamée avec le Depar-t d'Ordonnance de l'Armée des Etats concernant la part des armes dûe à par le Gouvernement Général. Cette pondance s'est terminée par l'envoi de trente-six fusils à piston, et cent -six carabines à piston que j'ai reçus. e suis occupé ensuite de l'inspection Arsenal de l'Etat à la Nouvelle-ns. J'ai trouvé le toit en si mauvais ue j'ai ordonné des réparations, qui é payées, d'après votre ordre, ensemble es autres comptes pour le charbon et ournis à l'Arsenal, des fonds affectés épenses casuelles de l'Exécutif, atten-ie je n'avais pas d'autres fonds à ma ition pour les solder.

agent d'une manufacture d'Armes, é-la Nouvelle-Orléans, ma fait la pro-n de mettre des pistons à toutes les nes armes de l'État moyennant la d'une piastre chaque, et a proposé ars fois de prendre en paiement cin-deux carabines de Hall, appartenant at. Je vous transmets ci-jointe la der-proposition faite par Hitchcock & Cie, vous prie de soumettre à la Legisla-ttendu que je ne suis pas autorisé à aucun contrat sans son approbation.

NEW-YORK, 15 AOÛT, 1853.

GENERAL S. M. WESTMORE:

MONSIEUR:

is avons reçu votre lettre du 8. En e nous venons vous dire que nous con-s à faire des changements aux armes Louisiane et à prendre en partie paie-les carabines de Hall au prix courant, $2 50, qui est le prix pour lequel ivons fourni ces carabines à l'Etat de New-York; et qui n'avaient jamais été dés emballées. Nous les avions achetées à rai-son de $2. Nous désirons faire des change-ments aux armes appartenant à votre Etat, et nous pouvons le faire à un prix plus bas que celui d'aucun autre dans les Etats-Unis, mais nous ne voulons pas prendre en paie-ment des armes estimées à un prix plus éle-vé que celui des cours. L'offre faite par notre agent, Mr. B., est de $1, pour faire le changement, prenant en paiement des mous-quets, en bon état de service, au prix de $1 87½. Pour vous faire voir combien nous sommes raisonnable, nous vous dirons que nous avons acheté plusieurs lots considéra-bles, durant les deux derniers mois, à raison de $1 75, et nous sommes, dans ce moment, en marché d'acheter avec l'un des plus grands Etats du Nord, toutes ses vieilles ar-mes à $1 50.

Votre, etc.,

HITCHCOCK & CO.

La réorganisation de la Milice en vertu de la loi de la dernière Legislature s'est faite lentement. Plusieurs citoyens sur lesquels nous avions compté pour nous aider dans l'ac-complissement de ce devoir, ont refusé d'ac-cepter leurs commissions— d'autres n'ont jamais donné de réponse s'ils acceptaient ou non, et il n'y a qu'un petit nombre de ceux qui ont accepté leurs commissions qui ait rempli les devoirs qui leur sont imposés par la loi. Nos citoyens sont indifférents ou ont de la répugnance à remplir ce devoir, et cela sera ainsi tant que l'Adjudant Général ne fera pas une tournée dans tout l'Etat pour exciter l'émulation et induire nos citoyens à donner leur aide dans l'exécution de la loi. Le salaire modique alloué à cet officier ne lui permet pas de faire cette tournée, à moins qu'il ne la fasse à ses propres frais.

Dans la paroisse d'Orléans la milice a été divisée en quinze régiments, classés par nu-méros d'un à quinze. Chacune des autres paroisses fournit un régiment—ils sont dé-signés sous les noms des paroisses, sans nu-méros.

Les compagnies de Volontaires de la ville de la Nouvelle-Orléans sont bien habillées, bien commandées et bien disciplinées. On ne saurait trop apprécier leur utilité et pour la ville et pour l'État, et l'allocation qui leur est faite annuellement par la Legislature pour aider à leur entretien, ne saurait être mieux placée.

La loi de la dernière Législature doit être amendée, et j'appélerai respectueusement l'attention de la présente Législature sur les sections suivantes :

Dans la section 17, qui règle le rang des officiers d'Etat Major, on a omis le rang du Quartier Maitre et celui de l'officier payeur de la Division, places qui sont créées par la 14 section.

La 23ème section exige que les Colonels soient élus par les officiers de la Division, au lieu de les faire élire par le Régiment, de sorte qu'un inférieur (un colonel) est élu par un corps plus considérable que son supérieur (un Brigadier Général). Elle exige en outre que l'élection soit ordonnée par le commandant en chef au lieu du Brigadier Général de la Brigade dont le régiment fait partie, lorsque l'élection d'un Brigadier Général est ordonnée par le Major Général.

La section 24 relative à l'élection des Lieutenant-Colonels et des Majors est aussi défectueuse.

S. W. WESTMORE,
Adjudant et Inspecteur Général de la Louisiane.

Au Gouverneur de la Louisiane,
P. O. HEBERT.

Il m'est maintenant permis de féliciter la législature de l'Etat, sur la condition actuelle du trésor de l'Etat, après avoir demandé en vain aux législateurs de 1850 et 1852, de prendre des mesures pour empêcher le discrédit de l'Etat, la législature de 1853 s'occupe de mes recommendations, et le résultat est que le trésor se trouve dans une condition telle que la législature actuelle pourra, sans imposer de nouvelles taxes, former une caisse d'amortissement pour payer la dette de l'Etat, et une autre dont les intérêts, dans peu d'années, serviront, sans avoir recours à la taxe, à maintenir les écoles publiques sur des fondations solides et permanentes qui ne pourront être détruites par aucun changement de système occasionnés par le mécontentement produit par le paiement d'une taxe annuelle.

Le tableau de la dette publique qui accompagne ce rapport, fait voir que l'Etat dôit au fonds des écoles publiques $387,728,68
Au fonds des maisons d'éducation, 140,527,96

Ces fonds n'existent qu'en compte, sans rien pour les représenter. Le fonds des écoles, en vertu de la Constitution, augmente à un tel point que, dans peu de temps, les intérêts sur le capital suffiront pour maintenir les écoles ; mais si le montant de ces intérêts était levé par une taxe, ce qu'on sera obligé de faire si le fonds n'est pas placé avantageusement, le fardeau sera aussi lourd et le système aussi facile à détruire que si c'était une imposition gratuite sur le peuple chaque année pour les maintenir.

La condition actuelle du trésor permet à la lé-gislature d'éteindre immédiatement la dette de l'Etat, échéant en 1855 et 1857, au lieu de la diminuer par paiement quatriennaux, ainsi qu'il est stipulé dans l'acte No 279 de 1853 ; de placer sur de bonnes garanties, portant intérêt, le surplus du fonds affecté aux levées et desséchements ou du fonds des terres marécageuses, et d'affecter une somme de cent mille piastres annuellement au rachat des bons émis par l'Etat, en paiement de sa dette, et aussi pour représenter le montant qu'elle avait en dépôt et dont il a fait usage.

Les avantages directs et indirects d'une pareille mesure sont incalculables ; il en résulterait une économie pour l'Etat, en mettant le trésor à l'abri du paiement des intérêts combinés pour des dépenses inutiles, et inspirerait de la confiance dans la pureté de notre législation.

Dans les deux années qui viennent de s'écouler, plusieurs projets d'une grande importance et qui paraissent, jusqu'à présent, réussir, ont été adoptés dans le but d'augmenter la richesse et la prospérité de l'Etat, mais ces projets seront plus ou moins sujets à réussir ou à manquer, en proportion de l'augmentation ou de la diminution du crédit de l'Etat.

La législature de 1853 a adopté les mesures qu'elle a cru les plus sages pour retirer l'Etat de la gêne où elle l'a trouvé. C'est à celle-ci de continuer ce que l'autre a déjà si bien commencé, et le trésor de l'Etat ne pourra plus être épuisé dans aucune circonstance.

Je suis heureux de pouvoir vous informer que la perception des taxes et leur versement dans le trésor de l'Etat ont été faites beaucoup plus promptement que les années précédentes. Le nombre des collecteurs de taxes de l'année dernière qui n'ont pas réglé dans le temps voulu, n'est pas grand et la plupart de ceux-là ont fourni des raisons qui m'ont satisfait.

Le Shérif de la Pointe Coupée et le Collecteur de taxes de la paroisse des Rapides sont morts durant l'été. J'ai appris il y a fort peu de temps qu'on n'avait pas nommé de Collecteur pour la paroisse de Vermillon ; mais le Shérif de cette paroisse a entrepris cette collecte. Le Shérif actuel de St. Landry a aussi entrepris la collecte des taxes de cette paroisse, qui sont dûes pour les années 1851 et 1852.

Le coût de l'assiette et de la perception des taxes étonnera sans doute la Législature.

Le montant total des taxes d'Etat d'un millième, et de capitation imposées l'année dernière était de - - $650,000

Le coût de l'assiette et de la perception de ces mêmes taxes s'élève :—

Pour asseoir la taxe,	28,000
Commissions, -	40,000
Déductions, -	44,000
		$112,000

ou à raison de 17 pour cent, taux énorme qui n'est payé nul autre part qu'ici.

La loi qui autorise les déductions sur preuves fournies par les collecteurs doit être amendée.

Les déductions qui ont été faites l'année dernières, sont comme suit : pour la paroisse d'Ouest Feliciana, payant une taxe de $15,729, $36 seulement—pour la paroisse de Plaquemines, payant une taxe de $10,400, $30 à peu près—pour la paroisse de St. Jean Baptiste, payant une taxe de $9,000, $5 à peu près—pour la paroisse Iberville, payant $19,000, moins de $100—tandis que pour la paroisse Jefferson, y compris le 4me district de la Nouvelle Orléans, payant une taxe de $81,828, le montant de la liste de déductions s'élève à $14,000—pour district de la Nouvelle Orléans, payant taxe de $87,000, les déductions sont $3,000.

Un pareil résultat ne peut être qu'à la loi, qui est défectueuse permet aux officiers de l'interpréter manière. L'officier honnête, intelligent zélé n'a pas besoin d'une loi restrictive faire son devoir ; cette loi n'est que pour ceux qui n'ont pas d'

Très peu de temps après la promulgation de la loi de 1853, concernant les pensionnaires se sont présentés tiré le montant total de l'allocation, que le semestre dûs au 31 décembre encore été payé.

Je ne crois pas que les dispositions loi de 1853, relatives à la preuve, aient lioré la loi de 1852, qui était aussi fait que possible. Une allocation de piastres ne serait pas de trop pour toutes les réclamations qui seront faites vertu de la loi.

D'après le système qui a existé jusqu'en 1852, les réclamations ont rarement la somme de $6,000 annuellement. étaient examinées d'abord par un comité la Législature, puis ensuite par les Chambres ; et je suis convaincu qu'il qu'il y ait eu quelques individus qui obtenu ses pensions sans les mériter nombre sera toujours moindre de cette un système qu'on pourra adopter.

La 31ème section de l'acte pour le département du trésor fait un devoir l'Auditeur, toutes les fois qu'il n'aura émis de mandats pour le paiement d'une réclamation reconnue par la Législature, de rapporter ce fait à la prochaine session de la Législature avec les raisons à l'appui ; en conséquence, j'informe la Législature que Avery Breed a fait présenter un compte s'élevant à la somme de $100, pour services rendus par lui dans des affaires criminelles dont le paiement a été ordonné par l'acte No. 73 de 1848. J'ai refusé d'émettre un mandat pour cette réclamation parce que Shérif est concussionnaire et doit à l'Etat une somme beaucoup plus forte que celle que l'Etat lui doit.

MM. Van Winkle, Butler et Grant, commissaires des terres marécageuses ont aussi présenté une réclamation de $1,500, reconnue par la loi No 328 "pour améliorer et dessécher les terres marécageuses et inondées qui ont été données à l'Etat", aucune allocation spéciale n'ayant été faite dans l'acte, j'ai refusé d'émettre un mandat pour le paiement de cette somme; mais le 21 de juin je leur donnai un certificat constatant que la somme était dûe. Comme mon refus d'émettre des mandats pour des réclamations reconnues par cette acte a occasionné une correspondance entre moi et les commissaires, et comme ce refus est une opposition à l'intention de la Législature, je transmets ci-jointe, une copie de cette correspondance dans laquelle on trouvera tout au long les raisons qui m'ont porté à refuser. Voici, en peu de mots, la substance de mes raisons: L'article 94 de la Constitution défend de tirer du trésor aucune somme d'argent sans une "allocation spéciale" à cet effet. Cette prohibition s'applique à chaque pouvoir du gouvernement et à chaque officier de l'Etat et particulièrement à celui qui est directement chargé de tirer de l'argent du trésor. Une allocation spéciale signifie une destination d'une somme spéciale et non un montant incertain pour un objet spécial, et la Constitution défend, en outre, de faire aucune allocation d'argent pour un terme de plus de deux années. L'acte dont il est question établit un système de réclamations des terres marécageuses, fixe le salaire des officiers et établit la manière d'exécuter les travaux publics, et certainement propose de dépenser les fonds publics; mais n'ordonne pas de payer. D'après cet acte, doit-on dépenser et tirer du trésor le montant total des ventes des terres marécageuses, alors en caisse, ou bien le montant en caisse et toutes les sommes qui seront versées plus tard? Le montant reçu l'année dernière s'élève à plus de $200,000 et il y avait en caisse, alors, $80,000.

Supposer que la Législature avait l'intention d'autoriser, d'une manière aussi nouvelle, une dépense aussi forte, serait l'accuser d'avoir dévié de la ligne que lui a tracée la Constitution, ce qui ne serait pas un compliment; Et, si l'acte fait une allocation d'une piastre, il alloue le montant total. Il ne fixe aucune limite. Cet article de la Constitution paraîtra plus claire si l'on se réfère aux raisons sur lesquelles il est basé.

Cette disposition de la loi n'existait pas avant l'adoption de la Constitution de 1845. Ce qui souvent était cause que d'anciennes réclamations aussi bien que les nouvelles qui étaient faites en vertu d'anciennes lois, génaient considérablement le trésor, en même temps qu'elles jetaient de la confusion dans ses opérations financières.

Le but de l'article 94 de la Constitution, en exigeant que chaque allocation de fonds publics soit décrétée par chaque Législature, est d'exposer l'objet pour lequel elle est faite; d'exiger, en effet, que chaque Législature qui aura fait une allocation, ratifie et sanctionne de nouveau la loi ou la réclamation qui doit être exécutée ou satisfaite avec l'allocation. C'est pour donnner à la Législature, à des périodes régulières et rapprochées, connaissance des réclamations en litige, et le pouvoir de les contrôler.

Si les termes de l'acte autorisent de continuer, au-delà de deux ans, ce qui y est mentionné, et si cet acte est interprété comme faisant une allocation, alors une singulière anomalie se présente: une loi qui est en pleine force et vigueur dans toutes ses dispositions, peut être cependant amendée dans les dispositions les plus essentielles, par une simple interprétation! On admettra que celle des dispositions de cette loi qui fait une allocation d'argent se trouve abrogée, à la fin des deux années, en vertu de l'article 94 de la Constitution. Laquelle donc est-ce? Est-ce une, plusieurs ou toutes? La vérité est, que toutes les dispositions de cette loi sont en pleine force, et les termes de l'acte démontrent clairement qu'on avait l'intention d'établir, d'une manière permanante, un système général de réclamations des terres marécageuses, non limité à deux ou à vingt ans; et la dernière ressource de ceux qui maintiennent qu'une allocation est comprise dans cet acte, est de prétendre que le pouvoir qui a fait cette allocation, le pouvoir le plus grand et le mieux gardé de tous ceux de l'Etat, a été exercé d'une manière implicite, tacitement, en vertu de dispositions qui ne peuvent être citées ou désignées.

Plusieurs dispositions de lois existantes requièrent le Trésorier et l'Auditeur de tenir un compte du montant de chaque allocation spéciale faite par la loi; du montant payé; et de faire voir dans leurs rapports, à de certaines époques, la balance non dépensée; d'après ces dispositions l'Auditeur ne peut tirer un mandat, ou le Trésorier ne peut payer un mandat lorsqu'une allocation spéciale n'aura pas été faite. Ces dispositions fixent et interprètent l'expression "allocation spéciale", employée par la Constitution, comme étant spéciale en somme aussi bien qu'en objet.

Pour terminer je citerai l'opinion de celui qui a organisé ce bureau, mon prédécesseur, sur cet article de la Constitution, et je pense que j'aurai fait voir que ma conduite dans cette circonstance est d'accord avec les termes de la Constitution, si bien exprimés si faciles à comprendre ; qu'elle est appuyée sur des raisons qui ont fait adopter cette disposition de la Constitution ; qu'elle est, en outre, appuyée sur l'interprétation uniforme qui en a été donnée par tous les pouvoirs du gouvernement, Décider autrement serait prétendre que la Législature avait l'intention d'allouer la somme énorme de $300,000 pour faire une expérience ; qu'il était sous-entendu que cette loi avait une force tacite, silencieuse et sous-entendu pendant deux ans, qu'elle ne pouvait avoir après ce temps ; ses dispositions étant les mêmes après qu'avant, enfin, si j'avais donné une décision contraire, j'aurais agi contrairement au serment que j'ai prêté aussi bien que j'aurais détruit les limites qui ont été établies par la Constitution et les lois entre le pouvoir qui fait l'allocation et celui qui est chargé de la payer.

Extrait du rapport de C. Woodruff à la Législature de 1848.

"Dès le premier jour où ce bureau commença ses opérations, (le 19 mars 1847) afin de prévenir tout obstacle ou interruption dans les affaires publiques, l'Auditeur, pour ce qui concernait les paiements, a suivi la même méthode qui avait été adoptée dans le département de la trésorerie jusqu'à cette époque. Les affaires financières du gouvernement étaient dans un état de transition de l'ancien système au nouveau, en vertu de notre Constitution actuelle.

Un changement important avait été fait relativement à lemploi des fonds publics. L'article 93 de la Constitution porte: "Nulle somme ne sera tirée du trésor si ce n'est en vertu d'allocations expresses faites par la loi; et aucune allocation ne sera faite pour plus de deux ans. Des doutes ont existé parmi les membres de la Législature quant à la vraie interprétation de cette clause de la Constitution jusqu'à ce que cet article fut examiné dans ce bureau.

La paie même des membres de la Législature avait été tirée journellement et sans qu'aucune allocation spéciale eut été faite pour cet objet, jusqu'à ce qu'une session fut donnée, et je crois, appartient à tous, que la vraie interprétation de la clause de la Constitution, requérant que de la Législature affectant une somme spéciale d'argent, du fonds général ou de quelque autre fonds dans le trésor, au paiement de toutes les réclamations contre l'Etat, afin qu'elles pussent être payées limitent le montant desdites réclamations en argent établi et fixé par la loi."

Les lois de la Législature de 1853 autorisant l'émission des bons en faveur des Compagnies de Chemin de fer, font un devoir à l'Auditeur, dans les trente jours après qu'il aura reçu les divers rôles de taxes à lui faire et d'imposer une taxe nécessaire pour payer les intérêts échus dans l'année. Jusqu'à présent reçu que les rôles de trente paroisses, et les dispositions de cette loi pourront être mises à exécution à moins qu'on ne passe des lois plus rigoureuses pour forcer les Asséeurs et les Recorders à délivrer les rôles dans ce bureau. En vertu de la loi, la taxe ne peut être fixée avant l'exception de tous les rôles. Probablement il vaudrait mieux changer la loi de manière à autoriser l'Auditeur, le premier de février, de prendre pour base le montant du dernier rôle d'une paroisse, dans le bureau pour fixer la taxe, en l'absence de celui de l'année précédente.

BUREAU DES COMMISSAIRES DES TERRES MARECAGEUSES,
Bâton Rouge le 16 juin 1853.

L'Hon. LOUIS BORDELON, Auditeur des Comptes Publics.

Monsieur: Les soussignés, nommés Commissaires des terres marécageuses, en vertu l'acte approuvé le 30 avril 1853, désirant mplir fidèlement tous les devoirs qui leur t imposés, voudraient savoir si vous vous sidérez autorisé à contrôler les mandats is par eux en leurs capacité, et soumet- t à votre considération les sections 18 et du dit acte, sur lesquelles ils bâsent leurs voir de tirer sur le Fonds des terres maré- geuses. Ils sont unanimement d'opinion e ces sections de la loi constituent une al- ation spéciale, en vertu de l'article 94 de Constitution de l'Etat.

Respectueusement
Vos devoués serviteurs,

[Signé] S. VAN WICKLE, HUGH GRANT,
J. W. BUTLER,
Commissaires des terres marécageuses.

BUREAU DE L'AUDITEUR,
Bâton Rouge le 17 juin 1853.

Messieurs: J'ai reçu, hier soir, votre note u 16 courant, dans lequel vous me deman- ez si je me considère autorisé à contrôler s mandats tirés par vous, sur le trésor de Etat, en votre capacité de Commissaires, n vertu de l'acte de l'Assemblée Générale, pprouvé le 30 avril 1853, intitulé "Acte our améliorer et dessécher les terres maré- ageuses et inondées, données à l'Etat de la ouisiane par un acte du Congrès intitulé Acte pour aider l'Etat de la Louisiane à lessécher les terres marécageuses y situées," pprouvé le 2 mars 1849, et vous me sou- mettez les sections 18 et 20 du dit acte sur esquelles vous bâsez votre droit de tirer ces mandats.

De plus, vous dites que vous êtes "unanimement d'opinion que les sections aux quelles vous me référez, constitutent une allocation spéciale, conformément à l'article 94 de la Constitution de l'Etat."

Je n'hésite pas à dire que, en vertu des deux sections de la loi que vous citez, les mandats que vous pouvez tirer comme commissaires peuvent être "contrôlés," mais votre principal objet est de savoir si ces mandats peuvent être payés.

L'article 94 de notre Constitution actuelle qui est précisément le même que celui de l'article 93 de la Constitution d e 1845, est ainsi conçu: "nulle somme ne sera tirée du trésor si ce n'est en vertu d'allocations expresses faites par la loi; et aucune allocation ne sera faite pour plus de deux ans. Il sera publié tous les ans un état des recettes et dépenses des déniers publics, de la manière que prescrira la loi."

L'interprétation donnée à cette article de la Constitution, depuis que ce bureau a été établi jusqu'à ce ce moment est: qu'aucune somme d'argent ne pourra être tirée du trésor si ce n'est par allocation spéciale et distincte, c'est-à-dire: une somme d'argent spéciale fixée par la loi.

Les deux sections de la loi auxquelles vous appelez mon attention et sur lesquelles vous semblez bâser votre conclusion, sont ainsi conçues:

"Section 18. Que tous les travaux exécutés et toutes les dépenses encourues en vertu du présent acte, seront payés par les Commissaires, sur tous fonds du trésor de l'Etat qui proviennent des ventes des terres marécageuses. Bien entendu que les fonds qui proviennent de la vente des terres marécageuses et inondées, seront répartis entre les différents districts, selon la proportion suivante, savoir: pour le premier district, deux-huitièmes; pour le second district, trois-huitièmes; pour le troisième district, trois-huitièmes."

"Section 20. Que toutes les dépenses occasionnées d'après cet acte, seront payées par l'Auditeur, sur le mandat des Commissaires; Bien entendu que nul mandat ne sera payé, à moins d'avoir été signé par une majorité des Commissaires."

Ces deux sections établissent seulement la manière de tirer du trésor l'argent pour payer les travaux éxécutés et les dépenses encourues, et de répartir cet argent entre les divers districts, et désignent le fonds sur lequel cet argent sera tiré—ce qui peut être considéré comme une allocation faite ou à faire. Mais je ne vois pas comment on peut les interpréter comme constituant une allocation d'argent, en vertu de la disposition de la Constitution. Elles établissent une réclamation contre l'Etat, mais ne pourvoient pas au paiement.

La 19me section de l'acte No. 18, intitulé acte pour établir et organiser le Department du Trésor, approuvé le 26 janvier 1847, porte "Qu'il sera du devoir de l'Auditeur de préparer, condenser et soumettre à la Législature à l'ouverture de chaque session régulière, Premiérement un état complet et détaillé, &c.

5. Un tableau exhibant séparément le montant total de chaque allocation du déniers publics, décrétée par la loi, les sommes qui auront été payées sur les dites allocations, et le reste, (s'il en existe) qui n'aura pas été dépensé.

Il est évident que ceux qui ont décrété cette loi, savaient très bien quelles étaient les exgences de la Constitution au sujet des allocations et savaient aussi qu'il ne pouvait exister d'allocation là où la somme d'argent n'était pas fixée d'une manière spécifique, autrement, comment pourait on rapporter à la Législature "un tableau exhibant séparément le montant total de chaque allocation" et la balance (s'il en existe) qui n'aurait pas été dépensée. Où est le montant spécifié soit dans la 18me ou la 20me section sur lesquelles vous bâsez votre opinion? et comment peut on se conformer à cette loi qui est impérative pour l'Auditeur, si votre opinion est correcte? Pour vous prouver que mon opinion est correcte, j'appellerai votre attention sur un fait exactement semblable. En 1848, la Législature négligea de faire une allocation pour les écoles publiques. Les lois relatives aux écoles publiques et au revenu, imposent une taxe spécialement pour les écoles publiques, et le montant forme un fonds distinct et séparé dans le trésor de l'Etat, de la même manière que le fonds des terres marécageuses. De plus, la loi établit le mode de repartir cet argent entre les paroisses de l'Etat, la manière de tirer cet argent du trésor par les surintendants de paroisse, pour leurs salaires, enfin règle tout ce qui est nécessaire pour mettre à exécution le système actuel de nos écoles. Tous ceux qui n'avaient pas examiné ce sujet, étaint sous l'impression qu'aucune allocation que celle qui était mentionnée la loi n'était nécessaire. Ce sujet pleinement examiné et, comme la Législature ne s'assemblait que tous les ans, le Gouverneur de l'Etat, devoir convoquer une session extraordinaire Législature, à l'effet de faire une allocation de la manière établie par la Constitution. Tandis que je vous cite ce cas, je vous réfèrerai en même temps à la Législature entière de l'Etat au sujet de Le salaire même d'un officier, bien fixé par la loi, et que le mode de soit établi, ne peut être payé sans allocation en soit faite, ainsi que vous rez en vous référant au bill d'allocation est décrété à chaque session de la ture.

Pour remédier à cet inconvénient que possible, dans tous les cas où lorsque la loi reconnait une réclamation tre l'Etat (comme dans ce cas) cune allocation n'a été faite pour la 32me section de l'acte déjà cité "acte pour établir et organiser le ment du Trésor," porte, "que toutes fois que la loi aura reconnu comme une réelamation contre l'Etat, et le paiement d'une somme d'argent cun fonds spécial n'aura été voté satisfaire, il sera du devoir de l'Auditeur la vérifier et la régler, et de donner à la sonne qui l'a fait valoir, si la demande en est faite, et sous le seéau de son un certificat de la somme à laquelle s'élève, et d'en donner avis à l'Assemblée Générale dans le plus bref délai possible.

Dans cette occasion, mon opinion arrêtée est que mon pouvoir ne peut dre audelà des limites établies par la nière section de la loi citée plus haut qu'aucune somme d'argent ne peut être du Trésor par les 'Commissaires des marécageuses" avant que l'Assemblée rale ne fasse une allocation conformément l'article 94 de la Constitution.

Il ne m'appartient pas de dire ce que Législature avait l'intention de faire, je dois me conformer à ses décrets tels sont.

Je suis respectueusement
Votre ob't. serv't,
LOUIS BORDELON
Auditeur.
